TAILOR-BROKER TELLS 'INSIDE' OF CLERK'S TRADES

Aids in the Probe of 2 Million Shortage.

The inside story of how Walter E. Wolf, head of the coupon department of the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company, used more than $1,000,000 worth of purloined securities in his speculative deals with one broker was told last night.

The authority for the story is a tailor who turned broker and who handled the admitted $1,000,000 of bonds and stock as collateral for Wolf's marginal stock deals. The tailor-broker is David D. Weiss, owner of the Neumann tailor shop at 309 South Clark street.

Last Night's Rumors.

Earlier it had been rumored that a "mystery man" and perhaps two other men were involved as agents for Wolf in the huge stock deals. It had also been reported that Wolf's peculations might amount to much more than the unofficially estimated figure of $2,000,000 and that perhaps half a dozen brokerage houses faced legal action if it were found that they had handled Wolf's accounts knowing that Wolf was an employé of a bank. Brokerage houses are not permitted to carry accounts for bank employés under the rank of vice president.

Wolf is now in custody of Toplis & Harding, local representatives of Lloyd's of London, which has insured the Continental bank for $2,000,000 against loss growing out of such a case as this. Officials of Toplis & Hardi g declined to discuss the case last night.

Knew Wolf For 25 Years.

"I knew Wolf when we were young fellows together twenty-five years ago," he said. "It was three years ago that he first came to me. That was when he learned I had become a broker. I had purchased a membership on the Board of Trade for $20,000.

"Wolf asked me to trade some bonds for him. He told me he didn't want his name used.

"I bought stock for him on margin at his request. Sometimes Wolf was a bear. Sometimes he was a bull. Sometimes he'd see me once a week, and sometimes every day."

Wolf Furnished Bonds.

Weiss was asked what securities Wolf produced in his margin dealings. The tailor-broker replied that he generally furnished bonds.

"At one time he gave me $25,000 in bonds as collateral for stock purchases," said Weiss.

"In what amounts of stocks did he deal?" was asked.

"Generally 500 to 1,000 shares," was the response.

Weiss was asked his opinion as to the total amount of stock he had purchased on margin for Wolf.

"I can't say actually because my records are now in the hands of the bank auditors," said the broker.

"Do you think the amount of bonds you handled for Wolf would be in excess of $1,000,000?" Weiss was asked.

"I do not know at this time if it would be more than that," he replied.

Wiped Out in 1929.

Wolf, he said, once made a big winning on a bull market. He didn't take his winnings, however, and consequently was wiped out in the big 1929 crash.

"It didn't seem to bother him," Weiss explained. "Once I said to him: 'Wolf, this is getting serious, isn't it? Don't you think this has gone far enough?' I told him this after a number of losing operations."

Weiss paused a moment. Then he said:

"Wolf merely smiled and told me not to worry. 'That's all right,' he told me. 'We'll make a big killing yet.'"

Never Took a Profit.

But the "big killing" never came. According to Weiss, not once in his three years of business dealings with Wolf did the latter collect a profit. Regularly Wolf would approach him with a batch of securities. "Dave," he'd say, according to Weiss, "will you buy me 500 or 1,000 shares of this stock or that stock, and here's the security."

Weiss said he would accept the securities, and take them to Farroll Brothers, 141 West Jackson boulevard.

PORTO RICAN CITY SWEPT BY FLOOD; 200 PERSONS DIE

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Sept. 3.—(AP)—Floods, rising from heavy rainfall, destroyed a large amount of property at Ponce today and took a toll of many lives.

No accurate estimate of the number of persons drowned could be made tonight, although the newspaper La Democracia today placed the number at 200. Police, the National Guard, and other government agencies who searched for bodies all day were reported tonight to have recovered thirty.

The chief of police at Ponce said it was impossible to get to the other side of the Portuguese river, down which the principal flood came, but it was probable additional bodies had been found there. The flood came suddenly during the early hours of the morning, following upon a downpour during the night, sweeping houses and huts along the river banks toward the Caribbean sea. Many houses were jammed against the bridge leading to the harbor front at Ponce and some bodies were recovered there today. It was believed others were carried out into the Caribbean.

Storm Heads for Cuba.

HAVANA, Sept. 3.—(AP)—Scientists at Belem observatory tonight said that the tropical storm which has been slowly moving across the Atlantic in the vicinity of the Dominican republic was moving westward over Haiti tonight with moderate speed. They said that it seemed possible that it might touch the southern extremity of Cuba but the statement minimized possible danger. Earlier today the national observatory had predicted that the storm might strike Cuba in Oriente province.

The Lindberghs will return to Tokio Saturday. They have en engagement Sunday with Baroness Shidehara, wife of the foreign minister.

Laborer Sues Ex-Kaiser for $35 Balance of Wages

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Sept. 3.—The former kaiser was sued in Potsdam court today by Franz Voss, a farm laborer, for $35 balance of wages. Voss until recently was employed on a royal estate at Bornstedt. He was summarily dismissed when he was taken ill.

Balks Heir's Fight to Get $1,900,000

Acts construed by a court as violating the terms of his father's will have balked Vincent Kerens, 55 years old, 5000 East End avenue, in getting possession of $1,900,000 bequeathed to him conditionally. The United States Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis yesterday held he had violated the will of his father, the late Richard C. Kerens, former ambassador to Austria-Hungary, which provided he would receive the amount on the condition that he prove his sobriety and good behavior over a period of five years.

The decision permits Kerens to file a new application for the sum if he can show that his conduct has been exemplary over a more recent period of five years. Meanwhile he will continue to receive an income from his share of the estate. The income is said to be in excess of $12,000 a year.

Estate of $10,000,000 Left.

The elder Kerens died fourteen years ago, leaving an estate of $10,000,000. After providing for his widow and leaving $200,000 to a son, Richard C. Jr., an incompetent, his will divided the remainder of the estate between three children, Vincent, Mrs. Madeline Kenna of New York and Mrs. Gladys Colkt of Philadelphia.

The daughters were given their shares outright, but Vincent's share was left in trust with the St. Louis Union Trust company. Under the trust he received an income and could claim the principal when he had passed "five consecutive years of sobriety and good conduct."

In 1928 Kerens filed his claim in the federal court in St. Louis. He was suported by the trust company. The five year period covered by the claim was from Jan. 24, 1923, to Jan. 24, 1928. The sisters challenged his claim on the ground that his divorce and remarriage had not been good conduct under the religious standards of the elder Kerens, who was a devout Roman Catholic. They also charged that Vincent was arrested in a Los Angeles hotel with a Mrs. Mae Linn. Kerens presented an affidavit to defend Mrs. Linn. During the trial he admitted the falsity of the document. He won a divorce in 1924 and married Mrs. Linn.

Claim Upheld by Judge.

Kerens' claim was upheld by Federal Judge Charles B. Faris in St. Louis, who held that the will did not impose religious standards of behavior. The sisters appealed. The reversal of Judge Faris by the higher court disregarded the religious issue.

The high court held that Kerens had not shown the reformation which his father desired. The opinion cited the false affidavit and a divorce deal with his first wife as grounds for reversal. Kerens, it was charged by his sisters, obtained the divorce secretly, silencing his first wife's objections by promise of a $400,000 property settlement contingent on his receiving the trust.

Kerens could not be seen last night at his home, where he lives with his second wife and two adopted children. Mrs. Kerens said he was ill. She refused to comment on the decision or possibility of an appeal to the United States Supreme court. Kerens is a broker.

Public Buys U.S. Bond Issue of 800 Million

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—Reports to the treasury department disclosed that the 800 million dollar bond issue offered to the public last Saturday has been heavily oversubscribed. The extent of the oversubscription was not made known, as the books will be held open by the treasury for a few more days to permit the whole country to participate in the loan issue.

The eagerness of the public to snap up government bond issues even at low interest rates served to strengthen the position of those administration leaders who have advised the President against recommending a tax increase. As a result it is highly possible that the White House will offer another bond issue in late November to raise funds to run the government until next March.

Hoover Fiscal Not Ready.

Although the Hoover fiscal program for the future still is in too nebulous a state to be outlined, present indications are that no attempt will be made to enact additional taxes which would be collected during the balance of the current fiscal year. If new tax legislation is offered, it appears more likely that it would not affect incomes made during the current calendar year.

Administration officials continued today to study the various factors of the government's financial situation without reaching any conclusion as to the best course of action to pursue. The President thus far has not decided what course of action he will take in handling the budget estimates for the 1933 fiscal year. No decision as to whether he will approve a program starting the navy on the way toward London treaty strength has been reached by Mr. Hoover, according to his advisers.

As a matter of fact, cabinet officials still are in the dark as to whether they are going to be forced to accept a big slash in their expenditures during the balance of this year and in their estimates for the 1933 year. Budget officials have taken the estimates to the President, but thus far have received no limiting figure for the 1933 budget.

Ponder Army-Navy Slashes.

The President was represented today as undecided between enforcing strict economies as an economy move or permitting expenditures to remain at a rather high rate so as to take no chance of retarding business recovery. One group of his advisers favors slashing the army and navy appropriations in order to balance the budget. Another group takes the position that by cutting the navy building program and slashing army expenditures the ranks of the unemployed would be increased.

At the present moment the treasury has a 400 million dollar deficit piled up during the first two months of the current fiscal year.

UNION WINDOW WASHERS MAY STRIKE TUESDAY

Unless the Window Cleaning Contractors' association agrees before Tuesday noon to maintain the wage scale of $1.25 an hour now paid to union window washers all members of the window washers' union employed by the association will go on strike. Approximately 500 men, cleaning the windows of most downtown buildings, will be affected.

Charles F. Wills, president of the union and a member of the state industrial commission, issued the ultimatum to the contractors' association last night, following a special meeting of the union at 30 North Wells street. The contractor's association, through its president, Alta Mahru, has demanded a wage reduction of 25 cents

STATE FREES $11,000,000 FOR WORK ON ROADS

Spend $3,500,000 in Chicago Area.

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—The governor's arbitration board this afternoon fixed the minimum rate for wages to be paid on highway construction in Illinois. The decision makes it possible for the state to award $11,000,000 worth of road contracts this month, projects which have been delayed most of the construction season by protests brought under the "prevailing wage act" passed by the general assembly early this summer.

In the metropolitan area the board verified the union scale as the prevailing rate of pay. On Tuesday bids will be opened on $3,450,000 worth of road work in Cook, Du Page and Lake counties.

Work for Hundreds.

Coming earlier in the season, when there would have been more paving weather, the projects would have given employment to 11,250 men. But even at this late date hundreds of men will get jobs before snow flies.

With the wage controversy settled, the state can proceed to award contracts unless another protest is filed before the bids are opened. It is expected that bids for some of the $7,650,000 downstate contracts will be asked Tuesday when those for the Chicago area are advertised for. Due to the short time before cold weather, when road work is not possible, it is uncertain how much will be done on the projects.

Taxpayers File Protest.

The state, in its original advertisement for bids on these metropolitan jobs, had used the union scale. The protests against the rate in the three Chicagoland counties were brought by ten taxpayers of Little Egypt after union labor leaders had tied up downstate construction with protests against the scale fixed by the state in these agricultural sections. Although brought by downstate residents, the complaint that the union rate in the metropolitan area was too high gained some support from commercial and civic organizations, who professed to be acting in the interest of the motoring public that pays the road bills.

The arbitration board acted summarily on the metropolitan area cases, ignoring the request of the civic federation for an opportunity to present evidence next week. Representatives of the federation met in Springfield with other groups last week to plan their case.

At the meeting were men of the Illinois Agriculture association, the Illinois Association of Real Estate Boards, the Illinois Manufacturers' association, the Chicago Association of Commerce, Illinois Automobile Trades association, Chicago Motor club, Chicago Auto Trade association, Chicago Real Estate board, and the Cook County Real Estate board.

Vote to Sustain Union Wage.

Voting to sustain the union scale, without hearing either the civic federations or the taxpayers who signed the protest, were Otto C. Ottens, labor's representative on the board, and H. W. Hartman, the carpenters' representative. Ray Wantz, the third member, who has been designated as the public's representative, protested without avail against such action.

The board raised the downstate rate of wages twenty per cent, boosting the cost of roads about eight per cent. The rates outside of the metropolitan area, and excepting Peoria, Tazewell and La Salle counties, represented a compromise between the judgment of the department of public works and the demand of union labor, a compromise motivated by a desire to relieve unemployment.

P. F. Sullivan, president of the Chicago Building Trades council, pleaded with the board to dismiss the petitions summarily, contending that they were brought for the sole purpose of tying up union labor jobs while union labor officials were blocking downstate construction with a blanket protest that excepted the Chicago district.

It was not brought out at the hearing, but an engineer who has been attending the sessions estimated that the wage increase will raise the cost of the $7,650,000 worth of roads $612,000. Ray Wantz of Rockford, a member of the board, did point out, however, that the motoring public, which pays the road bill with gasoline tax and license fees, was not represented at the proceedings.

In the counties of Peoria, Tazewell, and La Salle, the department of public works refused to approve a rate for common labor higher than 45 cents an hour, while organized labor insisted upon the union scale of 75 cents an hour. The board raised the rate from the 35 cents originally fixed by the state to the 45 cents, which the department finally approved.

40 Cents an Hour Minimum.

The minimum for common labor for any county in the state under the decision was 40 cents an hour, and this was applied quite generally throughout the agricultural sections, while 45 cents was the new common labor figure in the more populous downstate counties. Under the original advertisements, 35 cents was used generally for common labor. The new scale, with proportionate increases for other types of labor, range up to 70 cents for mechanics and machine operators.

Sponsor Blanket Protests.

The Federation of Labor, headed by R. G. Soderstrom, president, sponsored the blanket protests which blocked downstate construction pending a decision from the appeal board. Soderstrom said he was disappointed by the decision, but he indicated that he will not exercise his legal right to appeal to the courts, since to do so further would delay the work.

In the meantime, a taxpayer's suit filed yesterday, seeking the nullification of the prevailing wage act, is tentatively scheduled for a preliminary hearing in the Circuit court here on Monday, Labor day.

JURORS INDICT 3 AS EVADERS OF GASOLINE TAX

Three alleged gasoline bootleggers were named in indictments returned by the August grand jury yesterday upon the conclusion of its work. At the same time it was learned that evidence against a number of others would be presented to the next grand jury by Assistant State's Attorney John Holman and John O'Hora.

Those indicated yesterday are Abe Allen, president of the Midway Refining company; J. F. Connors, a gasoline distributor, and J. C. McGuin, president of Oils, Inc.

Allen is charged with perjury in connection with testimony in his trial as a tax dodger last March, at which he was acquitted. He is also charged in three other indictments of eighteen counts each, with failing to file tax returns with the state department of finance, failure to pay taxes, and failure to obtain a distributor's license.

Connors, who operates three companies, is alleged to have shipped eight carloads of gasoline into the state without a license and without paying the state tax of 3 cents a gallon. McGuin was indicted last winter on charges of violating the motor fuel laws and the prosecutors declared he had evaded the law continuously since then. He also is charged with failure to pay taxes and to obtain a distributor's license.

Acting Police Commissioner Alcock yesterday joined the war on gasoline bootleggers by ordering all captains to instruct their men to be on the lookout for gasoline tank wagons which do not bear any designations of ownership.

TRY TO IDENTIFY PHONE BANDIT IN 'ASYLUM' CASE

The Chicago Crime commission yesterday started an investigation to determine if Otto Schoenberg, 35 years old, 6440 Ellis avenue, who was arrested Wednesday by the police as a burglar, is the same man who in 1928 escaped prosecution on seven charges of larceny on the pretense that he was in an insane asylum in California. The crime commission records indicate that he is the same person, but the police are asked to check the bureau of identification records to make sure.

Schoenberg, who is described by the police as the telephone burglar, is held for ransacking at least four homes. His method was to tamper with wire outside a building and then go to an apartment, where he would pose as a telephone repairman. While unobserved he would ransack the apartment.

The crime commission records show that Otto Schoenberg, alias Bob Carleton, was first arrested in 1923 on five charges. He was sent to the penitentiary on one of the charges and paroled one year later. In 1928 he was again indicted on seven charges and all the cases were dismissed on April 9, 1930, on the representation that Schoenberg was in the asylum.

FINED IN EVICTION CASE.

Five Negroes, arrested on Aug. 21 at 5058 South State street when they tried to move furniture back into an apartment from which the tenant had been evicted for not paying his rent, were fined $200 yesterday by Judge Joseph A. Graber. They are Felix Greenway, Elan Banks, Ernest Preston, Charles Morgan, and Albert Smith.

WAGE LAW ENDS HOPE OF OPENING SEAWAY IN 1933

Construction Work on 5 Bridges Tied Up.

Chicago's hopes that the opening of the Illinois waterway might be one of the big features of World's Fair year went glimmering yesterday. This was revealed by Benjamin H. Miller, supervisor of Illinois waterway construction.

The prevailing Illinois wage act, which tied up $11,000,000 worth of highway construction until the ruling of the governor's wage arbitration board yesterday, has just as effectively prevented any progress on the waterway at this time, Mr. Miller declared.

Protest Wage Scale.

On Aug. 25, bids were to have been opened on five bridges, to be built at an estimated cost of $1,017,000. The advertisement for the bids specified that wage scales be based on what federal contractors were paying on similar work. Immediately protests were filed by representatives of the unions which sponsored the wage law. Automatically, under the new law, all work was tied up until Gov. Emmerson appoints an appeal board to hear the protests. The governor has not yet acted.

"Because of the unemployment situation we had hurried our plans for these five bridges," said Mr. Miller. "If it had not been for the delay caused by the new wage law, contracts would now have been awarded and actual field direction would have been started in November.

"Our plans were progressing smoothly up to that moment. The waterway could have been opened to navigation in April, 1933. Illinois and Chicago could have proclaimed to the world as a feature of its World's Fair that the connecting link between the great lakes and the Mississippi river was at last a reality.

Can't Now Resume Work.

"With the present delay, there is no telling when we can resume work. We've done everything in our power to hasten completion of the waterway, and we have coöperated with the federal government in every way."

The federal government, he pointed out, is going smoothly ahead with the completion of its part of the waterway program because it is not affected by the state wage law.

L. D. Cornish, chief engineer in the waterway department, estimated that an average of 250 men would be kept working for eight months if the wage law had not delayed construction work.

Tells of Union Demand.

"And there are 250 men in this state who would be glad to get the jobs," he remarked. "An example of the unfair demands of the unions is afforded by our experience in Joliet. We offered to pay 50 cents an hour to common laborers and 60 cents an hour to skilled common laborers. A survey of Joliet industries revealed that the average scale was 48 to 62 cents an hour. Yet the unions demanded 90 cents an hour."

The five bridges to replace the present fixed bridges in order to allow navigation are:

Jefferson street bridge, Joliet; cost, $445,000.

Jackson street bridge, Joliet; cost, $345,000.

Van Buren street bridge, Joliet (temporary); cost, $32,000.

Brand road bridge; cost, $84,000.

Marseilles, Ill., bridge; cost, $110,000.

Other Work Tied Up.

Plans are now being made for construction of four other bridges along the waterway. The last of these was scheduled for completion early in 1933. The highway department has agreed to construct two bridges, one at Seneca, and one at Morris, and the wage law has also tied up this work.

The bridges are the last obstacle to navigation along the waterway. Satisfactory progress has been made on dams, dredging, pools, retaining walls and locks along the 60 mile route from Lockport to Starved Rock lock, near Utica.

HELD ON DRY CHARGE.

Joseph Marota, alleged owner of a barn at 125d street and Kenton avenue, in which prohibition agents found a still and 355 gallons of alcohol on Wednesday, was held to the grand jury in bonds of $3,000 by United States Commissioner Walker yesterday.

Assessors Get Advice, But No Cash From County Board

Members of the county board kept their purse strings tight yesterday when the board of assessors and board of review appealed once more to the commissioners for emergency appropriations totaling $174,800, without which, the taxing officials claim, they cannot continue functioning.

The assessors pleaded that they need extra funds to put personal property on the assessment books and take some of the burden of taxation off real estate. Their declaration that by a cursory examination they have already found $50,000,000 worth of personal property previously untaxed brought a reply from some of the county commissioners that the last board of assessors, a majority of whose members still hold office, must have been guilty of neglect of duty to permit that property to escape taxation in previous years.

Ask $40,000 for Personalty Work.

The assessors' request for $115,000 was tabled at the start of the discussion. Although only $40,000 of that appropriation was listed as intended for personal property appraisals, the assessors based their whole plea on the necessity of getting additional personal property assessments, and gave no reasons for their need for the other $75,000 asked.

Charles M. Bates of the Chicago real estate board, one of the organizations demanding a campaign to assess and collect more personal property taxes, spoke on behalf of the assessors. He said the city and county are on the verge of receiverships for lack of revenue, that real estate is unable to bear any further tax burdens, and that personal property taxation is the only hope of relief.

Already, he told the commissioners, the assessors have placed on their books yachts and water craft worth $30,000,000 and railroad rolling stock worth $20,000,000, which yielded practically no revenue in previous years. At that, Commissioner George A. Miller leaped to his feet.

"You can't place the blame on the county board," he said. "A majority of the members of the present board of assessors were on the old board. If these pools of wealth were so easy to find, why weren't they on the tax books before? I say now that we throw the blame for the situation right back in the faces of the board of assessors."

Cornelius J. Harrington, attorney for the assessors, interrupted to say that only Assessors Conroy and Wolf were members of the board two years ago. He apparently overlooked Assessor Gene G. Oliver, who is now under a federal court sentence of eighteen months' imprisonment for income tax frauds.

Charge Neglect of Duty.

Some of the income on which Oliver evaded taxes was obtained by tax fixing, it was charged at his trial. He has not been active in the public appearances of the board lately, but has been regularly in his office in the county building.

"Have you any record to show that Assessor Conroy or any of the other holdover members attempted to have personal property listed, and was voted down by the majority of the old board?" Miller demanded.

A moment later Commissioner William Busse, veteran member and former president of the board, remarked:

Board of Review Request.

That ended the discussion of the assessors' plea, although later Charles E. Fox, their director of appraisals, presented a new petition for the funds, the third which has been given the board, and it was agreed that the finance committee of the county board will hold a new discussion of the matter.

The board of review's request for $59,800, which Andrew W. Gatenbey, its chief clerk, said is necessary if the board is to continue its "speed-up" policy of hearing 1,200 tax complaints daily, was also refused. Instead the commissioners ordered that the employés of the board of review, who will get no vacations this year, be docked two weeks' pay in addition, and that saving, $4,400, be used to hire the needed extra help.

The reviewers met last night to consider a proposal that they cut the number of hearings to 100 a day, which is all Gatenbey asserted, that the regular force of clerks can handle.

FEAR FOR SAFETY OF NAUTILUS; BIG RADIO HUNT ON

OSLO, Norway, Sept. 3.—(AP)—Serious concern was felt here tonight for the safety of the Nautilus, Sir Hubert Wilkins' arctic submarine, when no news of the ship had been received for four days.

Authorities instructed all amateur radio operators to try to establish communication with the submarine. All official wireless stations have been calling the Nautilus without result for several days. The captain of the Norwegian coaling steamer Ingerte reported yesterday that he heard faint signals from the submarine, but that these were too weak to be read. The suggestion was made here today that these signals might have come from the submarine's portable transmitter, which may have been carried out on the ice by the crew. The board of fisheries has instructed a sealing ship which is now at Longyear City, Spitzbergen, to remain there in readiness for a relief dash if necessary.

Soviet Ships Hunt Sub.

MOSCOW, Sept. 3.—(AP)—The government today ordered all soviet ships at ports in northern waters to take all possible steps to communicate with Sir Hubert Wilkins' arctic submarine Nautilus. Amateur radio operators also were urged to listen for signals from the submarine.

REVENUE BOARD FINDS ITS TASK 'AN AWFUL ONE'

Unable to Offer Program After Two Months.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Gov. Emmerson's revenue commission, after two months of work, has not found a remedy for the financial difficulties of the local governments which it is willing to recommend publicly.

At the end of a two hour discussion behind closed doors in the Union League club last night, it appeared that the commission would not be ready for a special session of the legislature this month. Members said they had hoped that the board of education would have some ideas for consideration, but the school trustees were not ready.

The trustees had sought a hearing before the commission on July 23. In their request they said they desired to present their "plans, suggestions and recommendations on legislation" which would permit them to perform their statutory duties. It was rumored they have no plans. They have not discussed any program at a public meeting, and they did not appear before the governor's commission last night.

Discuss Its Own Suggestions.

As a result the commission held a further discussion of suggestions previously made by its subcommittees. The objectives of the commission are an open secret, but the members are uncertain on what is the best method of arriving at these objectives. The task is so difficult that some of the members are reported to have said that they wished they had not been drawn into it. They are said to believe governmental conditions cannot be improved much until the public is convinced it should pay its taxes and officials are convinced that their governments must live within their incomes.

Part of the public feels that taxes are inequitable, too high, and that much of the tax money obtained is wasted, from the information given the commission. These citizens also believe that public officials do not want to make a drastic cut in expenses, eliminate thousands of jobs, and curb waste in contracts. The people haven't paid their taxes and the public officials go on incurring obligations. How to solve that problem is the task undertaken by the governor's commission, and, as one member expressed it, "It's an awful job!"

Many Conflicting Views.

"There are so many conflicting views, divergent interests, and substantial influences ready to pounce upon any recommendations made that it is extremely difficult to present a just program, with confidence in its acceptance," he added.

It is reported to be the intention of the commission to keep on working until it arrives at a conclusion on what is best to be done. There is still hope among some members that they will be able to persuade public officials to make a real retrenchment in public expenditures. Others believe the commission's policy should be to promote the interests of the public exclusively and start out to create a sentiment which would force the politicians to cut expenses. Which policy, if either, will be adopted remains to be determined.

DIES OF KNIFE WOUNDS.

Edward Burdell, 39 years old, 6914 South Western avenue, died yesterday at the Southwest General hospital of knife wounds received Tuesday night when he was stabbed by Sylvester Dougherty, 5346 Indiana avenue, a Negro. Dougherty is being held by the police.

NO BIDDERS SEEK TO BUY $4,150,000 OF COUNTY BONDS

No bidder offered yesterday to buy the $4,150,000 worth of county bonds which had been placed on sale. The bonds are in two issues—one of $2,150,000 for the county hospital nurses' home, the other of $2,000,000 in poor relief bonds. Both issues are to yield 4 per cent interest, the former due in 1950, the latter in 1933-'34.

The result ended hopes of county employés for payment of the first half of August pay rolls this week. Michael J. O'Connor, deputy controller, had said that the money to meet the rolls would be borrowed from the fund accruing from the bond sale. He said that $1,500,000 worth of tax anticipation warrants would be reoffered for sale this week. The warrants also have been for sale, but no buyers have been found.

ADVERTISE IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Frenchman Calls Litvinov Scheme "Huge Bluff."

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, Sept. 3.—The ancient Geneva superstition that little diplomats, who spoke out of their turn, should be eaten by Maxim Litvinov, Russian foreign minister, was exploded today by Pierre Flandin, French minister of finance, during the afternoon session of the European commission.

Flandin not only talked back to the soviet commissar, but raked him with a cross-fire of irony as polite as it was vicious. He treated the Russian's much famous economic nonaggression pact plan as a colossal bluff, and told him that the soviet government should muzzle the propaganda activities of the communist Internationale before talking about nonaggression.

Will Bury Russia's Scheme.

The battle started after the Moscow "expert" had delivered a ferocious tirade against the dilatory tactics of the refugees. He asserted that his nonaggression pact scheme, after having been batted from committee to committee for six months like a tennis ball, was about to be permanently interred—which it is. He also hinted that the system of preferential tariffs advocated in the coördination committee's report was directed against Russia. At the end of his speech he dropped a hint that the soviets would be unable to continue their experiment of trying to coöperate with capitalistic Europe under such conditions.

During the onslaught the rest of the delegates squirmed in their seats. Finally Litvinov subsided clumsily into his chair, plunging both hands into his tousled shock of hair, and glowering around the table.

Then M. Flandin, massive, towering, and haughty, arose and began to address the chandelier above the conference table in an impersonal tone. Everyone thought he would try to soften the irascible Litvinov, especially in view of the Franco-Soviet political and commercial negotiations now going on.

"I am glad Mr. Litvinov pointed out that he was not the discoverer of economic aggression," M. Flandin said, "for it is a very ancient thing and has been remarked upon before."

Points to French Plan.

France, he continued, had not opposed economic nonaggression, but added there must be a certainty that such a pact would not give rise to dangerous illusions. Furthermore, the minister Flandin pointed out that France herself has presented, "although not in quite the same spirit as Litvinov, a plan for ending economic wars."

"This plan," remarked Flandin, smiling sweetly at his Russian colleague, and emphasizing the adjective, "is serious, practical and clear, and is presented with the idea of really accomplishing something."

He then did some of the plainest talking concerning communism that the league of nations has ever heard.

Charges Red Propaganda.

"It is necessary to study economic pacts in serious fashion and without any idea of propaganda or recrimination," he said. "Litvinov seems to think that there is some kind of conspiracy against the soviet union. I can assure him we have no designs against the system he represents. On the other hand, I think it would be very desirable that certain organizations—apparently independent of the soviet government, of course—stop issuing propaganda against a system recognized by other European states. Subject to these reservations, the French government approves of the principles of the nonaggression pact as put forward by Litvinov."

The second Flandin had finished Litvinov jumped to his feet and began to sputter in English.

"The commission discriminated against my plan by not referring it immediately to a special committee," he fumed.

Calls Russia a Victim.

Referring to Flandin's remark about propaganda, he cried:

"Has any nation been a victim of as much hostile propaganda as the soviet union?"

The address by Litvinov, which preceded the battle, was devoted mainly to showing that the scheme for preferential tariffs, whereby Danubian agricultural countries would get favorable treatment, would discriminate against Russia.

At the conclusion of the tilt between the Russian commissar and the French minister, the commission decided to accept the coördinating committee's report as its own, and appointed a draft committee to fit the report into larger frame work and report back to the commission on Saturday. Thus Litvinov's nonaggression pact plan will be assured of a decent burial.

Court Ties Up His $1,900,000

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

GENEVA, Sept. 3.—Without awaiting the publication Saturday of the world court's decision, Austria today completely renounced its customs union protocol with Germany at the opening meeting of the European commission. Germany also renounced the protocol, but did so with a small string attached. She made the concession pending results of the commission's efforts toward a continental economic union. Since, however, it takes two to make a union, this appears to have little practical value except for saving the government's face in Berlin.

In abandoning their project, Austria and Germany pushed strongly for a European customs union, which a committee of economic experts recently urged Europe to make definitely its goal. Austria and Germany, in other words, came out for a general solution that Aristide Briand of France sought a year ago when he had the European union commission created.

Mrs. Vincent Kerens. Kerens' sisters, who opposed his fight for the $1,900,000, charged on religious grounds that his marriage to her had not been good conduct.

TYPHUS EPIDEMIC RAGES IN SOVIET LUMBER PORTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, Sept. 3.—A typhus epidemic is raging among the port workers of Archangel, according to reports received by Latvian steamship companies whose vessels are loading timber along the White sea ports for Europe.

A Latvian sailor died of typhus on the steamer Everymore, which left Archangel yesterday and the shippers today sent instructions to their captains to take measures to avoid contagion. The epidemic is reported to be especially bad in the prison camps on Solovetski island. The number of deaths is unknown.

The Esthonian and Latvian port authorities plan to carefully inspect ships arriving from Leningrad and the White sea ports.

STIMSON HOME; HE'S OPTIMISTIC ABOUT EUROPE

Sees Conciliatory Spirit Ruling Abroad.

New York, Sept. 3.—[Special.]—Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson returned today aboard the Leviathan from a summer abroad, optimistic over the prospect for European rehabilitation.

SECY. STIMSON.

"The month which has elapsed since the close of the seven power conference in London has given us a chance to begin to appraise results of that conference and of the various meetings which preceded and followed it," he said.

"From the information which has come to me I believe that Germany has received a new spirit of courage and confidence. The result of the recent plebiscite in Prussia, the fact that on the day when the German banks reopened the deposits exceeded the withdrawals, together with many similar indications, all point to more hopeful conditions and spirit."

Points to Friendly Meeting.

According to the secretary, the friendly and conciliatory spirit in which Prime Minister Laval and Chancellor Bruening have been meeting to discuss the political questions which divide their countries has been even more encouraging.

"The same is true of the meeting between the ministers of Germany and Britain and of Germany and Italy," Mr. Stimson said. "Such informal meetings constitute the most effective method of approaching and discussing these political problems, and until they are thus approached in such a spirit any thorough economic rehabilitation of central Europe is almost impossible.

"I think there is now good reason to believe that these European statesmen, taking advantage of the respite granted by Mr. Hoover's moratorium as well as the recommendations of the London conference, are beginning gradually to lay the foundation of political good will upon which a lasting structure of peace and economic prosperity can finally be rested.

"It was very evident in each of the countries I visited that the spirit and policy of the President's moratorium were highly appreciated and were proving helpful in many directions."

Pershing Also on Ship.

Among the other passengers on the Leviathan were Gen. John J. Pershing and Senator Claude A. Swanson of Virginia.

Gen. Pershing was abroad in connection with the work of the battle monument commission and said that every effort was being made to clean this up next summer, though the Montfaucon monument might take until the fall. He is planning another book to include his entire memoirs apart from the war.

Senator Swanson, ranking Democratic member of the foreign affairs committee, held our tariff responsible for much of the world depression, maintaining that it had precipitated retaliatory tariffs throughout the world.

IS CLEARED AFTER SERVING 22 YEARS FOR ANOTHER'S CRIME

Chester, Ill., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—Cleared of guilt after serving 22 years for a murder which another committed, Jesse Lucas today eagerly awaited the formal action by the state parole board which will set him free.

Yesterday the news arrived at Dixon prison that George R. Pond, a farmer of near Mount Carmel, Ill., had confessed on his deathbed that he, and not Lucas, had murdered one Clyde Showalter back in 1905. Lucas protested his innocence at his trial, but was convicted on circumstantial evidence.

Hollywood, Cal., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—Eleanor Hunt, stage and screen actress, today filed suit for divorce against Rex Lease, film actor. They were married at Las Vegas, Nev., last April and separated in June. Miss Hunt's divorce action charges Lease with intoxication and mental cruelty. Lease was divorced by his first wife, Charlotte Merriam, actress, in April, 1929. In July, 1930, he pleaded guilty to a charge of striking Vivian Duncan, now Mrs. Nils Asther, an aftermath of a party of Hollywood folks at Malibu Beach.

In 1929, she charges, she divorced her husband at the persuasion of Peterson. She declares Peterson has since refused to carry out his promise to marry her.

WEALTHY AURORA WIDOW NAMED IN ALIENATION SUIT

Stepmother Sued by Wife of Theater Man.

The affections of George S. Abbott, theatrical man, were made the subject of a $50,000 suit filed yesterday in the Kane county Circuit court at Geneva by Mrs. Emma Frankie Chapman Abbott of Massapequa, Long Island, N. Y., against her 65 year old stepmother, Mrs. Minnie W. Chapman of Aurora. Mrs. Abbott charges the alienation of her husband's affections.

Mrs. Abbott is the only child of Matthew T. Chapman, founder of the American Well works and one of the business and social leaders of Aurora, who died in 1921. She left home as a girl to go on the stage, and was married to Abbott, a New York theatrical manager and producer, in 1895. Both are 55 years old.

Chapman was married three times. His second wife was Mrs. Helen Leet, widow of a millionaire Aurora banker, whom he married in 1900, and who divorced him after a sensational hearing in 1904. He married Mrs. Minnie Chapman in 1909.

Chapman left a fortune of $750,000 to be divided between his daughter and widow at his death. Abbott left his wife in the east and came to Aurora in 1921 in connection with the settlement of the estate. He made his home with Mrs. Chapman, and has been there since.

Abbott became a familiar figure about the streets of Aurora, exercising a tall white wolfhound belonging to Mrs. Chapman, or lounging about the police station, where in time he attained the status of a volunteer member of the force.

Mrs. Abbott made a number of visits to her husband and step-mother and until recently was on friendly terms with them, friends said. In her suit, however, she declares that Mrs. Chapman plied her husband with gifts, among them several costly automobiles, put the management of her estate in his hands and by those means induced him to leave his wife permanently.

JOHN LIVINGSTON LEADING WINNER AT PLANE RACES

BULLETIN.

BURBANK, Cal., Sept. 4.—(AP)—The first plane in the Burbank to Cleveland air dash piloted by Lou Reichers of Arlington, N. Y., took off at 1:19 a. m., Pacific standard time [4:19 a. m. Chicago daylight time] today. He was followed at intervals by Walter S. Hunter of Sparta, Ill.; Capt. Ira Eaker of Washington; Harold S. Johnson of Chicago; Beeler Blevins of Atlanta; Jimmy Doolittle, former army flier; James Goodwin Hall of New York, and Art Goebel of Los Angeles. Hall, Goebel and Blevins planned nonstop flights.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Cleveland, O., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—In two days of racing dashes for small planes John H. Livingston of Aurora, Ill., has won five first places and one second place, losing a dead stick landing contest by one inch, and has collected $2,160 in prize money and a trophy. Livingston has won more national air events than any other pilot.

This afternoon Livingston, flying his swift little yellow Monocoupe, won two speed events, defeating Ben O. Howard, Chicago air mail pilot, by a shade in two, and leading the pack by a comfortable margin in the third. Livingston also won the men's dead stick landing contest with brakes by stopping only 7½ inches from the exact center of the circle.

Flies 140 Miles an Hour.

Livingston flew at an average speed of 140 miles an hour in the 30 mile race for planes, powered by motors with no more than 510 cubic inch piston displacement, to beat Ben Howard, flying his small white Pylon Polisher at an average speed of 137 miles an hour. Livingston's plane is powered by a Warner-Scarab motor, while Howard's, which he built himself, is powered by a 90 horsepower Wright Gypsy motor. Vernon Roberts of Moline, Ill., flying a Warner powered monocoupe, took third place at an average of 133 miles an hour. James Haizlip, famous racing pilot, flying a Laird powered by a Ranger 6-390 motor, took fourth place.

Howard lost to Livingston after a terrific battle from last place, into which he fell when he got caught in the propeller wash of another plane in the horse race takeoff.

Livingston won again in the fifty mile race, ten laps of five miles, for planes with motors of not more than 800 cubic inch piston displacement, setting a hot pace that averaged 145 miles an hour around the closed course. Arthur Davis of East Lansing, Mich., flying a Waco 10-T, powered by a Wright J6-7, led at the breakaway, but Livingston took the lead on the first lap and Davis fell into second place, finishing there, at an average of 142 miles an hour.

Lloyd O'Donnell Close Third.

Lloyd O'Donnell of Long Beach, Cal., flying the same type ship and motor as Davis, took third place with an average speed of only .2 miles an hour less than Davis, while Vernon Roberts of Moline, Ill., and Arthur Killips of Lyons, Ill., placed fourth and fifth.

Livingston later won another event for planes with motors of not more than 650 cubic inches displacement free for all on six laps of a five mile closed course, setting a pace averaging 140 miles an hour. Howard again finished in second place, which he gained on the first lap, forcing out James G. Haizlip, who fell back to finish in fourth place. Vernon Roberts of Moline took third place. Howard made an average of 138 miles an hour, only 2 miles an hour less than Livingston, while Roberts flew at 134 miles an hour average.

Howard Always in Money.

Howard was flying these races in his own crafty way, always finishing in the money, even when competing against the speed Bayles had. He has won two second places, losing both tilts to Livingston, and one third place, for a total of $1,620 in prizes. This is Howard's first day of racing here and he placed in the three events he entered. His plane, being home made, is unlicensed and cannot be entered in many of the races, which are for planes manufactured under an approved type certificate of the department of commerce.

Last year at Chicago Howard flew his Pete to win five races and to place third in two for a total of $5,750 in prize money.

A small Gee Bee, flown by Charles Myers of Akron, O., powered by a Menasco C-4 motor, won the thirty mile race for planes with motors of not more than 400 cubic inch piston displacement at an average speed of 129 miles on hour, leaving B. Stevenson of Kansas City in a Lambert powered monocoupe far behind in second place, and Art Chester of Joliet, Ill., flying a Leblond powered Davis, in third place.

Others Far Outclassed.

E. M. Laird of Chicago, flying a Wasp powered Laird at an average speed of 150 miles an hour, more than one-fourth less the speed made by Bayles, passed Ben O. Howard on the third lap of the race to take second place. Other entries, J. R. Wedell of Patterson, La., and Vernon C. Omlie of Memphis, dropped out when they saw Bayles pulling away from them on the first lap.

Robert L. Hall of Springfield, Mass., flying a Gee Bee Y, powered by a Wasp C motor, was forced down when he sheared a foot off of the tip of his left wing in rounding No. 2 pylon on the first lap. It was nipped off in such clean fashion, he said, he was unaware how it happened.

Bayles gave his speed demonstration in the men's fifty mile free for all five ten-mile laps, for planes between 1,200 and 1,875 cubic inch piston displacement. He won first prize of $1,800, Laird won second prize of $1,080, and Howard third prize of $720.

Chicago's Mayor Honored by Lake County Town

Antioch, in the center of the northern Illinois lake region, where Mayor A. J. Cermak has had a summer home for many years, yesterday celebrated Cermak day. The picture shows the start of the parade to the local high school, where the mayor talked. Previously Chicago firemen were guests of the mayor at a club near Antioch. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Flyers Attend

A bit of surprise party atmosphere was added to the celebration of Cermak day at Antioch last evening when Capt. Wolfgang von Gronau, German trans-Atlantic flyer, and his crew arrived unexpectedly by motor from the Great Lakes Naval Training station.

The resort community, of which Mayor Cermak is a summer resident, closed down business for the day. It was golf for the men and cards for the women during the afternoon, a parade and a reception at twilight, and then a dance. And the German flyers arrived in time for the reception to add a new touch of excitement.

Capt. von Gronau and his associates were the guests of Maj. Gen. Frank Parker at a noon luncheon at the Tavern club. Then they flew to Great Lakes, where their plane, the Gronland Wal, will ride at anchor until Sunday. The aviators will be guests tonight at a reception at the Germania club and tomorrow will go to an official reception at Hammond.

MASTER BARBERS VOTE 3 TO 1 FOR 75 CENT HAIRCUTS

The Master Barbers' association of Chicago in a stormy mass meeting at the Hotel Sherman last night voted for prices of 75 cents for haircuts and 25 cents for shaves. About 1,000 of the 2,800 members of the association attended the meeting.

The vote counted was 562 to 194 in favor of retaining the 75 and 25 cent rates. Officials of the association explained that many of those present when the meeting began had departed before the voting was completed, leaving their ballots at the door, and that it was decided not to count these ballots when the three to one choice of the other voters was made known.

The dispute over prices came to a head late in August when the master barbers of the north side voted to reduce their charge for haircuts to 60 cents. Soon afterward 44 master barbers of the loop decided to stand by the 75 cent price. As a result of the dissension, officials of the association called the mass meeting.

Argument was hot during the three hours of the meeting that preceded the start of the voting at midnight. Speakers for each of the eight local organizations in the association were heard. Those favoring a price cut argued that they were losing money in competition with cut rate shops while opponents of lowered rates declared a price reduction would not enable them to maintain first class shops.

BADGER OFFICIAL ROBBED, SLAIN BY HITCH HIKER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Eau Claire, Wis., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—Alvin S. Marshall of New Lisbon, Wis., who was last seen Monday, was found murdered near here late today, supposedly the victim of a hitch-hiker. He had been shot and beaten and his body thrown into heavy underbrush off a side road a quarter of a mile from highway 93.

At the time of his death Marshall was on an automobile trip in connection with his duties as appraiser for the state annuity board. He formerly was a banker and business man in Juneau county.

Killer Steals Clothing.

All of Marshall's outer garments had been removed. Apparently his slayer donned the clothing to make his escape. Also between $800 and $1,200 in travelers' and state checks had been taken. Reports tonight traced the killer to Baldwin, where he tried to cash a check from Marshall's checkbook.

Chicago Attorney Drowned in Lake in Michigan

Attorney Roman F. Welzant, 40 years old, 1508 West Division street, was drowned yesterday in Lake Michigan at Saugatuck, Mich. His body was recovered. Welzant rented a motorboat in the afternoon. Later a yachting party saw the boat without its occupant and notified life guards. Search resulted in the finding of his body. A coroner's investigation found officially that the attorney fell from the boat.

ROCKEFELLER KIN WHO WORKED IN COLLEGE IS HERE

Young Prentice Gets Job with Law Firm.

John Rockefeller Prentice, grandson of John D. Rockefeller, who worked his way through Yale university as a night telephone operator in a hospital, now has a job in Chicago, it was learned yesterday. He is associated with the law firm of Cutting, Moore and Sidley, and is residing at the University club.

Prentice is 23 years old. In the winter of 1925 he attracted attention when the James P. Holgan scholarship award designed to help Yale students "in need of financial assistance" was awarded him.

He had not sought the scholarship, it was revealed, but the committee declared that he actually needed the $300 income because he was paying his way himself.

Young Prentice is the son of E. Parmalee Prentice of New York, once a corporation lawyer in Chicago, and Mrs. Prentice, the former Alta Rockefeller, sister of Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick.

In 1919 he entered Yale. In January, 1920, he disappeared. He had borrowed money and gone to Boston, where, under the name of "Jones," he got a job with a wholesale hardware company. He remained there for five years and became a star salesman.

In 1925, at his mother's request, he reentered Yale and won many honors there.

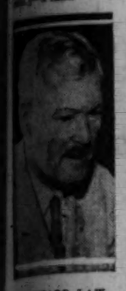
DEFENSE PLANS INSANITY PLEA IN POWERS CASE

Regarded as Attempt to Cheat Noose.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—Plans for a cunning defense for the West Virginia Bluebeard, Harry F. Powers, by which his attorneys hope to save him from the gallows, were discussed today.



J. EDWARD LAW.

While no formal statement of the defense has been given out, it was learned that J. Edward Law, attorney for Powers, is fairly convinced of his client's guilt, and that he has determined upon a plea of insanity.

Attorney Law has in mind to lay Powers upon the altar of science, to come out frankly admitting Powers' guilt before a jury, and to submit him to examination by noted alienists, so that the mental makeup of such a fiendish murderer may be fully analyzed and the results given to science.

Seek to "Serve Science."

Thus the defense would put the case of the Bluebeard killer of Mrs. Asta Buick and her three children of Park Ridge, Ill., and of Mrs. Doris Pressler Sinks of Worcester, Mass., on what they have described as a "high moral plane," and seek to have the case considered as a boon to psychiatric science.

Reports of a whispering campaign against any one attempting a defense of Powers have been heard frequently in the last few days, and today the public determination that Powers must be hanged flared unexpectedly into the open.

Attorney Barratt O'Hara, criminal lawyer of Chicago, has been in several conferences with Defense Attorney Law, with the possibility existing that O'Hara may join in the defense.

Today O'Hara received several messages advising him to get out of town. A band of men surrounded him on Main street this afternoon, and, addressing their remarks to each other in loud tones, declared that the "red headed men of Clarksburg wouldn't stand for any smart Aleck gangster lawyer from Chicago coming here to pull his tricks for a murderer that'd ought been hung without no trial days ago."

O'Hara Says He's Undecided.

Rumors were rife on the street that O'Hara might have been hired by the American Friendship society, the matrimonial agency through which Powers obtained the thousands of names of women whom he planned to victimize.

Some of these rumors were published in the local newspapers, alongside O'Hara's denials that he was a gang lawyer, or slipping in the law to protect any one else. O'Hara declared he had been asked to come here to confer with the defense attorney, Law, and that it had not been decided whether he would be in the case.

The reports of the O'Hara-Law conference indicated that Law was dubious about the public feeling in case O'Hara was retained. During the day, O'Hara went to the jail for an extended talk with Powers. Later Law issued a statement asking the public to withhold judgment until the full facts are shown in court, and to consider that the confession obtained from Powers was drawn from him after a rigorous third degree.

Investigation at Standstill.

The investigative forces of Clarksburg and Harrison county were still at a standstill today, following the announcement of County Prosecutor Will Morris that in the interests of the public morals, it was best that no further "morbid details" of the crimes of Powers should be given out. This policy went so far that the sheriff's and police forces were disinclined to follow any new clews.

They refused to question Mrs. Luella Powers, wife of the Bluebeard, on reports that she had been in Chicago last June and with Powers and Mrs. Asher had visited Mrs. Jeanne Campbell, so-called psychoanalyist. City Detective Carl Southern said the report was ridiculous, that Mrs. Powers has not been out of West Virginia since her marriage to Powers. This was verified by neighbors.

MAY BE VICTIM

MRS. ANNA BOEHLE.

As friends and neighbors of Mrs. Asta Buick Eicher in Park Ridge were preparing for the funeral tomorrow of the widow and her three children, who were slain by Harry F. Powers, the West Virginia Bluebeard, the Chicago detective bureau last night was investigating the report of the disappearance of another woman from Park Ridge, Mrs. Anna Purcell, also known as Mrs. Anna Boehle. The latter, according to two anonymous letters in the hands of Chief of Detectives Norton, might also have been a victim of Powers.

The letters said that Mrs. Purcell, who at one time lived in a rooming house in the 600 block on Briar place, vanished from Park Ridge after she had been in correspondence with an unidentified man with the object of matrimony. Mrs. Purcell is said in the letters to have taken several thousand dollars with her.

The bodies of Mrs. Eicher and her three children were to arrive in Chicago this morning. William F. Moritz, Park Ridge mortician, said the funeral would be conducted in the Park Ridge theater tomorrow by the Rev. Walter D. Spangler, pastor of the Park Ridge St. Luke's English Lutheran church, where the Eicher children attended Sunday school.

WOMAN DENIES PART IN KILLING HER ACCUSER

Seized for Quiz in Ride Slaying.

Catherine Recardi, sought for questioning in the murder of Leonard Ingstrom, gang ride victim, whose life she is reported to have threatened when he became a state's witness against her on a charge of assault to kill, was arrested yesterday. After an hour's questioning of her the state's attorney determined to hold her and Tony Recardi, arrested with her and identified as her husband, for the inquest in Hinsdale this morning.

Her arrest followed anonymous information given to Sergts. John J. Ryan and Thomas H. McAuley. They waited in front of a rooming house at Tilden street and Racine avenue and arrested her as she left the house with Recardi. She was taken to the Des Plaines street station, where she refused to answer the questions of Capt. William Stapleton, and from there to the Criminal Courts building.

Denies Knowledge of Killing.

Despite an hour's questioning by Assistant State's Attorneys Elmer Holmgren and Richard Jackson, she persisted in a denial of all knowledge of the killing of Ingstrom.

Mrs. Ricardi admitted making threats to have Ingstrom "taken for a ride" but asserted they were made only to "scare him so he wouldn't testify against me." She insisted that she had no knowledge of his slaying.

Lluet. William V. Blaul of the state's attorney's office last night announced that a search was being conducted for three men and that an arrest is expected within two or three days. He did not divulge the names of the suspects.

Ingstrom was kidnaped on Aug. 22, the night before Mrs. Recardi was to have appeared in jury court on the assault charges of Mrs. Lena Rogers, proprietor of a rooming house at 217 South Throop street. Mrs. Rogers charged that Mrs. Recardi assaulted her with a hammer and tried to rob her of $147. Ingstrom came to her rescue, Mrs. Rogers said.

Threatened with "Ride."

Following a hearing in the Des Plaines street court Mrs. Recardi was granted a jury trial. At that time, according to the police, she threatened to have Ingstrom taken for a ride by men she termed "my gangster friends" if he persisted in testifying against her. Ingstrom was found strangled and shot to death in a ditch near 79th street and the county line on Wednesday. He had been shot in the head four times and his throat was cut.

Jury court records show that Mrs. Recardi did not appears in court and a capius was issued for her arrest after her bond had been forfeited. Both Du Page and Cook county officials joined yesterday in a search for the killers.

Chief of Detectives Norton announced he had discovered that Ingstrom had boasted of his ability to cheat gamblers and presented this as a possible reason for the murder.

Friends of the slain man denied that he had ever been implicated with gamblers or hoodlums. He was an insect exterminator, they said, and had never had trouble with any one.

URGES 113 NEW WARSHIPS BUILT FOR U. S. NAVY

Washington, D. C., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—The navy league of the United States today answered recent demands of pacifists and the little navy group in congress for radical cuts in naval appropriations with a recommendation that three-quarters of a billion dollars be expended on new warship construction during the next six years.

The navy league program, made public just one day after Chairman Will R. Wood [Rep., Ind.] of the house appropriations committee had demanded a drastic slash in the navy's contemplated building program, calls for the construction of 113 ships, including 64 destroyers, 8 six inch gun cruisers, thirty-four submarines, three eight inch gun cruisers and four aircraft carriers.

Terming its program a moderate one, the league stated that it had given up all hope of seeing a bill passed which would give the United States all the ships it is entitled to build under the treaty by 1936, when the pact expires. It stated that failure of congressional leaders and the administration to push a naval program last year had put this country so far behind that it would be unable to catch up with Great Britain by 1936.

SEIZE ALLEGED KILLER OF YOUNG ROCHESTER GIRL

Denver, Colo., Sept. 3.—(AP)—Angelo Morreale, said by police to be one of two gangsters who shot and killed 14 year old Angelina Spitale of Rochester, N. Y., during a gang battle, was arrested here tonight.

Police said the girl was killed in November, 1928, when her father's car was riddled with bullets.

Three gunmen were reported to have been in the car. Rochester police, according to local officers, determined that Morreale, Antonio Patti, and Giuseppe Salemi were the killers.

"You've got me, all right," police quoted Morreale as saying. "I was in that car, all right, but I didn't do the shooting. I didn't kill that little girl."

FORMER BEE INSPECTOR DIES.

Taylorville, Ill., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—Frank Bishop, formerly state bee inspector and the keeper of a large apiary in this city, died here today. He is survived by his widow and two daughters. Funera lservices will be Saturday.

Strike Isolates Barcelona; Guns Trained on Rioters

BY JAY ALLEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BARCELONA, Spain, Sept. 3.—The Spanish republic's battle with its most persistent foe, the syndicalism that breeds in Catalonia, is on tonight in Barcelona.

Thus far there are two dead and ten wounded. The republic has massed forces and troops—those sinister looking, earnest shooting civil guards. The syndicalists, under the desperate leadership of its anarchist left wing, are actually in trenches and have raised barricades. Tragedy on a sizable scale is thought possible if they choose to fight it out tomorrow.

Macia Calls for Help.

And old Col. Macia, president of the generalidad of Catalonia, who tried to play ball with syndicalism but found he could not go on meeting its insistent demands, is away out on the side line.

Col. Macia, whose demands that the generalidad have complete authority for the maintenance of order are now before the Cortes, had to call on the Madrid government today for more civil guards.

And these resolute gentlemen with patent leather hats, rifles, hand grenades and other toys, who were partly withdrawn when Col. Macia was allowed to run his own show, have come marching back. The central government is very much in command. The republic's energetic minister of the interior, Miguel Maura, is prepared to come from Madrid himself if things get worse.

Seek to Halt Violence.

At a late hour tonight moderate elements among the syndicalists attempted to get the strike committee to call a halt before the civil guards turned their energies to wiping up the suburbs, where hordes of syndicalists are massed with a considerable supply of arms.

It is apparent tonight that the government is prepared to go the limit. Two ships in the harbor were commandeered to hold prisoners.

Col. Macia is sorely troubled, but his chief lieutenants, weary at taking orders from the syndicalists, are delighted at what they consider an opportunity to crush the anarchist element that has captured control.

City Is Isolated.

The showdown is going on in what is a virtual vacuum. The industrial capital of Spain is cut off from the rest of the country. Telephone lines were cut when the strikers dug a trench to get access to them.

Barcelona, a city of a million people is paralyzed. There are no light or gas. Enough bakers are at work to supply prisons and hospitals only. The generalidad is taking measures to bring food if the strike lasts.

The apprehensive citizenry sought their homes this afternoon after a couple of shooting matches in the streets. Tonight patrols have the streets to themselves. Machine guns are in evidence.

What Strike Is About.

The syndicalists called a general strike of indefinite duration ostensibly to protest the government's quick repression of yesterday's prison riots. They demand the resignation of the civil governor, who is a Catalan, and the release of imprisoned comrades.

In an attempt to burn the church of Belen, in the suburb of Collblanch, one syndicalist died full of Mauser bullets from the guns of civil guards. Another who fired on a car got his. One policeman is dying and two citizens are in a serious condition.

MEXICO ORDERS CHINESE BE GIVEN FULL PROTECTION

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 3.—Foreign Minister Estrada today informed Sam Young, Chinese minister, that President Rubio had notified the governors of the states of Sonora and Sinaloa that the expulsion of Chinese from those states had become an international matter and that the Anti-Chinese society must be held in check and all Chinese given full protection and guarantees provided by Mexican law.

Both governors, Estrada said, had replied that the guarantees would be furnished and the Chinese protected.

Thousands of Chinese refugees are concentrated at Mazatlan. Reports to the Chinese legation say the situation in Mazatlan is very difficult because of the poverty of many of the refugees.

Halt Exodus to U. S.

Nogales, Ariz., Sept. 3.—(AP)—The exodus of Chinese from northern Mexico temporarily was halted today by an order from Mexico City extending indefinitely the expulsion time limit, originally set as Sept. 5.

Hundreds of Chinese were waiting at the Mexican border to complete arrangements with United States immigration officials for their passage through this country under bond to their native land. Jails in Nogales, Bisbee, Douglas, and Tucson, Ariz., were crowded with Chinese, unable to give bond, who were arrested by American officials as they crossed the border.

WIFE TRIED TO KILL HIM TWICE, SEARLES SAYS

West Palm Beach, Fla., Sept. 3.—(AP)—Charges that on two occasions his wife, Mrs. Mabel Margaret Searles, tried to kill him were filed here today by Victor A. Searles, of Palm Beach and Atlantic City, in his answer to her suit for alimony and separate maintenance.

Once, the answer said, she attempted to slay him with a butcher knife and he was forced to flee, and again she attempted to kill him and herself by running an automobile over an embankment, it was alleged.

Mrs. Searles charged her husband had a large income and was spending it on "other women." She is seeking an accounting on behalf of herself and a small daughter, Betty.

Concerning his financial status, Searles took issue with his wife's complaint. He said she had a comfortable residence at Margate, N. J., and an apartment in Chicago. He claimed she had taken $200,000 worth of personal property from his residence at Atlantic City and that she had jewelry valued at $250,000, some of which he gave her and some of which she took from him.

He said his income was $50,000 a year from a trust fund, but that he is heavily indebted.

FOUR HELD IN $140,000 BONDS.

Elmer Orsay, 21 years old, 4114 Washington boulevard; Edward Domak, 17, of 1242 Holt street; John Dusdael, 18, of 1449 Cleaver street, and Stanley Jacz, 20, of 1325 Huron street, were held to the Criminal court in bonds totaling $140,000 by Judge Brooks in Boys' court yesterday. They have confessed four robberies, according to the police.

BRITISH CABINET TO SQUEEZE OUT NEW TAX MONEY

Continues to Hack at Government Costs.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 3.—The emergency national cabinet, with Prime Minister MacDonald at its head, carried on today its continuous meeting of hacking, paring, and shaving governmental expenses to complete the economy program it will present to parliament next Tuesday. It is also at work building a new press with which to squeeze more money out of the taxpayer in order to balance the budget.

J. H. THOMAS.

There will be a slight let-up tomorrow, and J. H. Thomas, secretary for dominions and colonies, who followed Mr. MacDonald in his break with the Labor party, is going to his home town, Derby, where he will make a speech justifying his action in joining the national government to his own constituents, and describing the policy of the new government.

It is not expected that he will reveal any secrets concerning the details of the cabinet's financial reform measures. These are always reserved for first announcement in the house of commons.

"Heresy" Hunt Fading Out.

After the first ten days of excitement, featured by the denunciation of Mr. MacDonald and his associates by former Labor party colleagues, the "heresy" hunt seems to be dying down, and there is evidence of growing disgust among the rank and file of the Laborites over the domination of the Labor political party by the trades union organization.

It appears as if an issue will soon be made between the old British parliamentary idea that a member of parliament is a representative elected on general principles and left to do his best for the country as a whole, and the trades union idea that a member of parliament is a delegate who must obey the instructions of a convention even in the smallest details.

If this feeling grows among the Laborites, Mr. MacDonald, who holds strongly to the representative idea, may yet win out as being Labor's champion.

May Not Dare Cut Dole.

Rumors, for which, however, there are no solid foundation, are increasing that even the new government will not dare to cut dole payments for the unemployed. This is based on the belief that to do so it would not save any money worth speaking of, while it would present the Labor party with the best election cry for generations that the government was robbing "the poorest of the poor."

The government tonight completed its task of filling the cabinet with the appointment of further ministers and undersecretaries. The political complexion of the government follows: Cabinet ministers, four laborites, four conservatives and two liberals; other ministers, four laborites, twenty-six conservatives and ten liberals.

Malcolm MacDonald, son of the prime minister, appointed dominions' undersecretary, and Maj. Gwilym Lloyd George, son of the libereal leader, new parliamentary secretary to the board of trade.

British Decline Laid to Primogeniture Rule; Business Stagnates in Hands of One Family

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 3.—Primogeniture—a rule providing that property and estates shall pass to the eldest son—was abolished five years ago when the Birkenhead law on intestate succession was passed, but the effect of this rule from ancient feudal times remains to cripple Great Britain.

Automatic succession of the first born male child to the father's property has resulted in the freezing of land, business and industry into the possession of the eldest son regardless of fitness, ability, or personal volition. Tradition is so strong for family and landed estates in this country that "crown princes" have never renounced their rights and from birth are brought up to take over the succession.

How Custom Originated.

The custom originated in the days of the Norman conquest for military reasons. In those days barons occupied positions similar to colonels of regiments, and every estate was liable to be called on to supply soldiers.

Peers by the rule of primogeniture sought to conserve their estates in entirety so as to insure the eldest son of always having enough land to support the requisite number of tenants from which to draw troops when the crown of the country called for them.

Younger sons, according to the custom, having no patrimony, sought honorable careers in the navy or army or entered government service overseas in the various colonies scattered over the globe. Daughters with adequate dowries were expected to assure their futures with suitable marriages with neighboring first born sons.

Custom Is Abolished.

F. Smith, commoner lawyer, who rose to be Viscount Birkenhead and lord chancellor, introduced a bill in 1925 smashing the custom that leaving no will inferentially meant bequeathing property to the eldest son, and since parliament's adoption of the bill in January, 1926, primogeniture has been abolished, and the widow's dower and the rights of the other sons and daughters have been established and recognized.

Eventually, under the Birkenhead law covering intestates, such property goes to the crown, but the king occupies the twenty-second and final category where the deceased leaves no survivors nearer than great-grandparents.

Entailed estates providing specifically by will that eldest sons shall accede to the property are becoming rarer as the surtax on income and death duties mounts, and certain wealthy land owners have incorporated themselves as stock companies, bequeathing shares to their children to avoid inheritance taxes and at the same time leaving their heirs free to dispose of the estates.

Heirlooms Cannot Be Sold.

Patronage, prestige, pride, family snobbery and ambition actuated primogeniture and entailment—emotions mixed with the fathers' anxiety over the sons' ability to handle the property themselves without being fleeced.

Similarly heirlooms, when officially recognized by the courts, cannot be sold when entailed and must remain in the family for succession. Chiefly, only paintings, statues, and other works of art are recognized as such.

America has a counterpart of the entailed estates in the modern trusts established by will, forbidding the breaking up of property and distribution of estates.

Seek to Keep Estates Intact.

During the last century efforts were made to prevent the breaking up of estates for economic reasons, as landowners saw the pitiful results of splitting the terrain into small parcels in Ireland and on the continent, where tiny plots unsuitable to be worked profitably enable the owners only to eke out a miserable existence.

It will require at least 25 years for Britain to emerge from the evil effects of primogeniture and entailment, it is estimated. The age old custom is expected to be broken definitely only when the heirs are unable to pay the heavy insurance premiums against death duties and therefore will find it impossible to discharge their inheritance tax, which means either cession of the land to the state or breaking it up and selling to small tenants.

Economists insist that the repercussion of primogeniture on Britain is more sinister in industry than in the concentration of vast areas of land. They point out that keeping shipyards, iron works, mines, looms, and factories in one family, passing from father to son, robs business of initiative, closes the door to ambition of all employés, throttles development, and inevitably causes the dry rot which admittedly is the cause of the nation's economic decline today.

Thousands of commercial enterprises are dragging along, operating at just about the cost of production, or, in many cases, at an actual loss, for prestige and family reasons. Such obsolete plants, these, economists say, must close down and their owners accept losses so as to leave the field free for competitive rivalry among firms organized on a modern basis before Britain can escape the stagnation which threatens to drive her into bankruptcy.

MOSCOW, Sept. 3.—(AP)—Amy Johnson, British aviatrix, who is flying back to England from Tokio, made a forced landing because of fuel shortage this afternoon between Arsk and Kazan, about 500 miles east of here. An urgent message brought her a new fuel supply and Miss Johnson continued on her way.

Slayer of Three Children Dies on Canadian Gallows

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 3.—(AP)—John Streib, 54, was hanged today for the murder four months ago of three children whose mother he had sought in vain to marry. He walked to the gallows silently, demonstrating none of the despondency that caused him to attempt suicide after the brutal slaying.

AID IS SOUGHT FROM 45 EDITORS IN RELIEF DRIVE

The cooperation of the foreign language newspapers in the relief of the unemployed and distressed was asked yesterday by Edward L. Ryerson Jr., chairman of the joint emergency relief fund, and by Samuel Insull Jr., chairman of the drive to raise the cash. The appeal was made to the 45 editors at a luncheon in the Hotel La Salle.

"Our goal is $3,300,000," said Mr. Ryerson. "That is not one dollar too much. We must care for the distressed families."

"What we desire you to do is to make clear to your readers the urgent need for this relief," said Mr. Insull. "Chicago and Cook county must take care of their own residents. To do that, every resource will have to be tapped.

"If every one understands the purpose of and the need for this relief the more certain we will be of obtaining sufficient funds. Every one should know that not one cent of the money collected will go for administrative purposes.

"Every dollar will be disbursed for the relief of Cook county families through the established charity organizations. Of the several thousand persons engaged in raising the fund not one will be given a cent from the funds collected, not even for expenses. The money obtained will be for relief, and that alone."

Efforts of the police department to aid the work of charity this winter were outlined by the Police Captains association at the Hotel Sherman last night.

CHINA'S CAPITAL PERILED BY FLOOD; DIKES COLLAPSE

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

SHANGHAI, Sept. 3.—Nanking, capital of China, is the latest city to be menaced by the flood waters of the Yangtze river. Three dikes have collapsed outside the west gates of the city wall, and in some places the streets are three feet under water.

The waters of the Yangtze even yesterday were nine inches above the street level, and great apprehension was felt because the yellow flood was only a third of a mile from the main gate.

Hundreds of refugees are already encamped upon the city walls.

ABOARD THE S. S. RAJPUTANA, Sept. 4.—(AP)—Mahatma Gandhi, leader of India's Nationalist millions, has spurned the first class stateroom placed at his disposal by the British government for his trip to the round table conference in London, and sleeps on a wooden bench in the stern of this ship.

Covered by a shimmering white sheet, he slept unconcernedly today while deck patrolling passengers gazed in amazement.

"Who is it?" they asked, and an attendant answered courteously, "That is Mr. Gandhi, but this is his day of silence, and so he is sleeping."

Carried Half Ton of Mud.

There are many strange things for the uninitiated aboard the Rajputana for instance, the half ton of mud brought from the sacred Ganges by Pandit Malaviya, Mr. Gandhi's companion. The pandit converts the mud into miniature gods for purposes of worship.

When darkness falls each evening Gandhi rises from his wooden bench and summons his small flock of followers to prayer. All are dressed in white flowing robes, and all squat Buddha-like on the deck, hands clasped, and bowed, eyes closed, in meditation.

Beside the mahatma sits the Pandit Malaviya. On the other side sits Miss Madeleine Slade, daughter of an English admiral and the mahatma's assistant. Gandhi's voice surges above the lashing wind.

Prays for Liberty.

"We humbly ask the giver of all gifts to give India her freedom," he prays.

There is another side to the mahatma. He has made friends with the ship's cat, a big black fellow, to which he feeds goat's milk and with which he shares his bench nightly.

Gandhi and his party arrived at Aden, Arabia, the entrance to the Red sea, today and disembarked for a brief visit. A large crowd of Indians cheered the "holy man."

Ends Family on Picnic, Then Ends Own Life

George A. Heldt, 43 years old, 3926 North Irving avenue, was told recently by his physician that he would have to undergo a major operation. Tuesday he sent his wife and children to Lincoln park for a picnic, locked himself in the bathroom of his home, turned on the gas and slashed his throat with a razor. He was dead when firemen, summoned by a roomer in the house, broke down the door.

DENIES RIFT

MRS. WINIFRED HARRISON.

Hollywood, Cal., Sept. 3.—(AP)—The former Winifred Sackville Stoner II tonight denied that her recent marriage to Earl Winston Harrison, 31 year old Wells, Tex., oil man, was a failure and said they were enjoying a "perfectly good honeymoon."

She said she was unable to understand reports quoting her mother in New York as saying "she found only misery and parted from her husband only a few days after her marriage."

The couple, found in an apartment here, said they expected to go to New York soon to visit the bride's mother.

Coroner to Investigate Death of Melrose Park Boy

An inquest will be held today into the death of Joseph Pirolo, 10 years old, of 1218 North 19th avenue, Melrose Park, who died an hour after he was taken to the Westlake hospital last night. Examination by a coroner's physician disclosed a head injury which, it was said, was too severe to have been received in a fall. Dr. L. A. Vertuno of Oak Park, who attended the boy, asked the coroner's office to make an inquiry.

TAILOR-BROKER'S INSIDE STORY OF CLERK'S TRADES

the stock of Wolf's that I brought to them, and took them to a bank. The bank said the securities were all right."

Weiss asserted that he himself transacted all the Wolf dealings through Faroll Brothers and Jackson Brothers Boesel & Co. Weiss admitted that all the Wolf transactions were posted under the name of Weiss.

The broker said he believed Wolf to be extremely wealthy. He recalled their boyhood. He said that on the death of Wolf's father, a wealthy dairyman, Wolf was supposedly left a considerable estate. It was from this estate he believed, according to Weiss' story, that the bonds for margin accounts came so steadily.

Barnett Faroll of Faroll Brothers reached at his home in Winnetka early this morning said that Weiss had had dealings with his company, but he could not say to what extent, as it was not in his department. He said that if Weiss represented Wolf in any transactions he knew nothing about it.

Many-Angled Inquiry.

Meanwhile, a multiple inquiry is being made into the Wolf case. Auditors are working day and night at the bank to establish the total amount of securities taken from the bank. Investigators from the New York stock exchange are said to be here.

Locally, the business conduct committee of the Board of Trade is making an individual quiz, and has been for several days. A similar probe is expected to be made by the Chicago Stock Exchange.

Wolf has made a complete confession of his peculations. He told of how he began twelve years ago when he attempted to purchase some stock outright with his own savings, but was persuaded to buy on margin. He lost. Then he stole to cover his losses. And it has been the same ever since, until he was caught.

Wolf is a family man, and has a daughter. His neighbors in River Forest knew him as a model man. Weiss this morning pointed out that his friend "never smoked, drank or swore."

The 42 year old manager of the coupon department, who lived within his $6,000 annual salary while operating in millions on the market, may not be turned over for prosecution for several weeks. Bank officials and the underwriters were unable to estimate the length of time necessary to complete their searches.

Investigators revealed further evidence of Wolf's failure to employ proceeds of the embezzlement for his personal use.

Wolf disclosed he had been unable to operate his automobile, which is five years old, during the last year because of having to meet medical bills for his daughter Marjorie, 13 years old, who was injured in an auto accident. He said he did not wish to cash stocks purchased through the stolen bonds in his constant attempt to recoup his losses and return the bonds.

Weiss said that Samuel Ettelson was engaged as his, Weiss' attorney.

M'GOORTY ORDERS NEW SEARCH MADE FOR LEO MONGOVEN

LEO MONGOVEN.

A search for Leo Mongoven, bodyguard for George [Bugs] Moran, former leader of the north side gang, was begun yesterday when Chief Justice John P. McGoorty of the Criminal court issued a new capias for his arrest. In examining the court records Judge McGoorty discovered that Mongoven had never gone to trial on a charge of carrying concealed weapons.

Mongoven was indicted on the gun carrying charge on May 22, 1930, and his bond was set at $10,000. He never appeared for trial and the surety company that posted his bond handed over the money to the state two months ago.

Since the indictment Mongoven's whereabouts has been a mystery.

EX-CASHIER ACCUSED

An alleged defalcation of $16,500 in the La Grange Trust and Savings bank was revealed yesterday after the arrest on Tuesday night of John Jenkins, 28 years old, 319 South Ashland avenue, La Grange, former assistant cashier of the institution. Jenkins is charged with having embezzled the sum over a period of nearly three years. The bank is fully protected by insurance.

Jenkins was arrested in his home after investigators from the insurance companies obtained a warrant charging larceny. According to Arthur Sanquist, president of the bank, Jenkins had been employed there eight years, and was forced to resign after a shortage of $5,000 had been found in his accounts early last June. At the time Jenkins made restitution for that amount, but a further audit of his books revealed the additional shortage. The first audit was made, Sanquist said, when the bank was not getting sufficient interest on outstanding bonds.

COUNTY BOARD PROVIDES CASH FOR BANK QUIZ

Nelson Acts to Realize on Realty Assets.

The county board yesterday made $25,000 available for an investigation into the closed banks of the county. The funds were obtained by transfers within the budget of the state's attorney's office. The action was taken at the request of the August grand jury, which made its final report to Chief Justice McGoorty of the Criminal court yesterday.

Another development in the bank situation yesterday was the announcement by State Auditor Nelson of a definite program to speed the sale of the real estate securities of the closed banks in order to make funds available to depositors.

In providing funds for the state's attorney's investigation the county board voted two cash transfers. In the first, $14,000 of the regular funds of the state's attorney's office were transferred to the prosecutor's contingent fund. In the second, $11,000 remaining in the special police department investigation fund was moved into the bank investigation fund.

Praise Work of Prosecutors.

The grand jury report praised Assistant State's Attorney Henry Ayers, who is in charge of the bank inquiry, for his work and suggested that the September grand jury continue the investigation. The September grand jury is to be sworn in Tuesday. The August grand jury returned indictments, voted Tuesday, against Edward McCabe, former president, Daniel Rives, former cashier, and William O. J. Hatstaedt, former vice president of the defunct Lake View State bank, charging the officials with making false statements to bank examiners.

The proposed action of State Auditor Nelson contemplates appraising real estate represented by securities in closed banks for the purpose of selling these securities. The proceeds would be distributed among the depositors of the banks. The plan contemplates an operating pool to handle the securities to reduce overhead expenses.

Will Make Test of Plan.

An appraisal of some properties to test the proposal is to be made by Harry S. Cutmore & Associates. Mr. Cutmore was ousted as director of appraisals of the board of assessors in May. The dismissal followed conflicts with the assessors on conduct of the reassessment. His appointment to make the appraisals for the bank plan was made by the auditor and a committee, composed of John A. Carroll, Thomas B. Roberts, and George W. Blomgren, all receivers for closed banks.

Cutmore fixed a price of $12.50 for the appraisal of each parcel of property. This was not the low bid, but his firm was selected because of the experience of its members. If the plan succeeds other appraisers are to share in the work, Mr. Nelson said.

Auditor Describes Proposal.

"We have decided to approach this project upon a conservative basis," said a statement by Auditor Nelson. "First, there will be selected for appraisal ten pieces of property represented by securities in each closed bank. These will be chosen as follows: Three residential properties, two two flat properties, three apartments with six or more flats, and two business properties.

"When the appraisal has been made on approximately 500 properties the mortgages will be pooled. They will be offered for sale. They should be attractive to individual capital or investment houses wishing to create a trust against which shares could be sold. All this would be done from the point of view of sound investments and to be helpful in this serious situation to lift mortgages, put money into them and return money to the depositors."

Lake Jury to Recall Nelson.

State's Attorney A. V. Smith of Lake county announced that State Auditor Nelson will be recalled Sept. 16 as a witness before the Lake county grand jury investigating the relations between the defunct Waukegan State bank and its Chicago correspondent, the National Bank of the Republic, now merged in the Central Republic Bank and Trust company. Nelson was questioned for two hours on Wednesday by the grand jury. His next visit will consume an entire day, Smith said.

Smith and Frank T. Fowler, foremen of the grand jury, conferred yesterday with auditors of the bank, who are to be called after Nelson. Officials of the correspondent bank are to be questioned next week. It was reported that Fred B. Whitney, receiver of the Waukegan bank, had said the bank should have been closed a year ago. Nelson denied the bank was insolvent at that time.

ALCOCK SILENT AS MAYOR'S VICE SQUAD IS FORMED

Four Policemen Fired by Merit Board.

Four policemen were discharged from the force and two others were suspended yesterday as Capt. Martin E. Mullen, formerly of the Austin avenue station, began the task of forming a vice and gambling squad which will work under direct orders of Mayor Cermak.

CAPT. MARTIN MULLEN.

Acting Commissioner Alcock remained mute throughout the day on the subject of the mayor's sudden entry into the actual administration of police department affairs and his order for the creation of Mullen's squad. At 4:30 p. m. the commissioner's secretary, after a prolonged absence in the office of his superior, emerged with the word that Alcock was "not yet back from lunch."

Mullen and Alcock Confer.

Capt. Mullen conferred for an hour with the acting commissioner. They discussed the men they will draft for the new squad, which will have headquarters at the Pekin station, in the heart of the south side, where the mayor announced a war against the gambling game, policy, some time ago.

The commissioner, without comment, followed out the mayor's order of Wednesday calling for the appointment of Capt. Mullen in charge of the new squad and the sending of Capt. Thomas Duffy to fill Capt. Mullen's place at the Austin station.

The four policemen discharged after hearings before the civil service commission, of which Richard J. Collins is president, were Harold W. O'Brien, Earl L. Gordon, Charles Enger, and Charles C. Olin, all patrolmen. The charges against them ranged from intoxication to conduct unbecoming an officer and neglect of duty.

Terrence J. Ryan and Victor Carlson were the patrolmen suspended. They were working out of the Des Plaines street station when they arrested as suspected holdup men a Jack Cohn and a man known as Martin at 104 South Halsted street. After the two men had been placed in a cell the policemen suddenly ordered that they be freed. They denied at a hearing that they had accepted a bribe of any sort. Their case was taken under advisement by the civil service commission.

Judge Compliments Police.

Mayor Cermak received a letter from Judge Harry M. Fisher in which the jurist revealed that he had made a study of European police systems. His conclusions were complimentary to the Chicago police department.

"Berlin, with a population of approximately 4,000,000, has 19,000 policemen, nearly three times the number of our force," the judge wrote. "For the large force they employ they are not doing as good work as we do, comparatively, and I am sure that if they had our problems, they would probably not do as well as they do now."

Mother and 5 Children Drowned in Their Auto

Columbus, O., Sept. 3.—(AP)—A 29 year old mother and her five children drowned when their automobile plunged from the road into the Scioto river ten miles north of here tonight.

The victims were Mrs. Sarah Jana Reichley, Columbus; Conrad, 9; Juanita, 6; Robert and Raymond, twins, 4, and Charles, 2.

AGED PARALYSIS VICTIM ABLE TO IDENTIFY SELF

The gray bearded patriarch who has lain paralyzed and speechless at the County hospital since July 2, when he was found unconscious in Grant park, yesterday identified himself as J. P. Pagennt. Unable to write with his right hand because that side of his body is completely paralyzed, and without the ability to utter a sound, he was barely able to scrawl with his left hand the name on a tablet held by a hospital attendant. H. could write no more, apparently not remembering his address or anything else about himself.

Pagennt appears to be between 65 and 70 years old. He is about 5 feet 9 inches tall, and weighs approximately 145 pounds. His clothing is in good condition, but there was no money in his pockets when he was found.

HOLIDAY AUTOS TO JAM ROADS; DETOURS LISTED

Expect 500,000 Cars in Week-End Rush.

This week-end is expected to offer one of the major traffic problems of the year. The holiday period of Saturday afternoon, Sunday, and Labor day, affording a two and a half day vacation for many workers, will draw thousands of city dwellers into the country for their last summer tour of the year, providing the weather is favorable. Also on the highways will be thousands of families returning from summer homes to enter their children in school with the opening of the summer on Tuesday.

Traffic experts estimate that there will be a million and a half persons using the pavements of the metropolitan area, in half a million automobiles. Extra police have been assigned to man the blockades at busy intersections where grade separations are needed and motorcycle men of the state and county forces have been ordered to speed up motorists loitering in the center lanes of the forty road improvements or stalling traffic with slow paces on the narrower roads.

Six Killed Last Year.

"Six persons were killed in the 1930 Labor day traffic congestion," said Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club. "This fact is cited as a warning to the motoring public to exercise unusual caution this weekend."

So few, if any, exceptions Chicagoland cities are free of any difficulties outside of congestion in the immediate vicinity of Chicago, due not alone to the normal inadequacy of traffic facilities near the city, but also to existence of many detours for construction projects. For the convenience of those making week-end trips and of those returning from their summer homes to motor on the main highways are given in the following list compiled by the motor club:

Works "Overtime"

For a whole year Mrs. Lillie E. Osborne, 5640 South Seeley avenue, charged yesterday before Judge Harry B. Miller in the Superior court, her husband, George, an employé in the city water bureau, arrived home around midnight every night and told her that he had been working overtime. She never found any extra money in his pay envelope, however, and was puzzled over his whereabouts until Christmas, 1928, when he received a number of expensive presents from women, she charged. Judge Miller granted her a divorce and $15 a week for the support of her daughter, Dolores, 2 years old.

B. W. MUDGE, SON OF RAIL OFFICIAL, ACCUSED BY KIN

Charge He Took Funds of Mother's Estate.

Burton W. Mudge, son of the late Henry U. Mudge, an official of the Rock Island railroad, and himself a wealthy Chicago business man, yesterday was charged with having fraudulently diverted the $300,000 estate of his mother, Arwilda, to his own use.

The charge was made in a bill for an accounting filed in the Circuit court. Mudge was made defendant with the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company. The complainants are Hugh U. Mudge of Denver, a brother; Mrs. Bessie S. Mudge, 5447 Kenmore avenue, and Mrs. Anna Mudge of Kansas City, widows of two other brothers, all of whom were given equal shares in the estate under the will of Mrs. Arwilda Mudge, the wife of Henry Mudge, who died March 30, 1927.

Seeks to Recover $14,000.

The action, filed by Attorney Grover C. Niemeyer seeks only to recover $14,000, which, the bill says, Mudge fraudulently converted to his own use with the knowledge and consent of the bank. The alleged transaction, according to the bill, took place between Sept. 6, 1926, and March 30, 1927.

The bill, however, charges that Mudge owes the estate of his mother, of which he was trustee, $186,000, which he is alleged to have taken in cash, and an additional $100,000 worth of stocks and bonds which he is accused of having placed in his own accounts. Other bills asking a complete accounting will be filed later, Attorney Niemeyer said.

It is explained in the bill that shortly after the death of Henry U. Mudge in 1920, his widow made an agreement with her sons under which her estate was placed in trust, with Burton Mudge as trustee.

The income was to be shared up to the time of her death after which it was to be equally divided among her sons or their heirs. The agreement was signed Oct. 22, 1921, according to the bill. Her will was filed for probate in June, 1927.

He Denies Accusations.

Mudge, who lives at 653 Wood path, Highland Park and is head of Mudge & Co., a railway supply concern at 80 West Jackson boulevard, last evening denied the charges in the bill.

"The beneficiaries have had many conferences and I was under the impression that only the bank was to be named defendant in this present suit," he said. "I am surprised to hear that I was also named a defendant. This matter is a fight between the beneficiaries and the bank."

CITES 2 BILLION FARM LOSS TO BALK RAIL BOOST

Prices of Produce Still Falling, Economist Says.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Farmers of the United States, despite all the forms of governmental aid that they have had, are in a hard situation this year, according to testimony given by Dr. L. H. Bean, senior economist of the federal department of agriculture, before the interstate commerce commission at the Hotel Sherman yesterday.

Visitors to the hearings of the commission, which are being held in three separate rooms, heard hard times stories from various industrial and producing groups in support of the contention that they would not be able to pay the 15 per cent increase in freight rates which the railroads are seeking as the way out of their own troubles. Lumber, fruit, and paper mill men told of their plight, but the worst picture of all was drawn from the farmer statistics.

Shows Drop in Farm Income.

Dr. Bean, who had prepared a special statement for this hearing at the request of the commission, presented the following statement for the hard pressed railroad men to digest:

"Estimates of income from farm production for 1930 indicate a gross income of about $9,347,000,000, compared with $11,911,000,000 in 1929, or a decline of 22 per cent. This is the lowest estimate of gross income since 1921.

"This decline was accompanied by only a moderate decrease in the expenses of production, most of the costs remaining practically unchanged, except food costs, farm wages and purchases of machinery, and thus the decline in gross income reduced the amount of income available for capital, labor and management by about 33 per cent, $5,579,000,000 in 1929 to $3,750,000,000 in 1930.

"This amount falls short by about $346,000,000 of a wage allowance for the farm operators' labor, even at reduced wage rates, and leaves no net income available for capital or management. As a result of this unprofitable year, land values declined more during 1930 than in any year since 1922 and inventory value of live stock on farms also declined sharply.

Blames Business Depression.

"This abrupt change in the farm income situation was brought about by the general business depression in this country and abroad which set in during the last half of 1929 and continued in increasing force during the marketing period for the 1930 production. The general depression has worked its havoc on agricultural income in 1930, just as in 1920-'21, largely through a drastic reduction in prices arising, not from excessive farm output, but rather from forces of domestic and foreign demand beyond the control of farmers.

"Evaluating the unpaid labor of farmers and their families at the lower farm wage rates of 1930, it appears that farm operators in 1930 not only failed to earn their wages but also failed to earn anything on their capital and for their managerial contribution. In addition, their capital investment fell in value about $4,000,000,000, or about 14 per cent, as a result of the sharp decline in farm real estate values and in the inventory value of live stock on farms.

"Farm operators on the average barely earned for their labor and management the annual wage rate paid an average farm hand in six years—1924-'29—and in 1930 their earnings fell short of an annual farm wage of $535 by $110.

Family Buying Power Cut 34 Per Cent.

"The reduced net farm incomes have been only slightly offset by lower living costs, for prices of goods bought by farmers for household consumption averaged 6 per cent lower in 1930 than in 1929. Adjusted for the 6 per cent lower level of living costs, farm incomes available for living expenses show a decline in the purchasing power of the average family of about 34 per cent from that of 1929."

On this year's prospect, Dr. Bean said:

"With the business depression continuing in 1931, the output marketed during the first eight months of this year has sold for prices much lower than that of last year. Prices of meat animals were nearly 30 per cent lower on July 15, 1931, than a year earlier, and the prices of dairy and poultry products 24 per cent lower.

Sees Lower Farm Prices.

"The major crops have not yet been made, and the prices the growers will realize are, of course, uncertain, but taking crop conditions as of Aug. 1 it appears that in the aggregate there is indicated a larger output than in 1930, which is being marketed at a level of prices considerably below that which prevailed during the 1930-'31 season.

"Prices received by farmers for grains were 40 per cent lower on July 15 of this year compared with July 15 last year. Prices of fruits and vegetables were about 35 per cent lower and prices of cotton 29 per cent lower.

"Because of these further price recessions in 1931, compared with 1930, counteracting to such large extent the increased volume, the gross income from the 1931 farm production marketed so far this year has not only shown a substantial decrease from the corresponding income of 1930 but also a considerable decline below that of 1921.

Farm Wages Reduced.

"As was the case last year, some of this continued reduction in farm income has been partly offset by lower costs, for farm wages were further reduced in 1931 and prices of commodities used in production also continued to decline, but the decline in costs has not been as large as the reduction in the 1931 gross income.

"Between July, 1929, and July, 1931, the level of prices received by farmers declined 44 per cent. High farm tax rates as a whole prevail in every state. Mortgage debts per acre value of crops have also risen, like taxes, to abnormally high levels."

Lumberman Opposes Increase.

Adolph Pfund, secretary of the National Retail Lumber Dealers' association, declared that small house construction must be stimulated to bring about a noticeable improvement in the economic situation and that an increase in freight rates would retard such a revival. The increase would result, in his opinion, in increasing the cost of the average small home and would delay construction plans.

"We believe," he said, "that the freight advance asked by the railroads would react to the disadvantage of the railroads and of the entire building construction industry."

Samuel Frazier, secretary of the International Fruit association, testified that 73 per cent of the fruit in New York state is handled by truck and said that if the freight rates were raised all the business would go to trucks. If there are not enough trucks now, he said, they would be built at the rate of a thousand a day if the American people demanded it.

JOHN M. SMITH.

Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 3.—(AP)—New light was thrown today on the activities of John M. Smith, 38, of Perry, Farmer-Labor candidate for governor in 1928, between Feb. 3, when his burning truck was found near Denison, and June 23, when he was found bound with wire near Garner.

The question, however, of the origin of the corpse found in the truck still baffled state agents this afternoon. They had spent the day in quizzing Smith, his wife, and the 18 year old girl, Pauline Shaw, whom he married bigamously in Elgin, Kas., March 11.

State Agent Myron Tullar said that Smith arrived in Elgin about Feb. 7. His movements from that time on have been traced through Chautauqua and Wichita, Kas., several localities in Omaha, and in several Iowa cities.

He met Miss Shaw about the middle of February, representing himself as a wealthy business man on vacation and recuperating from an illness.

SOLDIERS FIGHT MOBS IN CHILE AS RIOTS SPREAD

Troops Are Ordered to Capture Rebels.

The government also announced it would begin shortly a public works program which would give employment to 25,000 persons and pay approximately $625,000 a month in wages.

Seek to Appease Jobless.

The government's announcement did not reveal whence would come the funds for the public works proposals. The action, however, was construed to be an effort to dissuade unemployed Chileans and others, whose jobs pay only about 25 to 35 cents a day, from turning willing ears to the arguments of the agitators.

A crack bombing squadron of the air corps awaited orders here to proceed to Coquimbo if necessary to bring the revolting navy to terms. The machines were loaded with bombs, ammunition and extra supplies of gasoline.

The government continued to believe tonight the mutineers would surrender, but there was no indication from the rebels of what their plans might be, since they were joined by the remainder of the fleet.

Reds After Navy's Support.

Communist leaders were attempting tonight to get spokesmen at Coquimbo to ask the support of the fleet for their cause. Loyal leaders did not know how seriously to regard the communist threat. They pointed out, however, the civilian forces were prepared to oppose any land rebellion and heretofore whenever government troops fired into crowds listening to communist agitation the listeners invariably fled, leaving the agitators without a following.

Mounted police, aided by street patrols, dispersed a meeting at noon on the Boulevard Alameda after several buses had been wrecked by the demonstrators.

In an attempt to suppress further demonstrations the government decreed a cancellation of all rights of public assembly and placed a ban on radical newspapers.

Chile's navy is the largest in the Pacific with the exception of the United States and Japanese naval forces. It has recently undergone many improvements. The fleet includes two battleships, four cruisers, seven destroyers and nine submarines, besides other smaller coast guard and auxiliary vessels.

A gang of four bandits raided the Midwest Grocery company yesterday at 2434 South Western avenue, forced ten employés to lie face downward on the floor, and escaped with $2,975. Two of the men took part in the actual holdup, another was stationed at the door as lookout, and the fourth kept the motor of the bandit car running at the curb.

The gunmen entered the offices late in the afternoon and ordered the employés to lie on the floor. They obeyed, and the men searched through the office for the money. "Where's the dough?" one of them demanded of the manager, A. A. Zbrojewski, 5507 South May street.

The manager led them to the cashier's cage and told Miss Harriet S. Rattkow, 30 years old, 1357 North Ashland avenue, to give them all the money she had. She produced $2,900 in bills and $75 in silver. "Let the little stuff go," the lookout called from the door.

One of the bandits stuffed the bills in his coat pockets, looked at the silver for a moment, and then crowded it in with the bills. The men backed out of the door, climbed into their car, and sped south in Western avenue.

ENGINEER CRUSHED TO DEATH.

Ottawa, Ill., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—William Bancau, 55, of Peoria, a Chicago and Alton engineer, met death when the gas electric engine he was driving struck a truck driven by Gordon Flint of Pontiac at a grade crossing.

GRAND JURY AT CAPITAL PROBES POLICE CRUELTY

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Washington, D. C., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—Washington's police brutality investigation, which has heretofore been confined to specific cases, broadened today into a sweeping inquiry to determine whether the "third degree" as a system exists in the capital's police department.

The district grand jury, which yesterday began reviewing witnesses and considering data collected by department of justice agents who conducted the investigation at the invitation of President Hoover, has summoned two police officials to testify as to their knowledge of the existence of third degree methods here.

In addition to the five cases presented to the grand jury yesterday and today, it is understood that department of justice agents are investigating about 25 other instances of alleged brutality on the part of local police.

HOELLEN, MASSEN WILL BE FOES IN CONGRESS RACE

Take Field in 10th as Chindblom Moves.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Congressman Carl R. Chindblom's announcement yesterday that he will move to Evanston in order to run for reelection in the new 13th district immediately took the lid off the situation in the new 10th district, of which the congressman now is a resident.

Hardly had the first copies of the Chindblom statement been distributed when it became known that at least two formidable candidates had appeared for the Republican nomination in the 10th. They are John J. Hoellen and John Massen.

Hoellen is both alderman and Republican committeeman from the 47th ward. Massen is both alderman and Republican committeeman from the 48th ward.

Both Fought Old Régime.

One other similarity is that they both are identified with factions opposed to the old city hall machine. Hoellen is a Brundage man and in the last mayoralty primary supported Judge John H. Lyle. Massen is the only Denesn ward committeeman in the city and last spring backed Arthur F. Albert for mayor.

Regardless of what other entries there may be in this district it is believed the Hoellen-Massen contest will be a good one. Each is expected to have solid backing from his own territory and the wards, having been recently redistricted, are almost equal in size, the 47th beating the 48th by about 3,000 in population.

Chindblom to Run Again.

Congressman Chindblom's statement was the announcement of his candidacy in the new district covering the northeast corner of the state, extending from the southern limits of Evanston to the Wisconsin state line. All this territory was part of the old 10th district, which Chindblom has represented for several terms. In the past he has been especially strong in Lake county.

The congressman said that beginning on Oct. 1 his home address will be the North Shore hotel, Evanston, but that he will continue his present congressional office at 1531 Foster avenue until the expiration of his present term.

In his statement he did not mention the wet and dry issue, but it has been understood for some time that since the triple referendum on that question last year he has intended to vote for the modification of the Volstead act if that question comes before congress.

Both Districts Vote Wet.

Both his present district and the district into which he is now moving voted in favor of modification. He is expected to announce his change of position when the campaign opens.

The new 13th already has a flood of Republican candidates. They include State Representative Ralph W. Church, a consistent dry, Stephen A. Day, an ardent anti-prohibitionist, James Simpson Jr., Samuel M. Hastings, former president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, and Charles West, a service man. Others who may enter the race, their friends believe, are State's Attorney A. V. Smith of Lake county, a candidate against Chindblom last year, and Mayor Charles H. Bartlett of Evanston.

NEW LAWMAKER URGES RELIEF IN DRY LAW CHANGE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—Modification of the Volstead act was urged upon President Hoover today by Representative W. R. White [Rep., O.], a new addition to the wet group in the house. Mr. White, a former editor in Toledo, told Mr. Hoover that a change in the dry law permitting the sale of wines and beer would solve two of the President's biggest problems. It would, he said, aid the administration in balancing the budget, and at the same time supply employment to at least a million workers now unemployed.

Although no figures were given out by Mr. White, statisticians have estimated upwards of a billion dollars could be added to the annual treasury receipts by the imposition of excise taxes on alcoholic beverages.

Submits Relief Program.

The new Toledo congressman included his modification proposal, which he said should be adopted pending repeal of the eighteenth amendment, in an exhaustive unemployment relief program. The White plan, which was left with the President, urged a special session of congress, flotation of an eight and a half billion dollar bond issue, construction of the St. Lawrence waterway, and numerous other projects. Mr. White has not yet taken office.

"The army of men who would be directly called into employment by the revival of the alcoholic beverage market can not be estimated below one million," he said. "Producing plants would require rehabilitation, transportation equipment would be necessary, sales organizations would rise, and the demand for real estate be promoted.

Also Would Aid Market.

"In addition," White told newspaper men at the White House, "modification of the Volstead act would supply a market for 150 million bushels of grain and hundreds of millions of bushels of fruit."

PLEDGES QUIZ OF CONVICT'S STORY OF PAROLE FEES

Prosecutor Will Oppose Plea for Freedom.

State's Attorney Swanson announced last evening that he will investigate the story of Roman Hempel, convict serving 1 to 14 years in the penitentiary for manslaughter, who told the state board of pardons and paroles that he had paid $2,850 as fees in effort to get a parole. Mr. Swanson said that as soon as the transcript of the evidence before the pardon board is transmitted to him he will assign an assistant prosecutor to investigate.

Hempel in his story to the parole board on Tuesday said that he paid $600 to former Congressman Stanley Kunz, $1,300 to State Senator William F. Gillmeister and $950 to Attorney Charles L. Daly, 7607 Sheridan road. John Cipenski, 5052 West 26th place, Cicero, a friend of Hempel, who said he had served as go-between in the negotiations, is expected to be questioned by the prosecutor.

Prosecutor to Oppose Parole.

Assistant State's Attorney Elmer Holmgren, who successfully prosecuted Hempel on a charge of manslaughter with an automobile, said that because of the facts of the case, he will assist F. J. Skala, son of the victim, in opposing parola.

The state's attorney's records show that Hempel, supposedly while intoxicated, struck and killed Mrs. Catherine Skala, 2455 South Harding avenue, with an automobile on Aug. 7, 1928. Mrs. Skala was standing on the sidewalk at Central Park avenue and 24th street. Hempel, who was trying to escape from a previous accident, ran his car on the sidewalk and it struck her. It is charged that he did not stop at Central Park avenue, which is a through street.

Hempel, according to his statement to the police when he was arrested one week later, went out for a ride and picked up two women friends. He first crashed into an automobile, slightly injuring several passengers. The men occupants of this car started to take him to a police station, and he fled. He next hit a truck in his efforts to get away and then drove on the sidewalk and killed Mrs. Skala.

Case Continued Eleven Times.

Prosecutor Holmgren said that he had no knowledge of any attempt at bribery at the time of the trial, although Mrs. Skala's son charges that Hempel tried to bribe the state's witnesses. Hempel was indicted on Sept. 10, 1925, and the grand jury set his bond at $10,000.

Hempel, however, obtained a reduction of his bond to $3,000 in Judge John J. Sullivan's court. The case was continued eleven times before it was finally tried on June 26, 1929, in Judge Marcus Kavanagh's Criminal court. A jury found Hempel guilty after a trial lasting one day. He did not appeal after the new trial motion was overruled on July 5, 1929.

LOAN COMPANY OFFICE ROBBED.

Two bandits yesterday took $135 in a robbery of the Commonwealth Loan company, 4803 Lincoln avenue, after binding the cashier, Miss Mary Curtis, 54 years old, 1620½ Waller avenue, and a customer, Louis Incerso, 2525 Leland avenue.

SOUND WARNING AGAINST DEALS OF LOAN SHARKS

Found Preying on Those Forced to Borrow.

Warnings against the unscrupulous practices of loan sharks were issued yesterday by the racket division of the state's attorney's office and the legal aid bureau of the United Charities. Unlicensed money lenders are taking advantage of the business depression to prey upon the unfortunates who must augment their occasional wages with small loans, according to these agencies.

Complaints are received daily by the police and legal aid bureaus from victims of the loan sharks, who are forced to pay usurious rates of interest. In many cases as high as 20 per cent a month, or 240 per cent a year, as compared with the legal maximum of 7 per cent for unlicensed money lenders.

Complaints Received Daily.

"The activities of the unlicensed money leaders have become more reprehensible and more far reaching as a result of the depression," said Miss Irene McCormick, attorney for the legal aid bureau. "We receive complaints against them daily. But the unlicensed operators, or loan sharks, are not to be confused with the licensed companies which charge the legal rate of 3½ per cent interest a month on loans of $300 or less. We have no complaints against them."

Two concrete cases, one a civil and the other a criminal action, were cited as typical examples of the loan sharks' methods. The criminal case, in which J. H. Knoblock, an unlicensed money lender operating at 35 North Dearborn street, is the defendant, was continued yesterday to Sept. 15 in the Chicago avenue court.

Seeks to Collect $332.

Knoblock, according to Assistant State's Attorney Donald Thompson, sought to collect $332 on a loan of $30 to Robert C. Hall. Hall, it is charged, borrowed $30 from Knoblock in the fall of 1927 and paid interest on the amount until the following summer. He then obtained another loan, which, together with accrued interest, brought his indebtedness up to $60. A subsequent loan of $25, and then one of $15, were obtained from Knoblock, according to the complaint.

During all this time Hall is said to have been paying interest, but he says no records until Aug. 28, 1929, a fact he does not know how much he paid. However, since he started his records, he has paid $232 in interest, the state charges. When Hall obtained the last loan of $15, he allegedly was induced to make a wage assignment in the amount of $100 to Knoblock, and when he stopped paying interest last June, a garnishment was served upon his employers.

Civil Action Is Cited.

The civil action, in which Carl M. Fiste, another unlicensed operator with offices at 135 South Dearborn street, is suing William Blahn for $377 upon a note for $77 based upon an original loan of $15, was continued in the small claims court yesterday to Sept. 14.

White alleges that his claim is based upon the note for $77 and its provisions for interest at 7 per cent a year, plus $25 attorney's fees if placed in the hands of an attorney for collection, plus $10 for change of location. He further avers that $42 has been paid upon the note, which leaves a balance of $76.51.

Blahn's answer states that the $42 was paid in the form of interest at 10 per cent a month on a loan of $15 he obtained from White. He charges that when he refused to pay further interest on the $15 loan, White filed a garnishment with his employer, holding up his wages. Then, he states, he was forced to sign the $77 note, ignorant of his rights and desirous of securing the release of his wages.

Prosecutor Starts Inquiry.

This case was reported yesterday to the racket division of the state's attorney's office and assigned Prosecutor Irwin Duffucy for investigation. Mr. Duffucy said he would ascertain if facts in the case and determine whether there are other complainants. If it can be shown that the rate of interest charged by an unlicensed money lender exceeds 7 per cent he can be prosecuted for usury, Mr. Duffucy said. The penalty upon conviction is a maximum fine of $500 and a maximum of six months in jail.

Blahn charges that White's regular rate of interest is 10 per cent a pay day or 25 per cent a month. He said he was charged only 10 per cent a month on the first loan he obtained from White, but that when he applied again White informed him the rate was 10 per cent a pay day. White now is alleged to have agreed to the 7 per cent a month rate, declaring that a mistake had been made on the first loan.

SERRITELLA AND HOCHSTEIN ON TRIAL SEPT. 21

State Senator Dan Serritella, Capone lieutenant and city sealer under the former city administration, and his former chief deputy, Harry Hochstein, were ordered to trial on Sept. 21 on charges of conspiracy yesterday by Judge John Prystalski in the criminal court. Serritella and Hochstein were indicted following an investigation by the state's attorney's office of short weight sales by merchants.

Serritella was represented in court by Attorney Miles J. Devine. He stated that the law firm of Nash & Nash had just been retained for his case and they would like more time in which to study the case. Attorney Charles J. Short, representing Hochstein, asked that the matter be put over to the October term of court.

"You have had two months now," said Judge Prystalski. "There is no reason why the case should not go to trial."

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

THE JOYS OF BEING A CHINESE.

With only the briefest of notice Chinese residents of western Mexico have been ordered to pack up and clear out. It is estimated that from 8,000 to 10,000 individuals are to be deported. Many of them are merchants with well established businesses. Others have invested money and years of labor in building up small holdings. Virtually all the property of all these Chinese will be confiscated because they cannot carry it with them. In the past this kind of thing has often been the harbinger of revolution; the wealth stolen from Chinese has financed the rebels.

It is said that the present deportations have been ordered by vigilantes and that neither the Mexican federal government nor the governments of the states have given official sanction to the movement. That is a distinction which the Chinese, with all their intellectual subtlety, will find it somewhat difficult to grasp. If the governments have not ordered the deportations they have not protected the Chinese in their rights, which amounts to precisely the same thing.

The Chinese government, of course, has been able to do nothing by way of protecting its nationals. The Chinese minister has threatened to resign, and perhaps that will bring the desired result, but it is apparent that the threat does not carry much weight. Mexico is the stakeholder. In Mexico lie the possessions of the prospective deportees, the wealth which they have acquired for themselves and, incidentally, for the enrichment of Mexico. To many Mexicans the opportunity to seize these accumulations will seem to overbalance any inconveniences which might arise from a mere rupture of diplomatic relations; and from the individual viewpoint of those likely to benefit from the expropriations the reasoning is no doubt sound enough.

China cannot enforce the rights of her citizens, and therefore her citizens abroad have no rights which are not subject to the caprices of greed and envy. That is pretty much the situation in which many well meaning Americans would place this country through disarmament. They might meditate on the thought that for every Chinese dollar invested in foreign lands there are hundreds of thousands of American dollars so invested. Unless we propose to convert our investments abroad into gifts we must have the means at our disposal to prevent confiscation and repudiation.

The mere existence of our navy is, ordinarily, sufficient for the purpose. To pretend that the possession of a navy is an immorality, the position taken by the religious lobby in Washington, is, in effect, to deprive the backward nations of the benefits of modern technology, modern sanitation, and a higher standard of living. The lobbyists overlook the obvious fact that if the navy did not exist in all its might to protect American lives and capital abroad capital would not be invested abroad. Our loss would be considerable, but it would be less than that of the borrowing countries.

CRIME IN THE NEWS CENTERS.

New York and Chicago are the centers of this country for the collection and distribution of news other than that of the political nature furnished by Washington. That is true not only for this side of the world but for the other side. News goes abroad under a New York, Washington or Chicago date line. Consequently an event in New York or Chicago will have a news distribution which an event of similar character elsewhere would not get.

A deceiving appearance is the result of this news concentration. It may seem that the news centers have criminal experiences, for instance, all their own. Apparently a great contrast is presented between l in the metropolitan area and life in the smaller communities. The Quiet Dell murders might be considered with that fallacy in mind. The news of a crime in the smaller place, unless it is of peculiar atrocity or involves nationally known people, may not get much beyond the town limits. A crime of no greater significance in the metropolitan district will be widely reported and will be taken to indicate the prevalence of general lawlessness.

Citizen for citizen, head for head, the smaller city turns out a record identical with that of the great city, or worse. The homicide figures give the top of the list to a number of other cities, but there is no general circulation of the news of the crimes which give them this preëminence. In the metropolitan news center criminals make news. Elsewhere they merely commit crimes and the contrasted appearance thus set up is deceitful.

It is, of course, the nature of a great city to attract extremes. It gets the best effort of the most worthy people and it draws to it the activities of some of the worst. The latter is the price it pays for its virtues.

New York's mistake was in trying to defeat the publicity which flows naturally with metropolitan events. The effect of this when it is attempted with the news of crime is merely an injurious self-deception. In denying a consequence it increases the cause.

A FEE FOR STREET PARKING.

The New York Automobile club has started suit to test the right of the town of Long Beach to charge motorists a fee for permission to park on the public streets. The club fears that if the ordinance is not found to be illegal other communities will adopt similar measures and motorists will be obliged to pay millions of dollars each year in additional taxation.

The legal issues are interesting. It is the belief that at common law, at least, the dedication of property for a public highway does not constitute the transfer of the fee from the property owner to the municipality. If this is so, then it should follow that any revenue derived from the use of the street in front of any holding belongs not to the municipality but to the property owner. He should also have the right to prohibit promiscuous parking in front of his property.

The decision in this and other cases bearing on the question of the use of the city street for automobile storage will be watched with interest because they bear directly upon the solution of one of the most troublesome of modern urban problems. Parking is frequently a menace to life; a line of automobiles obscures the vision of the driver in the middle of the street and prevents him from seeing cars or pedestrians crossing his path until it is too late to avoid them. Parking also interferes with the flow of traffic by narrowing the available roadway. It seems probable that the time is coming when every building, particularly in busier districts, will have to provide parking space for automobiles which will not interfere with traffic, particularly if the building wishes to attract automobile trade. As outdoor parking lots are built up, business houses and office buildings will have to provide automobile storage within their own walls.

Promiscuous parking on the public streets, whether paid for or not, is destined to become an increasing nuisance. The sooner it is determined whose rights are invaded the sooner those rights can be enforced and the sooner the nuisance will be abated.

THE NEW LANE HIGH SCHOOL.

Work on the new Lane Technical High school at Addison street and Western avenue has been virtually suspended because there is no money in the treasury to pay the contractors. Perhaps, then, it is not too late to change the plans. The school has been advertised as the largest in the world. That distinction may cause the bosoms of child minded members of the school board to swell with pride, but to any one who has the welfare of the pupils at heart such a school can only be regarded as a capital mistake.

The ideal school is the small school. When a school becomes so large that the head of it does not know all is pupils intimately the school is too big. When the school is so large that the principal has difficulty in knowing even his teachers intimately, that school is certain to be an inferior educational institution. It may represent a large outlay of the taxpayers' money and it may contain all the frills in the way of dancing studios and swimming pools that the inventive mind of the architect can put in it and still it will be second rate or worse.

Probably the board of education lacks the money to build enough schools of ideal size, but there is no justification whatever for going to the opposite extreme and building such educational mopstrosities as "the biggest school in the world." In authorizing the new Lane school the board has placed itself on an intellectual level with marathon dancers, flagpole sitters and pie-eating champions. They also go in for records.

REAL AMERICANISM.

A speaker at the Legion convention appealed to Legionnaires to "put aside their playboyishness and practice real Americanism to save the United States from a greater menace than they faced on the battlefields of France." The method of practicing real Americanism recommended by the speaker is to write to your congressman.

Perhaps it has become real Americanism to write to our congressmen when we want anything, but if it has, Americanism doesn't mean what it did to the men who made America. It may be that America is facing a greater menace than anything threatening us in the war. But if so the menace is not what the speaker thinks it is. It is nothing spectacular like bolshevism, but the surrender of the real Americanism which is not represented by writing to your congressman. Americans have always cherished the privilege of writing to their congressmen, but real Americanism knows what to write about. It doesn't ask and it doesn't want the national government to try to solve all its problems, from the cradle to the grave. It has always had a wholesome distrust of government and an invigorating faith in the ability of the freeman to solve his problems and the problems of a free society. But now the air is full of demands upon government, demands without support in the past, justification in the present, or regard for the future. They are a departure from real Americanism, and if yielded to in our moment of weakness they will destroy it. This is truly a greater menace than any foreign war could hold for us, and the first of our duties today is to realize its full significance.

YALE TO CARRY ON.

[Columbus Sunday Dispatch.]

In these troublous times, when prophets of ill are telling us that everything is going to smash, and going at no slow pace, the wise men of Yale university are acting just as if the world intended to go right on. They have just now taken out permits for the erection of three great new building additions to the university plant, one to cost $1,300,000, the second $850,000, and the third $530,000.

Yale is acting just as if civilization were going right on, gradually rising to a higher level, in spite of the fact that the world has seen two bad years, and is not yet certain just how soon the unfavorable conditions will be eliminated. Men will still be wanting higher education, Yale thinks, even in larger numbers than heretofore, and will still have money to pay their tuition, laboratory fees and board and room charges, even in larger numbers than before—and so Yale is willing right now, without waiting for a genuine rise in stock prices, to put more than two and a half millions into an enlargement of her educational facilities.

And we suspect that Yale is right, notwithstanding the assertion of the president of the great university that lies between Morningside park and Riverside drive that present conditions are to be compared not with other modern industrial depressions, but with such conditions as attended the downfall of the Roman empire and were followed by the so-called "Dark Ages."

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

WELL, IT WAS PRETTY SAD NEWS that came over the wires from Washington yesterday. Anyhow it sounded pretty sad the first time you read it, but if you thought it all over and if you were a Democrat it didn't seem so sad after all. The news was that both parties, the G. O. P. and the Democrats, had reported they were stone broke and didn't know where the heck the money was coming from to run the presidential campaigns next year. The big millionaire lads, who usually throw in great wads of coin when the hat is passed, are all setting up a yell about their being in the breadline when any one says a word to them about saving the party and making the garage safe for two cars. But the second thought that the Democrats get on the story is that, anyhow, they've the Republicans dragged right down to their level when it comes to campaign funds, and that when there's no money to hand around among the voters they always get mad at the Republicans and march right over to the polls and vote for anything that walks around on two legs if it says it's a Democrat. So if you look at it that way the news is pretty good after all for the Tom Jefferson lads.

LULLABY FOR A MODERN MERE.

Swing high,
Swing low,
Daddy's business graph must go
Through the most absurd gyrations,
So that he may garner rations.
Otherwise he'd have to make
Junior live on patty-cake.

Swing low,
Swing high,
Daddy's debts have reached the sky.
Junior needs a longer crib
And a rattle and a bib.
Mother wants a larger flat
And a new Eugenie hat.

Sleep, love,
Mother's near.
There is nothing more to fear.
Daddy's doing splendid tricks
With some little grape-juice bricks.
We won't have to buy a tent
Now that we can pay the rent.

Wake, sweet,
Hear my song.
We'll go shopping all day long.
We will buy all sorts of things:
Patou gowns and teething rings,
Siamese cats with pedigrees
And a shiny Mercedes.

DOWN IN CHILE they overturn a new government as fast as one is started. Up here in the United States the question is whether a president after serving two terms can have a third one, but down in Chile if a president elected in the forenoon can hold on to his job until after luncheon he thinks he is in luck.

THEY FIRED four middies from the naval academy at Annapolis because they had a fist fight during the summer cruise with policemen in Copenhagen. Well, what are our naval cadets expected to do when they graduate and become officers on our men-of-war and cruisers? Crochet tidies and embroider pink elephants on doilies or fight? If they scattered the Copenhagen police and chased 'em down an alley the middies should be kept in the service. If the Copenhagen police gave 'em a good licking then, of course, it would be all right to tie a can to the middies.

Form Is Unimportant Unless It's Clad in a Bathing Suit.

R. H. L.—Last week one of those birds who have been to school had the temerity to assail our American English. Heywood Broun smacked his sassy face with, "The essence is more important than the form!" All right, Hey? Then you could have no objection to "If I'd a knowed I coulda rode I'd a went. But if I'd a went I couldn't of et!" This remark was made to me by a moving picture executive. He meant that he would have gone with us on location had he known there was room in the car, but he would have missed his dinner.

WE WERE JUST ABOUT to pen a hot paragraph about something or other yesterday when there was a wild scream of sirens down in the Boul. Mich, and we looked to see two motor cops clearing the way for Greeter Gaw in his great white automobile, which whizzed by like a meteor. And darned if it didn't knock every sign of an idea out of our noggin for the next fifteen minutes. Wish Greeter Gaw would use some other street when we're working. He gets us all excited so we can't work.

LONDON CABLES yesterday said an English baronet, holder of an ancient and distinguished title, had been added to the list of Britishers applying for the dole. It used to be that British baronets realized on their titles by marrying American heiresses, but these days the dole is probably more regular and a little bit more of a certainty.

IT'S RAINING so hard all around this great middle west that the long drought not only has its back broken right in two but auto drivers complain to high heaven because the highways in some places are several feet under water, and the golfers moan and groan that they have to dive to find the putting greens. It seems almost impossible to please everybody.

RECIPES FOR LARVICIDES.

FROBISHER and Shannon introduce us to a new group of larvicides to be used against mosquitoes. The most powerful member of this group is iodine. When 1 part iodine crystals is added to 1 million parts water, the wigglers or larvae are killed after an hour or more of exposure. The younger forms are promptly killed, and the older ones finally succumb. Pupae are much more resistant. The drug can only be used to advantage against the wigglers. On the other hand, prussiate of potash in solution is not harmful to wigglers, though it will kill adult mosquitoes instantly, or nearly so, on exposure.

Iodine in solution in water, 1 part to 1 million, does not impart any taste or change the appearance of the water. It may eventually be found that iodine in the drinking water in that strength is a good quality, but, for the present at least, Frobisher and Shannon advise against its use. They think the dosage cannot be regulated closely enough, and if the water be used for indiscriminate drinking it may be consumed by some who will be harmed by it. They advise that its use be limited to waters stored in cisterns, tanks, and barrels for domestic purposes, but not for drinking.

Bromine has the same action, but it is less effective. Chlorine will kill larvae when dissolved in water in strengths of 1 to 10,000. This may prove a more satisfactory agent than iodine, though the dosage must be heavier.

Time will be required to determine whether any of them can be safely used in drinking waters.

There are many larvicides in use against mosquitoes. Among these are Paris green, some of the boracic preparations, and tobacco tea. Each is effective. The objection to these is that they are poisonous and when they are used precautions must be taken to prevent them from killing man and animals. Fortunately, they have been so used up until now that they have been found effective and also safe. However, no one advises the use of Paris green as a larvicide in water barrels, cisterns, and tanks, and these are favorite mosquito breeding places. Iodine is safer than arsenic and perhaps it may supply just what was needed for stored waters within the house.

INFECTED GALL BLADDER.

D. F. G. writes:

1. What are the symptoms of infected gall bladder and gallstones?
2. Can these be overcome without an operation?
3. What diet do you think is proper for one suffering from the above diseases?

REPLY.

1. Among the symptoms common to them are acidity of the stomach, dyspepsia and belching. Pain is more likely to be bad in gallstones. So is jaundice.
2. The symptoms of infected gall bladder and of gallstones frequently subside without operation.
3. A person with either should eat carefully. The evening meal should be a light one. The other meals should be moderate as to quantity and simple as to quality. Meat should be eaten sparingly. I do not think it wise to eat eggs, condiments, spices, or seasonings, or to drink alcoholic beverages. I am opposed to fat or grease in the diet of gall bladder cases, though most physicians disagree with that.

WHITE CORPUSCLES.

H. C. writes: I have learned from a recent complete physical examination that I have a deficiency in white corpuscles. I have 80 odd of red, which, I understand, is plenty and above normal.

What can one do to make more white corpuscles? Is there anything to eat that will do it? Just what effect does this lack of corpuscles have on the system?

REPLY.

If you have no other symptoms you have nothing to worry about or to take medicine for. There is no reason to change your diet. The only disease that is characterized by a marked drop in white blood corpuscles has an abundance of other symptoms.

BROWN SPOTS.

Mrs. A. W. writes: I have had brown blotches on my face for some time. It is quite embarrassing when friends ask me what it is I have on my face. Could you tell me what they are and what has caused them?

REPLY.

Probably you have what goes by the name of liver spots. No one knows what causes them. According to popular opinion they are a sign of age, but, like signs in dry weather, this sign fails with women.

Somewhat similar spots on certain parts of the skin are caused by a fungus growing on the skin, a kind of ringworm. Perhaps this explains why mopping with a strong solution of hyposulphite of soda removes some of these blemishes.

ASK PROBATE COURT.

Chicago, Aug. 25.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Six years ago my mother died leaving her estate in trust for her sons and daughters. 1. Should we not be told what it is and who has the property in charge? 2. How can we find out about this property. 3. Could we get a statement showing how said money was spent and record of what is left at this time?

H. H.

1. You are entitled to get the wording of the will by writing to the clerk of the Probate court.
2. See No. 1.
3. Your rights depend largely on the wording of the will.

WRITTEN CONTRACTS.

Chicago, Aug. 26.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A year ago I purchased $3,000 of first mortgage gold bonds from our local bank. 1. The understanding was that I could dispose of them at any time without loss. With this understanding I made a down payment on a new car. After ordering the car I went to the bank to cash some bonds and was told that they could not cash any bonds whatever at the present time. 2. Does this mean that I lose the down payment on the car and the rent I have paid for the garage?

J. O.

1. If a written contract purports on its face to be a complete expression of the whole agreement oral understandings incidental to the negotiations are superseded and cannot be proved in court to change the written contract.
2. It seems probable.

WILL CROW NO MORE.

Chicago, Aug. 28.—[Friend of the People.]—The undersigned has for nearly two years been pestered by a neighbor's rooster, waking him up about 4 o'clock every morning with his crowing. I'm an old man of 71 and I am deprived of much needed sleep. That rooster crows from 40 to 65 times from 4 to 6 a. m.—a nerve racking nuisance. Can you help me out?

A. P. B.

An officer called at the address and interviewed the owner of the rooster. He was informed of the complaint and stated that rather than have trouble or cause any annoyance to the neighbors he would kill the rooster. We will give this complaint further attention and see that the nuisance complained of is abated.

Acting Commissioner of Police.

ALIEN PROPERTY RIGHTS.

Chicago, Aug. 29.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Please tell me the status of a Chinese woman in regard to property. A Chinese woman has bought a three story flat building and has started a chop suey joint and rooming house. She has been at this location seven years and does not speak English. We object to Chinese in our neighborhood and the dreadful odors coming from the chop suey house.

C. K. S.

The Illinois statute provides that aliens shall not hold land more than seven years, but it is not self-executing. Its enforcement is in the hands of the attorney general, and we know of no cases where that officer has acted on such facts.

NEW YORK.—"Operating under their own power, without refueling or revictualing, and without the slightest mishap," says the New York Herald, "ten submarines, designed by American naval architects and built by American artisans, have within the last few months crossed the Atlantic ocean and are now doing yeoman service for the allied cause in German and Turkish waters. In just five months from the time Charles M. Schwab of the Bethlehem Steel company signed a contract for the submarines with the British government 'the little vipers,' as they are known, were turned over to British crews at Montreal."

BROWNSVILLE, Tex.—A United States army airplane flying over Brownsville was fired on by Mexicans from the Mexican side of the Rio Grande. Nearly 100 shots were fired, but none hit the mark. Angered by their failure to hit the machine, the Mexicans turned their guns on a squad of American soldiers on guard at the Brownsville electric plant. The fusillade of bullets caught the soldiers by surprise, but they got behind shelter and returned the fire. No American was hit. A detachment of the 12th United States cavalry had a short fight 12 miles north of here with four Mexican bandits, killed one of them and captured the other three.

LONDON.—Grodno, the last of the great fortresses in Russian Poland, fell into the hands of Field Marshal von Hindenburg's army—the twelfth stronghold to be taken by the Teutonic invaders since the fall of Warsaw on Aug. 5.

CHICAGO.—The issuing of smoke from an upper window of the Orpheon Theater building shortly after midnight led to the discovery of a plan to destroy the block, which has been the subject of much litigation. When firemen broke into room 61 they found a big can of gasoline, a train of powder, some candles, and 2 pounds of gunpowder. It is the theory of the firemen that the candles, which were lighted, would have burned down and touched off the powder.

SEPTEMBER 4, 1881.

TUCSON, Ariz.—The Star has the following advices: Three couriers have come into Camp Thomas, all bringing the same news that Gen. Eugene A. Carr and his command have all been massacred by White Mountain Indians. Seven officers and 110 men were killed. In addition to Gen. Carr the officers are Capt. E. C. Hentig, Lieut. Carter, Lieut. Charles G. Gordon, Lieut. William Stanton, Lieut. Thomas Cruse and Assistant Surgeon George McCreery. The White Mountain tribe numbers about 1,500 and can muster 400 warriors. It is the only tribe of Apaches which has not been whipped into subjection. Gen. Carr, with two companies of cavalry, had gone to Cibicu creek, near Fort Apache, to arrest medicine men who were trying to incite war against the whites. A lieutenant was shot and killed by a medicine man, and the troops fired and killed the slayer. Immediately the Indians fired on the troops, killing most of them at the first fire. The massacre then began, the reports said, and no one escaped. After the fight part of the Indians hastened to Fort Apache and took it. It is thought some escaped, but it is not certain. Several of the officers' wives, including Mrs. Carr, were at the fort.

GALESBURG, Ill.—Mrs. Carr and her only son, Clarke M. Carr, 15 years old, are at Fort Apache. Gen. Carr was a brother of Col. Clarke E. Carr, postmaster of this city. He had had a long and notable career in the military service. He was graduated from the military academy in 1850, and was assigned to border service, during which he took part in many expeditions against various tribes of Indians. He also served with distinction throughout the civil war.

THE GRAND JURY'S REPORT.

Chicago, Aug. 29.—The members of the special grand jury that spent eight months in investigating the police department have concluded their labors with this so-called tribute: For honesty, integrity, and efficiency, Chicago's police department is second to none in America."

Do they expect any one with an iota of intelligence to accept such a farcical conclusion?

On the day previous to their report the mayor was quoted in the news columns as criticizing the police for failure to obey orders sent from headquarters. Paying his respects to the detective bureau, he said: "About all a lot of them do is ride around in the nice, big cars, listening to the radio." His honor's criticisms of certain police captains are of quite recent memory.

Did the grand jury ever hear of our neighbor's [Milwaukee] enviable record of having had only two police chiefs? Did the recent criticism by the Wickersham commission of the Chicago police department for their use of the third degree entirely escape the jurors' attention?

Their report is just one more whitewash added to the many that we have had in Chicago. They seem to have acted upon the ever safe rule, when in doubt, blame prohibition.

LOMBARD'S WOMEN VOTERS.

Lombard, Ill., Aug. 29.—A letter appearing in these columns yesterday signed by L. S. Whitbeck would seem to make me liable for several inaccuracies of statement or recollection as to the first votes cast by women in Lombard. As I recall it, the date given by your correspondent, 1889, is correct, but I do not have or claim to possess any documents bearing on the matter, and the only things of that nature that I can think of would be the charter of the town of Lombard and the list of voters at the election, which, I presume, are among the archives of the town inherited by the village of Lombard, and Chicago newspapers of the day after, one of which, at least, featured the event at some length in a humorous story.

The charter was not granted in 1889, but something like 20 years prior to that date, and Gen. Sweet, prominent in Chicago history as commanding officer at the time of the Camp Douglas conspiracy, was deliberately responsible for the omission of the word "male" in the voting qualifications and tipped it off at the time to one of the women who took advantage of that omission years afterwards.

Lastly, these votes were not cast for state officers but for president and trustees of the town at its annual election, held on the first Monday in April. In this case the vote of the women did not affect the outcome of the election, nobody was interested in testing the matter in court, and their votes stand "unto this day." I don't recall that they ever attempted to repeat the performance.

LIQUOR LOGIC.

Chicago, Aug. 31.—If Germany would permit the manufacture and sale of beer and England would allow ale and whisky it would solve their financial depression. Since the best people in America, the gospel ministers, the church members, the national women's clubs, the National Education association, the young people's societies, and the Y. M. C. A. are all opposed to prohibition, and the racketeers, gamblers, the inmates and patrons of houses of vice, and the idle rich are against the liquor business and in favor of prohibition, there is no question but the eighteenth amendment should be repealed. All wets are liberal minded and all drys are bigots. This is liquor logic!

CRIME AND THE FOREIGN BORN.

Chicago, Aug. 29.—In a letter published in the Voice of the People column recently Congressman Sabath seems to derive great satisfaction from a section of the Wickersham report which, in his opinion, "substantiates his position that the crime committed by the foreign born is much smaller in proportion to the population than that of the natives" it would be, since the natives outnumber the foreign born.

In his remarks he confuses the foreign born and aliens in a manner indicating that perhaps he does not know the difference. Presumably he was elected by the votes of the citizens of the United States of America, and it is reasonable to assume that he did not inquire as to the place of their birth before accepting their support. He appears to be engaged in an effort to demonstrate that native Americans possess greater criminal tendencies than foreign born citizens and aliens. Rather a poor appreciation of the rights, privileges, and preferment conferred upon him by American laws and institutions. He seems to like America, but not Americans.

Chicago, Aug. 24.—The Polish-American Business Men's association thanks you very, very much for your editorial, "Polish Example," published on Aug. 16. Courage, loyalty, and the sound advice of a very able local, national, and international banker from Chicago, Mr. Charles S. Dewey, helped Poland to build her financial institutions which withstood the present financial storm in Europe.

Mr. Charles S. Dewey is working now on local financial problems here in Chicago, helping us, Americans of Polish descent, to free as much cash from defunct banks as is possible.

He has given us already sound advice and we are following it and hope that in the long run our local institutions will be as solid as those in Poland.

TRADE WITH CHINA.

Watseka, Ill., Aug. 25.—With our surplus wheat crop, surplus corn crop, and other foodstuffs and China's starving population some sort of world trade could be effected. China has silk, potter's clay, valuable timber, tea, furs, flowers, and an untold wealth of minerals, while we have various foodstuffs which the Chinese could well use. If the Chinese people were well fed they would have less cause or desire for internal warfare.

Oak Park, Ill., Aug. 29.—I have read with interest the remarks of returned travelers on England. I, too, was amazed at London, Manchester, and other large cities. The slums and degradation are indescribable. The thought occurred to me that if this is the best they can do after all these many centuries, we in America certainly must not look in that direction for hope and inspiration for the future. It is a great sinkhole of selfishness.

PROTEST SEWER EMPTYING INTO THE DES PLAINES

County Board Moves to Clean Up River.

Urged on by delegations of citizens from various towns along the Des Plaines river, County Commissioner Homer J. Byrd yesterday presented a resolution to the county board recommending that a protest be placed with the city against the sewer now under construction at Belmont avenue. The sewer is to empty into the river, the polluted condition of which has been a cause of complaint for the last few years from the various communities involved.

The resolution, which was adopted by the board, also provided that a committee of five persons be appointed by President Emmett Wheelan to act as an advisory committee and to begin an investigation of all the natural streams in the forest preserve.

Will Make Survey of Streams.

The purpose of the group, to be known as the forest preserve clean streams committee, will be to determine which of the streams are polluted by sewage from the villages along their banks, and what action will be necessary to purify them.

Although extensive support was obtained for the resolution, no delegation appeared to urge its passage. Commissioner Byrd explained, because of the numerous occasions when those interested had appeared previously and because it was thought it would not be necessary to demonstrate the keen interest in the matter.

Project for River Cleanup.

Ultimate action designed to restore the DesPlaines to its original state has been in project between North avenue and Lyons since the last legislature passed an enabling act toward abating the nuisances existing there. Sewage dumped into the river not only has killed all fish in that portion, but has caused the stream to become an active danger to the health of thousands.

Engineers of the sanitary district plan to dredge along the center of the stream so that a constant flow of water will carry off the wastes and eliminate the stagnant condition of these long stretches. Eventually it is hoped that the small towns along the DesPlaines will install sewage disposal plants instead of making an open sewer of the river.

FATHER AND TWO CHILDREN IN AUTO KILLED BY TRAIN

Noblesville, Ind., Sept. 6.—[Special.]—Roscoe Gibson, 44, his daughter, Agnes, 8, and his son, Harry, 4, were killed near here tonight when the automobile in which they were riding was hit by a traction car on the Indiana railroad. Gibson started to cross the tracks in the rain and did not see the approaching car. The automobile and bodies were carried 200 feet. Gibson was a farmer.

Robbers Take $750 Poor Fund from Five Priests

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: Genius Recognized

CITY STRIKERS DENIED 5 DAYS' WORK A WEEK

Return to Four Day Basis Soon.

Striking members of the Sanitary Teamsters, Chauffeurs and Helpers' union did not win a minimum of five days' work a week by their agreement to resume collection of the city's garbage yesterday, Commissioner of Public Works Sprague declared. The men will work five days only until the refuse accumulated during the strike, which lasted a week, is cleared up, and then will be returned to the four day schedule which caused the strike, he said.

Commissioner Sprague issued a statement accusing Fred Sass, secretary, and other union officials, of breaking a promise to give out no interviews following the conference on Wednesday night, at which it was agreed to send the men back to work pending arbitration of their demands. Sass asserted that the men had won their principal demand, the minimum of five days' work each week.

That demand, the commissioner declared, is not even to be included in the matters to be arbitrated. Commissioner Sprague said:

"At a conference held in my office Wednesday with two officials of the union, arbitration was requested. I frankly and clearly stated to them that, while I was a firm believer in arbitration, there were certain things that could not be arbitrated, and that the question of working four days instead of five, on account of lack of money, was one.

"There seemed to be in the minds of the union officials other points, and these I agreed to arbitrate, I to appoint one arbitrator, and they another, and if those two could not agree on a third I was to appoint the third arbitrator.

"The question of cleaning up the accumulated garbage and rubbish was brought up, and I told them that it was my intention to clean this up as rapidly as possible, and that it was my further intention, in so doing, to work five days a week until the lost days were made up, and then to return to the four day basis."

MILK WAR GROWS MENACING AS STATES TRY TO INTERVENE

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 3.—(AP)—A "milk war" between southern Illinois and Missouri producers and the Pevely Dairy company, one of the largest in St. Louis, assumed serious proportions today as officials of the two states sought to settle the controversy.

Disturbances were reported from several sections of southern Illinois as a conference aimed at settlement of the trouble got under way at Springfield, Ill.

A temporary restraining order was granted the Pevely company in federal court here late today, to prevent members of the Sanitary Milk Producers, Inc., from interfering with shipments of milk consigned to the company.

Almost simultaneously with the issuance of the injunction, fifteen warrants charging rioting and peace disturbance were issued against farmers at Vandalia, Ill. A short time later fifty farmers were arrested at Columbia, Ill., for "investigation."

Earlier in the day a 1,500 gallon tank truck was emptied near Alton, Ill., and 3,000 pounds of milk was dumped from three farmers' trucks at Chester, Evansville and Palestine, Ill. Two truck drivers were cut and bruised and a farmer suffered a broken arm in a fight near Pana, Ill.

$1,600 Needed Monthly by Jackie Cooper, Court Told

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 3.—(AP)—Permission to spend $1,600 monthly for the support of Jackie Cooper, juvenile film star, was sought from the courts today by Mrs. Mabel Leonard Cooper, the boy's mother. She filed a petition for appointment as guardian and said $1,600 monthly was required to support her son in the manner to which juvenile actors are accustomed. Assets of the boy, she said, consist of a $50,000 endowment insurance policy, $8,000 in cash, and a motion picture contract providing for $1,300 weekly salary for the first year and as much as $4,000 weekly the third year. Mrs. Cooper is divorced from the boy's father, John G. Cooper.

It bequeaths an estate valued at $25,000 to Miss Laura Nenninger, 1354 Balmoral avenue, whom Miss Harvey described as her "dearest friend" during the forty years which both spent as teachers in the Chicago public schools. Both taught last year at the Amundsen elementary school.

CHANCE LEADS TO HIT AND RUN DRIVER SUSPECT

A Hub Cap, License Solve Crash.

Chance and a battered hub cap found at the scene of an automobile accident in which a young woman was seriously injured yesterday, led to the arrest of Mrs. Jennie Slominski, 23 years old, 5355 Windsor avenue, an alleged hit-and-run motorist.

Policemen Thomas Lyons and John Niemtus of the Irving Park station, saw Mrs. Slominski and a male companion sitting in her automobile, a Studebaker, in the 4400 block on North McVickers avenue early in the afternoon. They questioned the couple, noted the license number of the car and then, suspicion allayed, continued patroling their beat. An hour later they were called to the accident at Irving Park boulevard and Central avenue.

Police Find Hub Cap.

Miss Florence Van Dervort, 839 Barry avenue, suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries and three others were slightly injured in a collision of two autos at the intersection. One of the cars was driven away. In the debris the policemen found a Studebaker hub cap.

The other car was of another make and the policemen recalled Mrs. Slominski. Tracing her license number they went to her home. When the police fitted the dented hub cap on her car she confessed having been in the accident.

Five deaths in Cook county yesterday brought the automobile toll since Jan. 1 to 806. The victims:

Mrs. Joseph Axelson, 37 years old, 1823 North Linder avenue. Killed when she was run down at North avenue and Loomis street. The driver was Arthur Meister, 30 years old, of Itasca, Ill., a salesman.

James Prunty, 44 years old, 2128 Washburn avenue. Killed early this morning when he was struck by the automobile of Dr. Henry Higgins, 41 years old, 6734 Champlain avenue, while walking in Western avenue near 97th street with Forrest Hayden, 23 years old, 814 North Marshfield avenue. Hayden escaped with minor injuries. Dr. Higgins was released by the police and directed to appear at the inquest.

George Henderson, 21 years old, colored, 6202 Aberdeen street. Died in the Englewood hospital from injuries suffered on Aug. 28, when the car in which he was riding collided with another at 61st and Green streets.

Americo Camozzi, 28 years old, 709 Ogden avenue. Killed last night as he was riding in a car driven by his brother, Alfred. They had been visiting in the County hospital and were driving in Harrison street. The car passed a street car near Damen avenue and Alfred looked back into the rear seat to see his brother slumped down in the cushions. The theory was that Camozzi leaned out of the car just as it was passing the street car and his head was crushed in the impact with the street car.

Thomas McDonald, 23 years old, 2076 Greenleaf avenue. Died at Rogers Park hospital of injuries received when struck by a hit and run driver on Ridge boulevard, near Farwell avenue.

Dragged 100 Feet by Auto.

Mrs. Mary Hall, 59 years old, of South Bend, Ind., was fatally injured yesterday when she was struck by a hit-and-run motorist at Mishawaka, Ind. She was dragged 100 feet before being thrown beneath the wheels of the sedan.

Mrs. Ellen Norbey, 55 years old, 933 North Latrobe avenue, was fatally injured last night when the auto in which she was returning to the city from a vacation trip crashed into a culvert near Kenosha. Her husband, Jacob, escaped with minor injuries. The auto struck the culvert when forced off the road.

Anton A. Thompson, 65, of Chicago, died early today of injuries received when his automobile struck a tree on U. S. highway 31 near here. Officers said he apparently fell asleep at the wheel. He was alone.

Congratulations were extended yesterday in two Chicago courtrooms as two judges celebrated their birthdays. They were Judge Marcus Kavanagh of the Superior court, 72 years old, and Judge Joseph A. Graber of the Municipal court, 46 years old.

Judge Kavanagh, who was born on Sept. 3, 1859, in Des Moines, told his friends that, looking backward, he thought "the greatest award in life is the pleasure of service." "The duty of helping fellow men and the city is in itself a reward," said Judge Kavanagh. He went on the Superior bench in 1898 and has served there continously since then.

Judge Graber celebrated his birthday by bringing about four family reconciliations in the Court of Domestic Relations, where he was presiding. When Policeman Frank Gorman and his wife, Susan, who live at 639 West 55th street, appeared before him, Judge Graber said, "This is my birthday and I don't like to see anybody unhappy. Why don't you patch things up?" The couple smiled and left the courtroom arm in arm.

The judge also effected reconciliations between William and Mary Prendergast, 7316 Dorchester avenue; Stanley and May Stark, 1254 Noble street, and Stephen and Mary Bajkowski, 2412 North Lockwood avenue.

Miss Anna Adams Gordon, who, until her death on June 16, was national president of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, left an estate of $15,000. This was disclosed yesterday when her will was admitted to probate by Oscar S. Caplan, assistant to Probate Judge Horner.

A sister, Elizabeth, who lived with Miss Gordon at 1728 Chicago avenue, Evanston, is named the residuary legatee of the estate after payments of bequests to the W. C. T. U.

The national and world temperance unions are each willed $2,500. That amount, the will states, is equivalent to the money remaining from the fiftieth birthday fund gift to the late Frances E. Willard, founder of the W. C. T. U., and the proceeds from a volume entitled "The Beautiful Life of Frances E. Willard." Miss Gordon, who was executrix of Miss Willard's will, bequeated to the national union Miss Willard's furniture, which she inherited.

DISEASES SHOW DECLINE FROM AUGUST OF 1930

Chicago enjoyed a good month during August in escaping from contagious diseases, according to a report issued yesterday by Health Commissioner Bundesen. Whooping cough was the only disease that was more prevalent in August of this year than in the same month a year ago.

Commissioner Bundesen revealed that there was a noteworthy restraint on the number of infantile paralysis cases despite the unusual prevalence of the disease this year in New York, Massachusetts and Connecticut. There were 35 cases of infantile paralysis recorded in the city from which there were seven deaths.

Diphtheria cases in August of 1930 numbered 3,362, while during the same month this year the total had dropped to 2,255. Deaths from this disease decrease from 267 in August, 1930, to 169 last month. There were no deaths from smallpox during August, 1931, and the total number of cases had dropped from 119 in 1930 to 33 this August.

Figures showed that there were 6,576 cases of scarlet fever and 154 deaths from this disease registered for August, 1931, while in August last year there were 7,292 cases and 159 deaths. Typhoid fever cases dropped from 57 to 51 cases and from eleven to eight deaths.

"Boughs have their fruit and blossom at all times of the year" —William Butler Yeats

MICHIGAN RESORT AREA LIVENED BY PRODUCE BUSTLE

Eastern Coast Busy with Fruit, Vegetable Chores

BY PAUL POTTER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Benton Harbor, Mich., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—Lower Lake Michigan's eastern coast has been turned from a residential and vacationing resort country into the hustle and bustle connected with the harvesting and shipping of fruits and vegetables from a quarter million acres.

The anticipation of hearing a gubernatorial proclamation tonight, with Gov. Brucker's naming of Sept. 6 to 13 as officially Michigan Peach Week, has stirred the farmers and city folk of a dozen counties in the fruit belt. The sight of this harvest, perhaps not as widely heralded as those in California but of far greater interest to Chicagoland, is well worth a trip from Chicago or other cities of the central states. Today, the highways are lined with roadside stands where the peaches, pears, apple, tomatoes, cantaloupes, watermelons, and grapes of a bounding producer and consumer are together.

Motorists Load Their Cars.

Cars with Wisconsin, Illinois, and Indiana licenses are just as numerous on week-end as those bearing Michigan tags. They contain people who not had their quota of attractive lake shore scenery, and the back seats, trunk racks, or fenders are piled down with boxes, baskets, or sacks filled with precious plunder.

But this is not the bulk of the fruit business, by any means. The trucks ply a steady stream of trade by night and in the dark hours of daylight, to fill the packets and storefronts of Chicago and other cities within a 400 mile radius of Saint Joe or Benton Harbor.

One of the largest produce markets in the world, built by the city of Benton Harbor at a cost of $85,000, is now in its second year of active business. It is a sight worth seeing. Farmers bring creaking trucks of luscious fruit here from all parts of southern Michigan. They are met by buyers from Chicagoland and hinterland.

Expect Big Increase.

Last year's business in fruit and vegetables, a summer's sales only, consisted of 4,615,814 packages, received, packed and shipped out in a vast central effort. That this business may be increased as much as 50 per cent in a year is the prediction of officials in charge.

Some 10,000 growers and 5,000 buyers are meeting during the course of the season. The trucks, trains and ships will carry out an equivalent of more than 7,000 carloads before snow flies, to territory as distant as Oklahoma City, Nashville, Fargo, N. D., and Dallas. Some 80 million potential consumers in eight states are within the area supplied by Michigan fruitmen.

Just now, in addition to peaches, things housewives may look for are melons and grapes of superior quality from Michigan, whether at the corner store or the loop market.

Early Grapes for Jellies.

Shipping is offered by growers that the early grapes are not for table use, but for pies or jellies. Housewives are asked, if in doubt as to the lesser quality grapes called Champions, instead of the better Moores or Concords, to taste a sample in the basket.

Peculiarly favorable weather conditions this year have been responsible for raising the natural sugar content of Michigan peaches, grapes and cantaloupes to the point where they are the sweetest in more than a generation, state inspectors report. That they are selling at bargain prices in comparison with normal years, is said by farmers to be entirely in the consumer favor.

It looks like a great year for wine grapes. Even though the crop is 52 per cent of normal in Michigan, the wine sugar and sweetness is expected to make them move readily, these interests declare. Home made jams and jellies, as well as home canned fruits, are having their inning in western Michigan this year.

SLOWLY POTATO HAS LABORATORY TEST THESE DAYS

From the lowly potato is being subjected to the laboratory test these days, for this time in the interest of foods and is trying to determine the best potato for potato chips, French fries, and for baking.

A test for the soluble sugars in potatoes has been found to be the key to the determinations, according to experts of the United States department of agriculture. An excessive amount of these sugars produces a discoloring in French fries and potato chips and a sweetness in baked or boiled potatoes that is distasteful to some people, the laboratory men report.

Potatoes stored at temperatures ranging from 32 to 45 degrees Fahrenheit are the worst offenders, as this temperature range is said to be productive of large amounts of starch broken down into soluble sugars.

To make the test, a sample from the center of the potato is placed with a copper solution of picric acid and sodium carbonate in a small test tube and heated over the flame of an alcohol lamp until it boils for one-half minute.

Samples from potatoes that have not been stored at too low a temperature change the color of the solution to an orange yellow, but those which have developed a high amount of the soluble sugars change the color to a deep red or brown.

THREE MEALS A DAY

From the Tribune Cook Book

BY MARY MEADE.

Food Talk.

Do you know how to create satiny, smooth Bavarian creams with that indefinable "caterer's touch" right in your own kitchen?

There is a quick and easy way of making jellied Bavarians in ripe fruit flavor which results in creamy, smooth textured desserts of fragile flower shades. The old methods involved the whipping of both the slightly thickened gelatine and the cream. Besides, there are fewer dishes to wash, and at this time of the year I know of nothing more appealing than that.

In making Bavarians you will want to use a fruit flavored gelatin. There are many flavors from which to choose—lemon, orange, strawberry, raspberry, cherry, and lime—and you will find that they blend perfectly with oranges, raspberries, peaches, apricots, and pineapple.

Jellied Bavarian creams make perfect "special occasion" desserts. They are not only tempting to the eye but they contribute a decorative quality to any hostess' table. Here is a favorite, and, remember, as usual, all measurements are level:

PEACH BAVARIAN.

1 package lemon or orange gelatin
1 cup boiling water
1 cup peach juice
½ cup cream
1 cup crushed peaches, sweetened and drained
2 drops bitter almond extract

Dissolve the gelatin in the boiling water. Add the peach juice. Chill until cold and sirupy. Fold in the cream, whipped only until thick and shiny, but not stiff. Add the peaches and flavoring. Chill until slightly thickened. Turn into individual molds. Chill until firm. Unmold. Garnish with sliced peaches.

Yield: Eight servings.

Calf's liver
4 slices salt pork
2 onions, sliced
2 tablespoons flour
Salt and pepper to taste

Wash, trim, and skin a calf's liver. Lard it with the pork and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Dredge with flour and cover with onions. Place in a pan in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) for 15 minutes, then reduce the temperature to 300 degrees F.—a slow oven—and bake for an hour, or until the meat is well browned and tender. Serve plain or with slices of crisp bacon.

Cuts of Pork, Bacon, Lamb Best Buys for Week-End

In its regular weekly report issued for the guidance of consumers, the committee on marketing information of the Chicago Meat council states:

"Practically all cuts of pork, including fresh hams and shoulders, smoked hams, bacon and picnics, represent the most economical meat buys for Chicago housewives over the coming week-end. Lamb also continues to represent an unusually attractive buy at the present time."

BY EVERETT SWINGLE.

Except for green peas in the pod, now somewhat of a luxury due to the lateness of the season, the only price changes that occurred this week in the Chicago wholesale market for fresh fruits and vegetables brought lower prices. As a result, sweet potatoes, tomatoes, celery, cauliflower, brussels sprouts, grapes, and plums should be somewhat cheaper in the average store.

Peach supplies continued to flow toward Chicago, so that although they had been expected to advance somewhat, bushel baskets of the fruit are being retailed at from 75 cents to $1.25 in many stores. This has had considerable effect on other fresh fruit as the demand for peaches has caused fewer sales in other fruits and consequently lower prices.

Italian Prunes Low Priced.

The Italian prunes, which many buy instead of plums, are the lowest in years. Wholesale lots are being sold at 12 pounds for 75 cents, according to the Chicago fruit auction. Red Tokay grapes, the first large shipment for this season, were auctioned yesterday and the fruit distributed through the city. The red seedless are selling wholesale for 40 cents a basket.

Other grape supplies which started heavily this week included the Michigan blue grapes of the Champion variety. Michigan also is sending over Bartlett pears. Shipments of pears have continued longer than usual from California, Oregon, and Washington and still are reasonable.

Another indication of the approach of fall was sounded in the food markets of the city yesterday when the first Jonathan apples of the season arrived from Washington. In addition the dealers received their first winter "banana" apples. Citrus fruits are plentiful and cheap and wholesale prices are as low as is consistent with freight rates, harvesting and packaging costs, according to the producers.

Potato Prices Lower.

In the wholesale market it was apparent that potato prices were somewhat lower. Radishes are selling about the same as they have for two months, retail prices being about five cents for two bunches; while green onions are worth about 10 cents for three bunches in most stores. Sweet corn is about as low in price as it will be this year, according to the wholesale price, which indicates that 15 cents a dozen for good corn is sufficient to pay.

Three cents a pound for cabbage is considered a fair retail price. For cucumbers for pickles, the price should be $1 to $1.25 per bushel, depending largely on quality and size, however.

Cheese Recipes

SPINACH SUPREME.

1 cup milk
1 package cream cheese
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
4 lbs. fresh spinach, or
1 large can spinach
1 cup bread crumbs
3 slices bacon

Heat the milk in a double boiler; add the cheese and seasonings, and cook slowly until melted, stirring occasionally. Cook and thoroughly drain the spinach, and add to it the milk and cheese. Mix well, place in a greased loaf pan and cover with bread crumbs, and the bacon cut in pieces. Bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven, 350 degrees.

PEAS AND SPAGHETTI CASSEROLE.

1 cup cooked spaghetti
1½ cups cooked fresh peas
1 onion chopped
1 green pepper chopped
2 fresh tomatoes sliced
¼ cup bread crumbs
Salt, pepper
1 cup grated American cheese

Place the spaghetti in a baking dish. Mix the peas with the chopped onion and green pepper and put half of it on the spaghetti, following this with half the sliced tomatoes and crumbs. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Repeat with remaining ingredients except cheese. Cover and bake about an hour in a moderate oven, 350 degrees. Sprinkle the grated cheese over the top and leave dish uncovered for the last 15 minutes of baking.

ONE NEW FOOD AT A TIME IS RULE FOR BABY

Tell Way to Teach Infant to Like Dishes.

"One at a time" is the best rule to follow in teaching a child to like new foods, says the New York state college of home economics. "Changing the baby's diet from liquid to solid must be done step by step and his food habits should be in the process of formation long before he gives up his bottle," says a bureau report.

"The normal growing child has a good appetite and eats what is set before him. But children often object to new foods at first because the odor, color, flavor, texture, and even the temperature differs from those of any other food they have tried. New foods should be introduced to the child not only one at a time but also in small quantities. Many of the common fruits and vegetables should have appeared in the baby's diet by the time he is a year old. Start with a taste on the end of a teaspoon in addition to his regular diet, and gradually increase it until it has a regular place in his meal. Never start two new foods at once or a second before the first is familiar.

"Even after the child has learned to eat and enjoy a number of different foods, he should not be confronted with too many at once or too large quantities, which discourage him. The child should never be served with more than he can eat of any food. His capacity is small and he should not be forced.

"The child's meal schedule should be strictly observed and as regular as clockwork in order to keep his appetite working properly. Lack of appetite usually means that he is ill, tired, or upset, and he should not be forced to eat more than he wishes. Ordinarily a digestive disorder will quickly adjust itself if no other symptoms are present, otherwise a physician should be consulted."

NUTRITION EXPERTS LIST MANY WAYS TO SERVE YOUR APPLES

Nutrition specialists of Ohio State university point to the apple as a fruit which is unsurpassed in lending itself to a variety of ways in serving. The fruit not only should be eaten because of its food value, but because it is crisp and aids in keeping the teeth and gums in good condition. Apples also contain coarse fiber which helps to prevent and overcome constipation. In salads, or cooked, baked or eaten raw, the apple is a choice food, the nutrition experts report.

Helpings Too Large May Impair Child's Appetite

EXPERT GIVES SOME ADVICE ON PICKLING

"There's a thrill in entering a kitchen where spice filled air and a riot of color furnished by green and red tomatoes, little green cucumbers, heads of cauliflower, young beets, small white onions and green peppers all proclaim that pickling time is here again," says Ruth M. Dawson, foods specialist of the agricultural college extension service, by way of reminding North Dakota homemakers that pickling time is here again.

"Vegetables selected for pickling should be very firm and not overripe," Miss Dawson specifies. 'When making whole pickles select small, uniform vegetables, using the crooked and misshapen ones for sliced or chunked pickles and relishes. The brine or vinegar should cover the pickles at all times. If the pickles are placed in crocks or barrels, they should be stirred from time to time, as the salt tends to sink to the bottom of the vessel. Stir the pickles with a wood or granite spoon or ladle, for highly acid solution should not come in contact with metal.

"One pint of salt to a gallon of water is the usual brine solution, but this had best be tested with a whole egg in the shell to determine its strength. If the egg floats easily, the brine is all right. Cider vinegar which may be purchased in bulk is good for pickling purposes and less expensive than the bottled table vinegar. And don't forget the spices—they give to pickles that piquant flavor so desirable as an accompaniment to the meat course."

BANANAS LEND THEMSELVES TO MANY RECIPES

Find Place on Menus of All Meals of Day.

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

If you would indulge in the most popular foods and at the same time practice economy, eat bananas! This is my admonition to the housewife who is continually seeking to vary her menus and live within the family budget.

The popularity of the everyday fruit is attested by the fact that Chicagoans consume more than 425,000,000 annually. Like the apple, the orange, and the lemon, the banana is a world leader in the fruit realm. Its selling points are three. It is obtainable the year around, its uses are innumerable, and it has food value in excess of that of most fruits. Then, too, we must not lose sight of the fact that the price of bananas has been materially reduced in the last six months, making them one of the most inexpensive foods.

Equally popular for breakfast, luncheon, dinner, or the in-between snack, the banana may be prepared in a variety of ways. Baked or fried, as a vegetable, made into a whip or custard for a dessert, sliced for a salad, pressed and fermented to yield a drink resembling hard cider—these are only a few of its uses. In energy value one large banana is equal to 100 calories or two slices of bread.

Story of Fruit's Origin.

The belief that bananas originated in the Americas and were cultivated by the pre-historic Indians was refuted comparatively recently by Dr. W. E. Safford, economic botanist of the United States department of agriculture. He declares that the home of the banana is in the Malay archipelago and that it was unknown to America when Columbus visited it in 1492.

Commenting on the reported discovery of fossil banana seed in the coal beds of Colombia and the connection of this finding with the Indian's use of the fruit, he says it proves nothing about American banana plants, since they have no seed and must be propagated from cuttings. The persistence of the myth, Dr. Safford believes, was due to the great Humboldt, who was not a botanist, but who reported in the early 16th century that bananas were the staple food of South American Indians before Columbus.

Not Mentioned by Columbus.

Columbus made no mention of the banana, although he drew up a list of the plants he encountered. Scientists have traced the fruit from its beginnings in the Malay archipelago to the Canary islands and thence to the West Indies and the Pacific islands. It was Padre Tomas de Berlangas who first took the plant traveling in 1516.

Despite its popularity over this long span of years the banana is still misunderstood in many respects. Few of us know that it grows on plants that are really overgrown herbs like cabbages or beets instead of on trees. The tall stalk is not woody like a tree trunk but is made of the stems of banana leaves, one wrapped around another.

Many people eat the fruit before it is ripe, and thus has arisen the belief that it is indigestible. When the yellow banana skin is speckled with brown the inside is ripe and at its best, for the starch has been converted into dextrine and sugar.

Ripening Is Necessary.

Frequently our markets offer bananas that are a clear yellow because they are shipped from Central America, Jamaica, Columbia, or Cuba before they are ripe. If purchased in this condition, the fruit should be kept in the pantry or refrigerator until the brown spots appear. In separating one banana from the bunch it is wise to cut it rather than break it to keep the fruit sterile. It is also important, in peeling the fruit, to remove all strings.

Only three out of hundreds of known varieties ever enter the American markets, the red banana, the dwarf banana, and the common yellow banana which practically monopolizes the markets of the east. The red banana has virtually passed out of our markets since it was priced higher than the yellow and the flavor was not considered as pleasing.

May Be Fired or Baked.

Only under one condition may the fruit be used before it is ripe and that is when it is fired or baked. Still in its starchy stage the banana may then take the place of potatoes or some other vegetable at dinner. In addition to the more common uses, people in the tropics frequently make flour for bread from dried bananas. They also preserve them in the sun or put them up in jars with the addition of vinegar and sugar. Banana wine is common in the tropics.

Four popular recipes for using bananas are listed as follows:

2 tablespoons butter.
2 tablespoons lemon juice.
1-3 cup powdered sugar.

Peel and split bananas lengthwise. Place in a shallow baking dish. Melt butter and add the lemmon juice. Dredge bananas with powdered sugar and baste with lemon butter mixture. Bake in a moderate oven [350 F.] twenty minutes or until well glazed and tender. Serve hot.

BANANA BAVARIAN.

1½ cups thick cream.
1-3 teaspoon salt.
1 1-3 cups banana pulp [3 large bananas].
2½ tablespoons lemon juice.
½ cup candied cherries or pineapple cut fine.
3 tablespoons rum flavoring.

Soften the gelatin in cold water. Chill the cream thoroughly, add the salt, and whip until stiff. Melt the gelatin over boiling water. Press the bananas through a ricer or a coarse sieve, then measure. Add the gelatin, mixing thoroughly. Fold the banana pulp, lemon juice, cherries, and flavoring into the whipped cream. Turn into a mold and let stand in the refrigerator to stiffen.

BANANA FLUFF.

Put four bananas through a ricer and then add the juice of two lemons, one cup granulated sugar and one pint whipped cream. Mix all together and pack in a mold and freeze.

BANANA SHERBET.

3 bananas.
Juice of 3 lemons.
2 cups sugar.

Heat the milk to the scalding point and add the sugar to dissolve. Peel bananas and press through a ricer. Add lemon juice. When milk is cool, Combine all the ingredients and blend thoroughly. Pour into ice cream freezer and freeze. Yield: 15 servings.

Cafes and Hotels Use Fourth of Food Produced

A Meat Problem

DR. JOHN R. MOHLER.

Dr. John R. Mohler, chief of the bureau of animal industry, United States department of agriculture, is interested in livestock problems in more than a professional way. He is attacking a meat problem which was soon solved. Meats are selling at low prices now, and the two pound, 1¼ inch T-bone steak in front of the doctor was enough for four liberal servings. Dr. Mohler recently described the kind of steak he likes; more than an inch thick—broiled a deep crusty brown—a lingering trace of juicy rareness in the center—served hot with butter melting down into the gravy on the platter.

REMEMBER YOUR FIRST FLAPJACK? WHO CAN FORGET!

Here's How Comanche Joe Saved the Kids.

BY IRENE STEYSKAL.

As surely as you would eat spaghetti if you were a gondolier in Venice, or chile con carne if you were a toreador in Madrid, or Wiener schnitzel if you were an opera singer in Vienna, or oranges if you were a movie star in Hollywood, so surely would you dine on flapjacks if ever you were to turn prospector in the Rocky mountain region.

Changing faces and scenes may cast an impenetrable cloud of forgetfulness about the chile con carne, spaghetti, Wiener schnitzel or orange juice, but once having flipped a flapjack in a frying pan, once having sniffed its aroma, diffused with the mingled odors of coffee and bacon sizzling on a campfire of pine cones and cedar, you are in for a periodically recurring nostalgia that isn't easily squelched.

Those First Flapjacks.

My own early recollections of a southwestern miner's flapjack's date back several years and are closely associated with vivid remembrances of my first serial movie and our old friend Comanche Joe.

The movie was a stirring pictorial account of one dashing Dan Darrigan who fought fire and brimstone, raging torrents and fiercely bewhiskered villains, over a period of eight or ten weeks, to rescue fair ladies in distress all the way from the Cape of Good Hope to the Klondike, in which latter place he staked his claim in the gold fields and emerged triumphantly with a fortune and the heroine in the face of a racketeering sheriff, a Black Hand plot and a wrathful father-in-law.

Jorgensen Was the Orchestra.

Saturday after Saturday, with all the youngsters of the neighborhood, my brother and I trooped into the local theater, scrambling pell-mell for seats in the front row, where we wriggled ecstatically through the weekly episode while Carl Jorgensen, the one man orchestra, accompanied our dauntless hero through dozens of climaxes with crashing chords, thundering chromatics and rolling arpeggios on the old upright piano, his jaws keeping perfect and fascinating tempo on a generous wad of chewing gum.

With particular interest we drank in scenes of dashing Dan as a placer miner panning gold nuggets as large as baseballs from the stream that ran through his claim. A great idea was born. Strangely enough, it failed to impress a somewhat conservative dad. Well then, we ourselves would pan out the family's fortune.

The Big Opportunity Comes.

Our opportunity came one day after luncheon when mother, enjoining us not to venture through the back gate, left for the parish hall where the ladies of the church were meeting to talk over plans for the annual bazaar, and old Manuela, presiding genius of our kitchen, retired for her afternoon siesta.

Armed with two of Manuela's shining pie pans, two flour sacks in which to bring back our nuggets, half an apple turnover and dad's old service canteen filled with water, we set out on our great adventure, climbing over the garden wall in order to comply with mother's injunction.

The Golden Goal Beckons.

Our goal lay two rocky, unbroken miles distant—a tortuous little arroyo called by the native Mexicans Agua Melodiosa, Singing Water, but more generally referred to, by the name it owed to the quaint humor of a disappointed prospector, as Gold Gulch.

When we finally reached the arroyo the sun had set but the western sky was radiant with farflung banners of gold, an omen to enliven lagging footsteps and bolster spirits that had been on the descent since the last crumb of the turnover had disappeared and we discovered the canteen was empty. Encouraging each other with conjectures concerning what Dan Darrigan would have done under similar circumstances, we pulled out our pie pans and went to work.

"Gold" on Every Hand.

And exciting, marvelous work it was! Almost every jagged rock or smooth pebble we scooped up from the stream bed was dotted with small yellowish particles that glistened like little stars. Even if mother and dad were a bit upset by our absence they wouldn't have many objections to make when we showed 'em what we had in our flour sacks.

And then a hoot owl informed us that the twilight was deepening and night was creeping toward us in long black shadows. It was pretty dark all right, and the sacks were heavy. We decided it would be best to leave about half of our fortune under a large overhanging boulder and come back for it later. We were sure—that is, we were almost sure, we were headed in the right direction. About now Manuela was lighting the tall white candles on the dinner table and mother and dad were sitting down and wondering where we had gone. Maybe there was fried chicken for dinner, and cherry ice for dessert with little puffy white cocoanut cakes.

A Campfire Is Seen.

It certainly seemed like an awfully long way. Our faith in Dan Darrigan was dangerously near toppling when we caught a glimpse of a flickering campfire on the slope of the hill ahead. We cached our sacks in a hollow oak and moved forward cautiously.

There may be those who would deny long, lean Comanche Joe—a battered relic of the old Indian frontier days—a prize for manly pulchritude, but he looked good to us in the familiar blue jeans, a red bandana around his neck, hat pushed on the back of his head, as he squatted by his fire and flipped flapjacks with the finished technique of an artist.

Good Old Joe!

He seemed surprised when he heard the war whoop he had taught us. In fact, one of his pancakes missed its mark and fell with a little sputter on the red coals. He listened with becoming gravity to our story. With even more becoming understanding he replenished his mixing dish with a generous quantity of prepared flour, water, and condensed milk from a can with two holes punched in the top.

Then a little more bacon fat on the frying pan. Were there ever other tin plates like ours that held flapjacks as perfectly round, light, crisp, sweet with melted sugar sirup? No, you might not award Joe a beauty prize, but you'd have to hand him the blue ribbon for flapjacks.

Dad and th Law Arrive.

We were curled up under a blanket, blissfully sleeping, with the white light of stars shining down and Joe thoughtfully smoking his pipe by the fire when dad arrived, accompanied by the local constabulary, which included five or six bloodhounds, and a volunteer vigilance committee consisting of all our male neighbors over 16 years of age.

We never did go back for our cached nuggets. The following Saturday afternoon a new movie serial was launched at the local theater. The hero was Lucky Leonard Lewis, who rescued a beautiful Lapland lady free a pack of ravenous wolves in the first episode.

BUSY BEES MAKE SUGAR IN HONEY EASY TO DIGEST

Bees gather one sort of sugar, then change that into two more kinds, and in the process of gathering and ripening, honey is packed with pep, due largely to the fact that nearly 77 per cent of honey is sugar. These sugars are classed as carbohydrates, or energy building foods, says R. A. Stevens of the New York State College of Agriculture.

Nectar, which bees gather from the flowers, contains sucrose sugar, or the same as that of beet or cane sugar. In the process of ripening nectar into honey this sugar is broken into two primary or simpler sugars, dextrose and levulose. These simple sugars are in a form that can be assimilated immediately by the digestive system and sometimes honey is called a predigested food on this account, he explains.

After the ripening process honey contains about 75 per cent of the primary sugars and about 2 per cent sucrose sugar. These total nearly 1,485 calories to the pound in a typical honey sample.

A story about coffee

that should be read by every one who loves that delicious, fragrant beverage

WHAT would we do without coffee?

Probably everybody has asked or thought this question on occasions when a cup of coffee has been yearned for and then drunk with keen relish.

There's something about coffee that satisfies in a way no other beverage does. Meal after meal—day after day—we welcome its fragrance and clear, dark brown, liquid goodness. It is one of the very few beverages that never tire the taste.

Yet, do you realize that in spite of our synthetic and chemical achievements, no one has discovered a formula for imitating exactly the rare flavor that Nature has given coffee?

Scientists will tell you that coffee has the most elusive flavor and aroma of any food product we have. The history of chemistry will tell you that since the discovery of coffee, centuries ago, no one has ever been able to successfully analyze all of its twenty-two different oils. The flavor of coffee is one of Nature's most jealously guarded secrets.

Strange as it may seem, the priceless flavor of coffee, as we enjoy it, does not come from one variety of coffee alone. There must be a blend. In composing this blend, coffees from different parts of the world are selected, graded and then mixed together in proper proportions to create a distinctively individual flavor.

Blend, alone, is not sufficient for fine flavor

But even perfectly blended coffee is far from being ready for the cup. Maximum flavor and aroma must be developed by a roasting process in order that the coffee be tasteful.

This is one of the most important processes in the production of coffee. Any one can buy green coffee and mix it; they can even roast the coffee over their home fire, but it is virtually impossible for them to maintain the even roast necessary for uniform flavor.

Coffee was first roasted in pans as you would do it in your oven. Then a large drum was invented in which several hundred pounds could be roasted at a time.

While this method was quite satisfactory, it fell short of developing the perfect flavor of the blend. There was no way to insure uniformity in the roast — naturally no way to insure uniformity in the flavor.

Here's the reason. In roasting coffee by the ordinary bulk method, an operator handles two or three hundred pounds at a time and depends upon his eye to judge the right color. But, careful as he may be, a change of light may deceive him and he will either check the roast too soon, or let it continue too long. The result is that the different batches will often vary in color and flavor.

Hills Bros., whose business dates back to 1878, realized this. For years they worked to perfect a method of roasting their rare blend of coffee which would guarantee that every ounce was roasted to the same degree. And eventually they discovered and patented "Controlled Roasting"—the most revolutionary process ever developed in the production of coffee.

What "Controlled Roasting" is and does

As the accuracy of the hour-glass depends upon an even, continuous flow, a little at a time, so the uniform flavor of Hills Bros. Coffee is produced by "Controlled Roasting"—the patented process that roasts evenly, continuously . . . a little at a time. The blended green coffee is introduced into the roasters in automatically measured lots of about three pounds, and passes through in a steady flow, roasting a little at a time. Never does the quantity of coffee vary. The speed of the flow and the degree of heat remain the same, with the result that Hills Bros. Coffee is absolutely uniform.

What's more, during the roasting process the coffee is subjected to a circulation of clean, fresh air which removes all trace of smoke and fumes that would affect the flavor. The heat and volume of air are automatically controlled so that any variation in the degree to which the coffee is roasted is absolutely prevented.

From the viewpoint of the housewife, Hills Bros. Coffee is roasted as she prepares her choicest foods. She knows that she can make a better dish by cooking in small quantities or combining the ingredients a little at a time. What woman will pour all the salad-oil at once into her mayonnaise mixture and expect to beat it to a smooth, thick consistency?

Granulation important in coffee making

The granulation of Hills Bros. Coffee is the result of scientific tests to determine the degree of fineness that will give the most satisfactory results. Coffee is often pulverized for the sole purpose of producing a larger quantity of beverage than ordinarily, but experience has proved that beverage made from pulverized coffee is lacking in flavor. In a high-grade coffee, flavor is the requisite element. Coffee value and satisfaction are established by a unique combination of delicious aroma and satisfying strength.

Hills Bros. Coffee will make as many, and usually a greater number of cups of full-flavored and full-strength beverage than any other coffee. The granulation of Hills Bros. Coffee will give perfect results when it is properly made by any approved method.

Fresh coffee in every can

The happy results secured by "Controlled Roasting," and other exact methods of manufacture could not last, however, if Hills Bros. packed coffee the ordinary way. For roasted coffee—ground or unground—loses its goodness if exposed to the air.

Yes, air destroys the freshness and flavor of coffee quickly. Even the so-called "air-tight" can does not prevent deterioration because air is sealed in the can with the coffee.

Knowing this, Hills Bros. originated and were the first to use the vacuum pack for coffee. By this process, air is removed from the can and kept out. Then, to make certain that every can is flawlessly sealed, each one is tested by an ingenious machine invented and used exclusively by Hills Bros. This "automatic inspector" will detect the tiniest air-hole and discard a faulty can at once. This protection against air means that Hills Bros. Coffee is always fresh no matter when or where you buy it. Remember this!

A flavor no other coffee has

When you buy Hills Bros. Coffee you are buying coffee with a flavor no other coffee has. Hills Bros. Coffee is the cream of the world's coffee crops, blended by experts; roasted by the exclusive, continuous process—"Controlled Roasting"—a process no other coffee roaster can use (it's patented); and brought to you roaster-fresh in the original vacuum pack.

As a lover of fine coffee, you should try Hills Bros. Coffee at once. As you turn the key that opens the vacuum packed can, an entrancing aroma will captivate your sense of smell. Then, when you have made a cup, a thrill will come to your taste that defies description. That flavor is one you will want again and again. And you can always count on getting it!

Grocers everywhere sell Hills Bros. Coffee. Ask for it by name and look for the Arab trademark on the can. Hills Bros. Coffee, Inc., 1130 Merchandise Mart, Chicago, Illinois.

GREEN PEPPERS! HERE'S CAMPAIGN IN THEIR BEHALF

Are Important Vegetables in Our Daily Diet.

BY ANGELA PETESCH.

Green peppers, more technically known as capsicums, may not be of as high interest historically as the ground black pepper, but they are important vegetables in our daily diet.

This ground black pepper that I speak of was the first spice to be trafficked in by mankind and in the fifth century was considered so valuable that 3,000 pounds was demanded as part of a ransom of Rome. Even much later it was still so important in the life of the people as to constitute one of the chief impulses to the many Portuguese efforts—finally successful in 1498—to reach India by sailing around Africa in order to obtain it without paying the exorbitant prices which resulted from the commercial gantlet it otherwise necessarily ran in passing the Ottoman barrier. I say, green peppers have no romantic history like this. But we like them just the same.

Broil for Best Flavor.

Why is it that more people don't eat green peppers and enjoy them? Is it because they don't know how to cook them? Possibly. In this case we'll start a campaign right now.

To get the most of the delicate flavor broil them. Just put the clean whole sweet peppers under the broiling fire until brown and tender. You will want to turn them two or three times so that all sides will get the benefit of the flame. When tender, remove them, split them with a sharp knife and remove and discard the seeds. Work quickly because the peppers do not retain the heat long. Arrange the peppers on a large warm platter and pour a generous amount of olive oil over all. Sprinkle well with salt and serve immediately. Delicious. I can taste them now.

Hint for Pickling.

Then vary the service by frying them. The cleaned peppers will need to be sliced and then put in a hot frying pan with a lot of butter. Fry them slowly until tender. Sometimes you can add a little tomato.

This being the pickling season, recipes for relishes are very much in order. Here the hot red pepper is combined with the sweet. And it can get mighty hot. I wouldn't advise sampling any before cooking. It will burn all the way down.

PEPPER RELISH.

Grind up the above ingredients, using meat chopper. Pour boiling water over the mixture, let stand 15 minutes, and drain. Repeat. Then make a sirup of 3 cups of vinegar, 2 cups sugar, 2 teaspoonfuls salt, and boil all together, the sirup and pepper-onion mixture, for about 5 minutes. Pack hot in sterile jars and seal airtight.

RED PEPPER RELISH.

1 dozen sweet red peppers, 5 pints vinegar, 2 cups granulated sugar, 1 hot red pepper, 1 dozen onions.

Make sirup of vinegar and sugar. Peel onions, then put through meat grinder with the peppers. Cook in the sirup until tender. Pack hot in sterile jars.

CHILI SAUCE.

To a gallon of fine ripe tomatoes that have been peeled and cut into bits add a half dozen medium sized white onions, chopped fine; half a dozen green peppers (the hot variety), also chopped fine. Put all together in a preserving kettle and add 1 quart of good cider vinegar, 1 pint of water, 1 cup of sugar, 5 level teaspoonfuls each of cayenne pepper and ground mustard, 1 tablespoonful each of ground celery seed and cinnamon, and a teaspoonful each of mace and cloves and salt to taste. Simmer slowly, stir often, and boil until a little thicker than catsup. Put into jars or bottles and seal while hot.

PEPPER RINGS FILLED WITH HAMBURGER.

Combine all the ingredients and shape into seven cakes. Press into pepper ring and broil.

WAYS TO SAVE TIME KEEPING COOKIE JAR FILLED TO CAPACITY

A few time-saving hints for baking cookies will aid the modern mother to keep the cooky jar filled and still have leisure time, according to specialists in the Home Economics Extension Service at Iowa State college.

A canvas to replace the board on which the cookies are rolled and a stockinette cover for the rolling pin prevent the dough from sticking. If the cookies are baked in a sheet and then cut, that saves time. To save rolling and cutting of cookies, the dough may be formed into a loaf or bar and slices cut off for baking. This dough may be kept in the refrigerator and used as needed.

Drop cookies, which save rolling and cutting and eliminate the need of washing the rolling pin and other equipment, may be made by using a canvas pastry bag from which the cookies are squeezed out one by one onto the baking sheet. Chopped nuts and fruits for cookies can be prepared quickly by putting them through the food chopper.

Apples Keep Better When Picked at Proper Time

Apples for cold or common storage keep longer and in better condition if picked at the proper stage of maturity than if picked either too ripe or too green.

FAIR GIVES TIPS ON THE CANNING OF WINTER FOODS

Observe Points Judges Use in Awards.

Housewives in the midst of canning preparations might take a few hints on fruit and vegetable supplies for the winter by considering the same points that are used in judging home canned foods in competition at a state fair.

A description of how to apply common sense and a careful eye in putting up foods for winter use has been prepared by Lilian Shaben of the New York state college of home economics.

Neat and Attractive.

Neatness and attractiveness are called the most important points in judging and for the housewife these also may be considered important in designating foods that will be most attractive to winter appetites.

Color should be as nearly natural as possible, although it is known that in green vegetables, such as peas and spinach, some of the color is necessarily lost in cooking under pressure. The packing liquid should be clear and free from seeds in an exhibition jar, says Miss Shaben, who explains that a cloudy juice means either that the fruit was carelessly handled or that it was over-ripe.

Packing Important.

Packing is important. The ideal pack is said to be one in which the jar is completely filled with solid fruit, with just enough liquid to cover, not to float it. The fruit or vegetables should be whole and firm for exhibition purposes. This point can also be noted by housewives, for ragged edges and soft spots are indications of over-ripe spots or careless handling during the canning process.

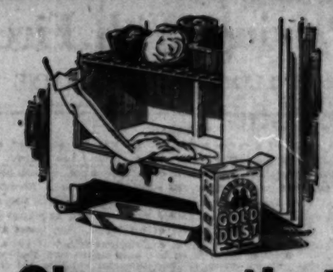
CANNED PEARS USED IN MANY TASTY DISHES

Many tasty and healthful salads and desserts can be made from canned pears at all seasons of the year, says Miss Dorothea Muehl, home economics extension specialist of Purdue university. They will be tasty because the pear is one of the most delicately flavored fruits on the market; and healthy, because pears contain mineral salts and vitamins, and contain a large amount of water, which makes them cool and refreshing.

The fruit should be nearly ripe when pulled from the tree for the best flavor and least amount of grit cells. Grading the fruit according to size will help provide uniform pack in canning. The fruit should be carefully peeled and the core, stem, and blossom end removed.

They will turn dark if allowed to stand any length of time in the open air, ugly brown spots forming as a result of oxygen in the air reacting chemically with the fruit. This difficulty can be partly avoided by placing the fruit in a weak salt brine, made of two tablespoons of salt to one gallon of water. The brine will stop the browning and maintain the beautiful white color.

Since the pear is only mildly acid, Miss Muehl suggests that a medium sirup, made of one cup of sugar and two cups of water, is the best to use in canning.



Clean up that Refrigerator!

NOW is the time of year when you have to be extra careful to keep your refrigerator sweet and sanitary. Wash it at least once a week with Gold Dust. A tablespoonful to a gallon of water is enough. It leaves no soapy residue and it kills all germs. Your grocer has Gold Dust in two convenient sizes. Get your package today.

Playing With Fire

By WILLIAM MAC LEOD RAINE

SYNOPSIS.

Lee Reynolds is owner of a ranch which drought has almost ruined and starved the cattle. School friends from the east come as paying guests. Lee quarrels with her ranch foreman, Ranse Brennan, partly on account of a new hand, named Smith, she hired without his permission, and partly because she rejects his love suit. Brennan is discharged and swears revenge. Dune Daggett, an old ranch helper, recognises Smith as Jack Hadley, millionaire oil man of California, whose father was murdered by outlaws. Hadley tells Daggett that he is searching for the murderer of his father. Lee leases a Mexican ranch and moves the herd there. Mrs. Doris Silver, a flirtatious friend of Lee's, goes on ahead to the Mexican rancho. Brennan drops in on her, just before Jack Hadley, who has been sent on by Lee, arrives. Hadley drives to Palo Duro for supplies and takes Doris with him. Doris wanders off and is abducted and Hadley has to fight several natives to rescue her. A revolution breaks out. Megares, bourry man of the border, is head of it, with Brennan his right hand man. Brennan tries to get Hadley, but he escapes. Hadley and Lee call on Megares to get their story to him before Brennan, who comes in before they leave.

INSTALLMENT XVII.

"I'm going to listen to them and you, too," Megares said, and his grin was ironic.

Brennan glared at his chief, purpling with rage.

"I'm trying to tell you that this woman shot me. She's against us. Refused to sell me any cattle. Lemme see you alone."

"You didn't bring any cattle, then?"

"I brought fifty. Now listen. This wildcat girl here and this hombre Hadley are with the enemy. They're against you, same as they are against me. I can tell you all about 'em, both of 'em."

"Fifty? I told you twenty-five."

The big man ripped out an oath, his patience gone at last. He swung his quirt and brought it down heavily on a small service table. "You trying to ride me, Megares?" he roared.

The insurgent commander touched a bell. An orderly appeared. "Bring a sergeant and a guard," he said in Spanish.

Six men filed into the room. Megares gave orders for the arrest of Brennan.

The colonel drew back, snarling. His hand moved toward the butt of the revolver at his side, but he thought better of it. He was in Mexico, among revolutionists. He might kill Megares and some of these men, but in the end he would be destroyed.

"Don't touch me," he warned. "I'm a friend of Gen. José Barela and an officer in the army."

"Ah! You are a friend of Barela, eh?" The black eyes of Megares were narrowed to shining slits of light. "But Gen. Barela does not command here. I, Manuel Megares, lead this army. Think of that, Mr. Brennan, while you look through the bars." Then, in Spanish, he added abruptly: "Disarm the man. Arrest him."

"You'll have nothing else to think of until you change your tune," Megares flung back.

After Brennan had been taken away the Mexican general turned to Lee. "Twenty-five of your cattle will be returned to you, Miss Reynolds. This man will drive them back himself. And I—I shall give myself the pleasure of calling in person to make sure they have safely arrived in good condition." He bowed, urbanely, full of smiles which were not reassuring.

"You are very kind, general," Lee said.

"But it is you who are kind, dear lady. I am a rough soldier, in camp, far from home. To be entertained at your hacienda by one so charming will be delightful. I do not say good-by but au revoir."

He held her fingers, and his eyes grew sultry as they looked into hers. With a flourish he stooped and kissed her hand.

"As for you, Mr. Hadley, let us for the present forget your little difficulty in this city with my naughty boys. I wish you and Miss Reynolds a pleasant journey back to the rancho. Command me when I can be of service."

Jack made the proper acknowledgments. Ten minutes later he and Lee were driving out of the city.

"We've got to watch our step," he said. "Megares is dangerous. He'll stop at nothing to get what he wants."

"What does he want?" Lee wanted to know.

Their eyes met.

"I don't know. Nothing yet, probably. Hope he's kept too busy to come to the ranch."

"Yes." Lee added, doubtfully, what was in her mind. "He's a man I could be afraid of. There's something ruthless about him."

"He's a bad egg," Jack admitted lightly. "But he'll likely have troubles enough of his own without worrying us. The president of Mexico is a strong man. He's backed by powerful forces. Gen. Luna, in chief command of the government troops, is an able general. I expect to see the insurgents defeated. It can't be too soon to suit me."

"Nor me. Weren't you surprised at the quarrel between him and Ranse? There didn't seem to be cause enough for it."

"It had been simmering before this came up. Megares was just waiting for a chance to clamp down on him."

"What will he do to Ranse?"

"Not much, if Brennan eats humble pie. They seem to be old companions. Did you notice how Brennan looked when he said I was the son of Jack Hadley of the Isabella mine? He was warning Megares. I believe the Mexican was with Francisco the night he killed my father."

"Maybe." Though the sun was warm, Lee felt drenched by a cold shower of dread. "I wish we were all out of this country."

Megares was as good as his word. Twenty-five Lazy R steers, thirsty and hard driven, came bawling over the hill to the gates of the rancho. They were driven by two Mexican vaqueros and a very sullen Gringo. Juan carried a message to his mistress which brought her to the patio porch.

She found Brennan waiting there. He scowled at the young woman. Her clean remoteness, the light, quick step and the lifted head, stirred resentment in him.

"Compliments of Gen. Megares," he jeered, parroting his piece. "Your cattle are at the door. The general will call himself this evening to pay his respects if other duties permit."

Lee had an impulse to placate the man's hostility. It seemed so useless and so wrong.

"Let's call it quits, Ranse. There's no sense in hating. It never gets anywhere."

"We'll see if it doesn't," he snarled. "If you think you can shoot me and kick me out and have me flung into a bull pen with drunks, and get away with it—well, you've got another guess coming, you little hell cat. Go ahead. String along with Megares. You think he's your friend. All right. See how safe that is. I'm not good enough for you, but a dirty greaser cutthroat suits you fine."

Lee did not answer. She turned on her heel and walked into the house.

Hadley and Doris were sitting in a sunny window nook. He was plaiting a horsehair band for her hat and she was taking a vivid interest in the process, one that necessitated her fingers touching his occasionally as he intertwined the strands.

"We're to have a guest this evening—Gen. Megares," Lee told them.

Jack looked up. "Who says so?"

"He sent a message with Ranse along with the cattle."

"Hurrah!" Doris cried.

"You're not going to see him, my dear," Lee told her.

"Not see him. Why shouldn't I see him?"

"Because he isn't a safe playmate for little girls."

"O! So I'm to be sent to bed while you play with him."

"The damage is done as far as I'm concerned—and anyhow I'm not Doris Silver. Ask Jack what he thinks."

"I think that the less either of you see of him the better," Hadley said bluntly. "He's a dangerous man."

"When Jack says dangerous he doesn't mean fascinating, Doris. He means not safe for a woman like you to meet, in a place like this, where he is just now a dictator."

"Isn't that a little absurd, Lee? You said yourself he was very friendly to you. He has shown this by sending back your stock."

Jack decided to mention a story he had heard. A young Mexican had hidden Megares in his home while the outlaw was being hunted. A week later the pretty girl wife of the host disappeared. She had gone into the hills with Megares. The affair had a tragic ending when the girl committed suicide.

"I'll promise not to run away with him," Doris said. "If he's one of the reasons why girls leave home I'm all the more anxious to see him."

"You're not in Philadelphia now, Doris. You had a reminder of that the other day. I don't want this Megares to see you. There's no need taking risks not necessary."

Lee gave her opinion like a supreme court decision, Doris thought resentfully. After all, she was not a little girl. She had a right to do as she pleased.

From her window she watched Megares drive up in a high powered car just before dinner time. Unexpectedly he had come early.

Doris did not waste a moment. She flew to the dresser and very swiftly used a lipstick, touched her soft cheeks with rouge, and patted her golden hair here and there. Slipping downstairs, she opened the door of the living room and walked demurely in.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

New Classroom Ferule.

One day our science class was scheduled to meet in a small room where only benches were available. We were practicing first aid when my slipper came off and landed in front of my science teacher, Mr. E——. I was too embarrassed to get it and as he was calling for order he took hold of the toe of my slipper, went up to the bench, and rapped for order, and then calmly handed my slipper back to me. I was tongue tied and more embarrassed when I saw he was laughing at me.

Will I ever forget that day!

Landowners Recruited for Thistle Battle

Another demonstration of the spraying of Canada thistles with sodium chlorate on Cook county forest preserves weed patches between Ballard road and Dempster street east of Des Plaines yesterday provided opportunity for Cook county thistle commissioners to announce a new step in forcing owners of subdivisions and large tracts of real estate to observe the law in the cutting and eradication of these noxious weeds.

Records of violators are to be compiled through the cooperation of the township boards in this county and the state department of agriculture. Two demonstrations are scheduled for today, the first at 10 a. m. at Belvidere and another this afternoon at 2 o'clock at former Gov. Lowden's farm at Oregon, Ill. Twelve township thistle commissioners attended the demonstration by state men yesterday, as well as many farmers and representatives of the forest preserve system.

A new type of thistle control was suggested yesterday to those who heard O. G. Barrett, Cook county farm adviser.

He recommended that farmers sow alfalfa in badly infested land. Those who can afford the chlorate treatment can afford, instead, the cost of the lime which most soils require before they will grow alfalfa, Barrett said.

He described what had occurred at the Ford airport near Lansing, in the south end of Cook county where 1,400 acres were infested with thistles. Alfalfa was planted after a liming treatment. The first cutting of the crop was without half thistles, but the second year the crop was improved and this year practically no thistles are to be found.

Chicago Composers' Works to Be Played for Tonight's Concert

When Chicago's newest musical organization, the concert band, gives another of its concerts tonight in Grant park, three compositions by Chicago musicians will be played.

MRS. E. E. FREER.

There will be the suite from Mrs. Eleanor Everest Freer's opera, "A Legend of Spain." Mrs. Freer has set more than 150 English lyrics to music, has written for the piano, and composed nine operas.

As an advocate of opera in English she was one of the first to hail Deems Taylor's opera, "Peter Ibbetson," based on the Du Maurier story. She is founder of the American Opera Society of Chicago and a member of many other musical organizations, including the National Federation of Music Clubs and Musicians' Club of Women.

Another number by a Chicagoan will be "Romance," written by William Carroll, a student of the University of Chicago, who composed the music for the Black Friars operetta of 1931.

Question of Necking and Petting Is Never Dismissed for Long

BY DORIS BLAKE.

Well, here we are again. Back on the old, but ever present, theme of N. and P.—meaning, in case you're uninformed—necking and petting. It's one of the current problems that can't be dismissed for long.

"Disillusioned" says Prince Charming prefers his package labeled HOT. How about it Eddie and Joe and Mike and Bill, and all the rest of you? Listen to Disillusioned, and then you tell yours:

"O, Doris, how could you? How could you tell 'Twenty-three' that there are in existence men who appreciate a reticent nature in a girl and who would be charmed at the thought that they are the first instructor in the art of petting? Poor little 'Twenty-three!' Let her have her illusions (is that, perhaps, what you meant?) for when she reaches the ripe old age of 23, still clinging to those beautifully quaint ideals and farther away dreams, she'll realize as she looks about her that it is she and her kind who are treading the lonely road to everlasting single blessedness.

"Her friends, who went in for life and love with a careless gesture unhampered by too many ideals and visions of the kind of love that rises above promiscuous necking and cheap petting, are they still pounding the typewriter keys or selling neckwear?

"A prominent Chicago minister vehemently declared from his pulpit on several occasions, 'Men don't marry the women whom they maul, and with whom they smoke and drink.' O, no? I wonder what becomes of them—they aren't among our spinster friends.

"You ask, 'How do you know?' Because I am 23, I'm fairly normal and intelligent (although I do not smoke or drink), I'm healthy, not bad looking, know how to wear clothes, and am interested not only in people, but also in dancing, books, shows, golf, swimming, and hiking—yet it has been four years since I have been asked for a date.

"I always thought that when Prince Charming came my way he would expect to find a sort of girl my mother told me about, who was always a lady and who had kept herself untouched and unkissed for him, so that they could share their first lovely dreams together.

"It was a beautiful bubble while it lasted—but he came, and he went away—and while one can learn to swallow hard and say, 'That's life,' still it makes one wonder, too late, whether after all the other way wouldn't have been more interesting.

"I hope that 'Twenty-three' doesn't hold to her dreams too long—Prince Charming prefers his package labeled 'HOT' and isn't overmuch concerned about the first instructors.

"DISILLUSIONED."

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

Don't Embarrass Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: The fellow I love will be 22 soon. He knows I love him, but I have never gone out with him. Is it proper to give him a birthday present?" VIRGINIA."

No. It would embarrass him.

An Indiscretion.

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

As a finale to a glorious season of good times we couldn't have selected a better party than the one we had yesterday afternoon at the Oriental theater. My hundred young guests and I sat entranced through a picture that was full of excitement, thrills, interest, and pathos, for "Sporting Blood" has every one of these, and more.

The story is a biography of the race horse, Tommy Boy, from his birth in a storm to the end of a hectic career when he wins the Kentucky Derby. There were races so realistic that we imagined for a time that we were actually seated at Churchill Downs and we cheered and shouted until our throats were dry. There were marvelous shots of the hills of Kentucky and breeding farms where sleek thoroughbreds were trained. There were young mares being schooled for their first race and those that wrinkled their nose and pricked up their ears at the sound of the bugle—the signal to "line up."

Mario Basiola Second Vocalizes in Ravinia; Not Yet in Opera

There has long been a tacit understanding among opera singers that once a season of song is over, not a singer should be discovered within a hundred miles or so of the opera house.

The Ravinia Opera season ended the last night of August.

Still today mysterious sounds of music float through the open windows of the Ravinia home of Mario Basiola, Metropolitan Opera star and his wife, who formerly was Caterina Gobbi, celebrity of the Italian Opera company.

Now and again the singing ceases. Comes a lusty cry. A loud scream.

Then the singing begins again and Mario Basiola Jr. stops to listen.

Mario Jr. is not yet an opera singer. He weighs only nine pounds.

Mario Jr. was born this week.

Singer of Operas Visits Home for Poor Women

Past, present, and future of the Sarah Hackett Stevenson Memorial engaged the attention yesterday of Mme. Rosa Raisa, Civic opera star, who paid a visit to the institution that will celebrate its 40th anniversary during the 1933 World's Fair. Mme. Raisa was escorted through the various departments in which she has become interested, by Mrs. Sallie Morrow, senior member of the board and recording secretary, who has been working for the home ever since its establishment during the 1893 exposition.

Thirty-eight years ago, Mrs. Morrow told the singer, the memorial was opened to give shelter to women who found themselves stranded here. From the first it was regarded as a model institution. Twelve women were cared for during the first few days of its existence. Since that time its capacity has grown until during the recent depression, 125 women and 70 children were sheltered at one time.

Among those of the home are middle aged women stranded in the city; nurses past their years of usefulness; young mothers burdened with small children; deaf women who cannot safely travel about alone; unmarried mothers in need of a helping hand, and various others. The instruction classes and medical departments proved of especial interest to Mme. Raisa, who complimented especially a dental clinic recently opened by Dr. Dora Hendrickson.

Antoinette Tells Latest Methods of Hygiene of the Mouth

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

The proper expression is not "brushing the teeth," but "brushing the mouth." Mouth hygiene, in other words, means more things than just teeth care. It constitutes hygiene of the teeth, outer and inner surfaces of both upper and lower teeth, gums, inside of the cheeks, roof of the mouth, and the tongue.

For the teeth care, the idea to keep in mind is not only brushing but massaging the soft tissues nearby. The teeth must be cleansed at the gum margin and in the crevices where the food particles lodge.

Authorities agree that it is in the gum tissue between the teeth, due to lack of stimulation, that eighty per cent of pyorrhea cases have their inception.

A point in brushing the teeth now being stressed by our best dental authorities is frequent rinsing of the brush during the tooth brushing process. After thoroughly brushing in one spot, the advice is to rinse the brush well and then proceed to the next. That means to let the clear water run over the brush freely before you continue.

If the gums are tender or bleeding slightly when the brush is used, keep right on with the brushing, with especial care about frequent rinsing of the tooth brush. By this method, tender and bleeding gums can be stimulated until they become firm and healthy.

The crosswise motion in teeth brushing, also the up and down motion, is an old time method not approved by modern dental hygienists. Circulating brushing is the thing today. And cold water is advocated over warm water, since warm water has a tendency to soften the bristles, preventing a beneficial gum massage.

Then, keep the brush sterile and sweet by shaking common table salt on the bristles and back, and lay it up to dry.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

CLARE N.: FALLING HAIR MAY be checked by brushing and massage. Brush your hair every morning and night for five minutes and some time during the day massage the scalp with fingertips.

E. R.: TO CHECK EXCESSIVE perspiration use a twenty-five per cent solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water. Apply it every other night until three applications have been made.

MARY T. N.: MAKEUP SHOULD be applied only to a clean surface, and every particle of make-up should be removed with a thorough face cleansing before going to bed.

Gray Lace and White Fox Form Parisian Costume

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Gray, in soft smoky tones is a color that society women in Paris are showing a preference for when they choose their evening gowns. Gray lace is the extra-favorite color and fabric combination of these women when they are no longer young. In their choice they show an enviable taste, for this color and material flatter the gray haired women like nothing else can, and when white fox is added to lend its soft flattery to white hair, the result is something to rave about. If women with white hair could see how beautiful they look in such ensembles there would be such a vogue for gray lace plus white fox as would hearten this beauty-hungry world mightily.

The evening ensemble sketched today is one of the Paris creations in gray lace and white fox fur that is being worn by fashionable continental women. The wrap is a short jacket of gray lace, a rather heavy coarse kind, and it is boredered all around by luxurious bands of white fox fur.

The dress has the simplest of bodices trimmed only with sun-ray bands of gray satin, and the crushed girdle is made of gray satin also. The skirt is only about an inch short of the floor and it has a deep hip yoke that is curved up in the front and down in the back. Below this the skirt flares in a modified circular movement.

This ensemble comes from Worth.

Bright Sayings of the Children

Patsy had been naughty and her mother was annoyed. After considerable silence Patsy said: "Mother, are you still mad at me?" and before her mother had a chance to reply little Margie spoke up with: "Yes, we am mad." E. F. D.

A father said to his 6 year old son, "To think of all the lovely babies in the hospital, and I had to pick a cry baby like you."

Quickly the child retorted, "When I saw who was coming to pick me I started to cry and I have been crying ever since." B. L.

"John Henry," What a Man! What a Man!

Roark Bradford Tells Negroes' Hercules.

"John Henry," by Roark Bradford [Harpers]. Published today.

WHAT Paul Bunyan was to lumber jacks "John Henry" was to the simple Negroes of the lower Mississippi. Legends sung of John Henry known to all roustabouts. From Roark Bradford has written this story of his life, in the very cadence and spirit of the black man. The book tells the story of the birth, the life and the death of "John Henry," the man of years in which every deed and every word was epic. John Henry always was "gittin' around" and the story of his wanderings and his many quests ambles up and down the Mississippi. Mr. Bradford records his birth. "He came into the world with a caul hook for a right hand a river sharp his tongue. . . . So about that time John Henry raised up and stretched. 'Well,' he said, 'ain't hit time?'"

"Sho hit's about supper time," said his mamma.

"And after," said his papa.

"And long after," said the woman.

"Well," said John Henry, "what dogs had they supper?"

"They did," said his mamma.

"All de dogs," said his papa.

"Long since," said the woman.

"Well, den," said John Henry, "ain't I as good as de dogs?"

And when John Henry said that he got mad. He reared back in his bed and broke out the slats. He kicked his mouth and yowled, and it put out the lamp. He cleaved his tongue and spat and it put out the fire. "Don't make me mad!" said John Henry, and then thunder rumbled and said, "Don't let me git mad on de Lawd's day, 'cause I'm skeered of myself when I gits mad."

It was madness that killed him after a fabulous life in which he worked harder than any group of men. He met a steam winch driver the first time in his life. The driver said: "I guess I can't hire you, John Henry." "That winch runs as much as ten good men, and I reckon it'll take one nigger."

"When John Henry heard that he stood up and laughed and laughed. 'Scuse me for laughin', captain, he said, 'but dat tawk do sound funny. Dat winch might work like ten men, but how about John Henry? I burned out all de men you had. I kin burn dat steam winch out.'

"So th'ow down another steam pipe so I kin git some action. I'll move more cotton on de Big Jim Wolf River than you kin wid dat steam winch. I'm John Henry and I'm six foot and my strenk can't hit de bottom. Maybe de women fool me but I doubt it, maybe, too, de gamblers. Maybe de happy dust cross me up. Maybe de preacher put me in de dozens. But cotton rollin' cotton ain't nothin' but cotton, and can't nobody fool me. I'm gwine clean dat boat befo' de sun go down or my name ain't John Henry."

Then began the titanic struggle between John Henry and the steam winch.

"So everybody stood back and watched while they put another steam pipe for John Henry, and they took bets their money on whether he could burn the winch out." But John Henry didn't burn the winch out. The sun went down so did big John Henry. He died rolling cotton.

John Henry had a gal named Anna. She was among the rooters for her man while the killing was going on, but when the funeral was held Julie Anne was there to be seen. John Henry's women were there, wailing

It was madness that killed him after a fabulous life in which he worked harder than any gang of men. He met a steam winch for the first time in his life. The captain said: "I guess I can't hire you," to John Henry. "That winch rolls cotton like ten good men, and it only takes one nigger."

When John Henry heard that he stood up and laughed and laughed. "Scuse me for laughin', cap'm,' he said, 'but dat tawk do sound funny. Dat winch might work like ten good men, but how about John Henry? I whupped out all de men you got and I'm born dat steam winch out, too."

So he th'ew down another stage for me to kin git some action. I'll roll some cotton on de Big Jim White den with wid dat steam winch, 'cause I'm John Henry and I'm six foot tall and my strenk can't hit de bottom. Nobody women fool me bad, and nuver, too, de gamblers. Maybe de boss dust cruss me up and de preacher put me in de dozens. But nuthin' cotton ain't nothin' but work and don't nobody fool me. . . . I'll race dat boat befo' de sun goes down or my name ain't John Henry."

Then began the titanic struggle between John Henry and the steam winch.

"Everybody stood back and watched while they put another stage on for John Henry, and they talked and laid their money on whether he would turn the winch out." But John Henry didn't turn the winch out. When the sun went down so did big John Henry. He died rolling cotton.

John Henry had a gal named Julie Anne. She was among the loudest mourners for her man while the winching was going on, but when the funeral was held Julie Anne wasn't anywhere to be seen. John Henry's other women were there, wailing and extolling him, and Poor Selma, the bad woman of Argenta, "who proudly said of herself, 'I'm a bad habit and I can't be quit. Git you a woman you love and marry her, but bring yo' money to me. Yo' wife might be de four-day fevers, but I'm de wastin' disease.'" Selma called the attention of the congregation to the fact that Julie Anne was absent. "Dat gal didn't love him," she said, "he done for her and she done him bad, and dat's what stretched him out."

And as she was talking Julie Anne was brought in cold in death.

"She picked up de hook John Henry laid down,
Lawd, Lawd;

Mr. Bradford has caught the Negro rhythm in his prose. "John Henry" is folklore. Mr. Bradford, in case you have forgotten, is the author of "Ol' Man Adam an' His Chillun," the group of Negro sermons from which much of "the Green Pastures" was taken.

BROKEN NECKS CAN BE CURED, SURGEON SAYS; CITES HIS CASE

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—Rear Admiral Charles F. Stokes, M. D., former surgeon general of the United States navy, whose neck was broken, but he lived to talk of it, came to Montreal today to address the American Academy of Physical Therapy in convention here.

Three years ago he broke his neck and three ribs and was given up as a hopeless case by physicians but he recovered. He gave a lecture to the convention delegates on his own case, declaring that with proper care, treatment, and in proper climatic conditions astounding cures can be worked even in cases as severe as his own.

Admiral Stokes spoke a second time before the delegates, pleading for Canadian assistance in the effort being made to abolish narcotics. There are half a million drug adicts in the United States, he said. The drug traffic cannot be eliminated except by international effort, he argued.

Good morning!

It's a reasonably well acted but lowly paced and heavily directed farce comedy with music. It will prove fairly entertaining, I imagine, to those who can understand the dialogue, but is too involved to appeal to the fan who isn't a linguist. Such music and dancing as there is pleases, but the heavy slices of conversation and action almost obliterate the taste of the filling. "Does Your Sweetie Write to You?" is the title of a song which the management hopes will prove as popular as "Two Hearts in Waltz Time." It won't.

The story—it has possibilities that weren't realized!—is about the stage-struck sister of an adoring and resourceful postman whose varied activities in her behalf finally land her in the prima donna rôle of a musical comedy, playing opposite the bookoo six feet of papa on whom she has long had a schoolgirl's crush.

The heroine makes you think of a marionette. She is blond and doll-like, her work is brittle and automatic and her eyes and mouth work like those of a ventriloquist's dummy. Miss Anny Spatz is her name. Berthe Ostyn, in a minor rôle, is prettier and, I thought, a better actress.

Vlasta Burian, said to be one of the most popular comedians in Germany, plays the brother. He didn't make me laugh. I don't know the name of the male lead, and you don't get to see much of him. But he's good looking and replete with S. A. Strange they didn't give him more to do.

Sound, photography, sets and costumes are oke, and there may be laughs in some of the lines. German customers are invited to write in to me on this score.

Mr. Machat [the Cinema's manager] tells me that his charming little house is to have all of UFA's products in the future.

"And UFA's making some great pictures!" sedde.

Nice!

10,000 Hear Concert by Army Band and See Cavalry Feats

Ten thousand persons attended the Army and Navy show last night at the Chicago Stadium. At a matinee performance, 7,000 persons, mostly children, witnessed the event. All proceeds of the show will be donated to charity.

Gov. Emmerson and other dignitaries sat in the reviewing stand. The chief entertainment was furnished by the United States Army band, formed of picked musicians by Gen. John J. Pershing at the close of the war and led by Capt. W. J. Stannard. There was a jumping contest by the Black Horse troop commanded by Capt. Chauncey McCormick. Lieut. Oberlin C. Laird of the Great Lakes Naval Training station led a detail of sailors in a parade and drill.

Cancer Called Part Price of Modern Living

New Lead-Manganese Treatment.

New York, Sept. 3.—(AP)—Discovery that manganese combined with lead is useful in treatment of cancer is reported in a special supplement of the American Journal of Cancer out tomorrow.

Mixing manganese with lead prevents the lead from poisoning the cancer patient. Lead was hailed a few years ago as a possible relief for cancer, but it failed, because it killed patients about as rapidly as it destroyed cancer cells.

On another phase of cancer H. Gideon Wells of the Otho S. A. Sprague Memorial institute of the University of Chicago says:

"Cancer is not essentially a disease of old age, dependent on senescence of tissues, but a disease of long irritated tissues, the necessary duration of irritation being seldom reached in the first half of life.

"Taking all the evidence, it seems impossible to escape the conclusion that the occurrence of cancer in both animals and man is influenced by heredity, and it seems most probable that the hereditary influence is an extremely important one."

While not "denying the possibility that there is a real increase in cancer in people of cancer age," Dr. Wells points out that the seeming rapid spread of this disease may be accounted for in the increased longevity of the highly civilized peoples. They now have distinctly more opportunity to develop cancer. Better medical diagnosis and reporting facilities also increase the cancer count.

The manganese-cancer experiments are reported by William H. Kraemer, M. D., of the tumor clinic of Jefferson hospital, Philadelphia. His account is brief and he states that it is "preliminary." He credits Dr. Hamilton Bradshaw, consulting chemist of the tumor clinic, with suggesting the manganese.

Blames Diabetic Condition on Enzyme Affecting the Blood.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 3.—(AP)—A new theory of diabetes, indicating that it comes from a destroying enzyme, was presented to the American Chemical society today.

This report was made in a symposium on endocrines, the ductless glands whose hormone secretions are credited with a considerable share in the master control of both health and bodily appearance.

Experimental evidence was produced by Dr. I. M. Rabinowitch of the Montreal general hospital that diabetes is not due to defective insulin production, but to destruction of insulin which has been formed normally.

"Blood of diabetics," said Dr. Rabinowitch, "contains an enzyme which destroys insulin. A large number of conditions cause excess accumulation of this enzyme in the blood."

"Infection," Dr. Rabinowitch said, "is the commonest cause of the enzyme accumulation. Diet influences the amount of this enzyme in the blood. A large amount of fat increases, while carbohydrates [sugars] decrease it.

"This suggested the possibility of giving large amounts of carbohydrates without the use of insulin or with lesser quantities than required with the old diets, providing the fat content of the diet is kept at a definitely known level."

Dr. Rabinowitch pointed out that "infection," which means colds, boils, etc., is the worst possible accident that can happen in diabetes.

THE STAGE

"THE Green Pastures" company and executive staff arrived in Chicago yesterday morning to begin final preparations for the première of this famous play at the Illinois theater next Monday night. In addition to the cast of 97 Negro actors and singers, headed by Richard B. Harrison, who has the rôle of "de Lawd," the party included Rowland Stebbins, the producer; Marc Connelly, the author; Roark Bradford, author of "Old Man Adam and His Children," upon which the play was based; Robert Edmond Jones, stage designer; and Miriam Doyle, art director of the enterprise. Miss Doyle is the daughter of a former Chicago chief of police—the late Austin J. Doyle.

"The Green Pastures" ended its New York run last Saturday night with a record of 640 consecutive performances. Daily matinées were given during its final week, which brought $21,000 into the box office. The original company comes to Chicago unchanged, except in two rôles—the Angel Gabriel, whose first representative was killed in an automobile accident a year ago, and a child, who grew into a young woman before the end of the run.

"Pearly Gates," the arrangement of Negro spirituals in the form of a "morality play" which came to the Apollo theater last Monday, will end its engagement with tomorrow night's performance. Its principals will return to their studies and duties at Clark university, Atlanta. Prof. Frederick Hall, its author and director, states that the Chicago performances were planned for only one week, and that this is the first time his production has been given as a theatrical entertainment. The form of the show has been improved since the première.

The Selwyn theater announces that it will open for the new season Oct. 18 with "Once in a Lifetime," the comedy of Hollywood satire that has had a long run in New York. The Broadway run will end tomorrow night after 401 performances. The original company, including Jean Dixon, Hugh O'Connell, Charles Halton, Marjorie Wood, Ruthelma Stevens and Grant Mills, will go on tour.

The Chicago Civic Shakespeare society's company began rehearsals for its impending productions of "Hamlet," "The Merchant of Venice" and "Julius Caesar" at the Princess theater yesterday. The engagement will begin Oct. 19, at either the Apollo or the Garrick theater. Fritz Leiber, William Faversham, Tyrone Power and Helen Menken will appear in principal roles.

George White has postponed the Broadway première of his new "Scandals" until Sept. 14. The revue is now in the second week of an engagement in Newark, N. J. Next week it will be given in Brooklyn.

Oak Park, which hasn't had a theater to call its own for two years, will find a dramatic stock company in its midst a month hence. The old Warrington theater has been re-built, and re-named the Tudor; and a new play will be given there every week. A. A. Milne's "Michael and Mary," from last winter's program of the Dramatic League of Chicago, will be the first bill.

Pope and Duce Satisfied with New Compact

K. of C. Playgrounds Still Unsettled Issue.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Sept. 3.—The quarrel between the church and state in Italy, which raged all summer, was relegated to archives of history today following yesterday's accord.

Pope Pius XI. summoned to his private library members of the congregation of ecclesiatic affairs after the regular weekly meeting. He explained to them the details of the accord.

Complete satisfaction was reiterated today in a article in Populo di Italia. That article, it is believed, emanated from the pen of il duce himself.

The article says there never was any doubt about a settlement being reached in official quarters, despite the tempest which had been aroused in the world's press. The matters at stake, the article continues, were episodic, involving only questions of a particular nature, and never at any time was there any danger of canceling the Lateran accord.

Then it is explained that matters of a subsidiary nature involved three controversal points having to do with the interpretation of article 43: First, the presence of anti-Fascists in the Catholic Action directorate. Second, the possibility of a syndical organization outside the Fascist state.

The article declares:

"These three points have been solved beyond the possibility of equivocation. The Catholic Action society admits no directors adverse to Fascism. The directors now are bishops who swear loyalty to the state. Syndical work is now reserved exclusively for the state. With youth associations placed under the aegis of the national flag and having only recreative and educational character, the church has its own field while it leaves to the Balilla organization all athletic, sportive, moral, and material training. Thus the attitude satisfies all."

Some question still remains about the fate of the Knights of Columbus organization in Rome. The knights have three playgrounds here and about $1,000,000 invested. The operation of those playgrounds, however, comes under the heading of sport organization. That the new accord forbids to any church association, reserving it exclusively to Balilla. Since the knights, however, are a foreign organization, it is thought possible that some exception may be made in their favor.

Venetian Carnival Set for Tonight on Lake Within Sherman Park

Last year's Venetian night carnival, held under the auspices of the south park commissioners, will be repeated tonight in the Sherman park lagoon, at 52d street and South Racine avenue. The success of the spectacle last year was such that the commissioners are seriously considering whether this picturesque celebration may not be adapted to lake front presentation as an annual summer festival.

More than forty floats will be illuminated in the water procession this evening, all the designs and transparancies used in the decoration being the work of children's clubs of the south side. The carnival is the outgrowth of lantern parades held for the past ten years by children of the south parks, all the lighting effects being worked out by the youngsters. The beauty and originality of the entries made the feature increasingly popular entertainment. Last year for the first time it was transferred to the water, the better to set off its brilliance.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—Illiteracy in the United States declined during the last decade from 6 per cent to 4.3 per cent of the total population over ten years of age, according to figures issued today by the census bureau. The decrease amounted to 648,152.

"On April 1, 1930," the census report said, "there were 98,723,047 persons 10 years of age and over in the United States. Of that number 4,283,753, or 4.3 per cent, were reported as unable to read or write either in English or in any other language." In 1920 there were 82,729,315 persons over ten years of age, of whom 4,931,905, or 6 per cent, were unable to read or write any language.

For persons 10 to 20 years of age in 1930 the percentage of illiteracy was 1.6, according to the bureau, compared with 5.3 per cent for those 21 years old and over. Of the total number of illiterates, 4.4 per cent were male and 4.3 per cent were female.

Geneseo, Ill., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—Record low water in Green river near this city brought to light the leg bones of a prehistoric animal, believed to have been a mastodon, a few days ago.

Walter Schuttler and Scott Lorimer, high school youths, found the bones while wading in the stream, which was little more than a foot deep. An end of the larger bones was protruding from the water. The boys thought it a stump, but investigation revealed a large bone, the lower end of which was buried in the river bed. Dr. Arthur Parsons, a physician here, pronounced it to be a thigh bone. Further search revealed a smaller specimen in the river bank. This is believed to be a bone from the lower leg. The thigh bone is almost three feet long and at the larger joint it is eight inches across. The smaller bone is eighteen inches long. Both are almost intact.

Flyer Finds Pollen 2,000 Ft. Over Lake 30 Miles Off Shore

Hay fever victims living in the suburbs west of Chicago may take heart, and those near the lake may be discouraged at the report of a recent experiment with pollen made from an airplane at heights up to 8,000 feet. That was revealed yesterday.

O. C. Durham, aerial botanist, ascended in a plane equipped with glass slides, vaseline and other supplies for taking pollen specimens. Flying thirty miles out over Lake Michigan, east of Waukegan, he exposed slides for five minutes at heights of from 10 feet to 4,000 feet. Then flying westward over Libertyville, Mundelein and that region west of Waukegan, he exposed slides at various heights up to 8,000 feet.

"I found that up to 4,000 feet the pollen in the wind over the lake averaged about 75 per cent of that over the land to the west," he said. "It is disappointing, as we had believed that the lake acted as a much greater barrier against pollen. However, the pollen was descending, due to the coolness of the water. It is possible that by the time the wind had reached the opposite lake shore it would have been much freer of pollen."

At a height of 2,000 feet over the lake, the botanist was surprised to run into a regular cloud of pollen, 200 granules collecting on the slide in five minutes, in a wind of from 50 to 60 miles an hour.

The experiment was the first to be made with pollen at a height of more than 5,000 feet, Durham said, and the first of any sort to be made over a body of water.

At a height of 8,000 feet, 14 granules showed after five minutes' exposure. At a height of 100 feet, 345 were registered while over land, 176 while over the water. At a height of 4,000 feet, 24 were registerd over the land, 21 over the water. The wind was blowing from the north in the low levels, he said. A north wind is thought to bring less pollen than a west or south wind.

Never Leave a Child in Care of Strangers at a Strange Place

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

Of course golf is a great game. But one August when I was staying for a while in a summer hotel I saw a woman who treated her small son with less consideration than she gave to her game.

She hadn't been in the hotel a day when she turned her little boy over to a waitress who was off duty, and from late afternoon until midnight she went off dining and dancing. After that first day she would drive to a distant golf course and play from eighteen to thirty-six holes a day. She apparently had no qualms and the child didn't rebel—he just hung around. As it happened, the waitresses were kind girls and good to the child. But the mother didn't know or apparently care much—she took a chance.

Another woman I knew of went to a strange city to stay at a hotel. She wanted to go out in the evening, so she pinned the baby in its carriage, got the floor maid to stay with him, and came back to find the baby dead —smothered or strangled by the covers. This shows how important it is to have a person who is both capable and interested in charge of a baby or young child.

In the summer or when traveling many families with young children stay for a short time at a hotel or boarding house. Husband and wife naturally want to go out in the evening—dancing, or walking on the beach, or playing somewhere together —so they leave their most precious possessions in the care of absolute strangers, usually waitresses or chambermaids, who may be tired and fall asleep, who may think it's nonsense to watch over children, and so leave their post, or who may know nothing about the care of children. They are taking all kinds of chances with indifference, not to mention possible unkindness.

If you do leave your children in a strange place be most circumspect in doing so. I have no formula with which to meet the difficulty—each one is a special situation. Often it can be met adequately if the right people are available for taking care of children. If it can't be you'll have to make the best of it.

For my part I'd stay home rather than take a chance, cramped and disappointed as I might feel.

Junior League Has New Home; Opens It Soon

BY THALIA

THE Junior league's new address is 619 North Michigan avenue and its telephone number is Superior 8647, the same as it was when the office was in the Drake. The girls are justifiedly pleased with their new quarters in the Pelham Court building. The rooms are planned to be open the day after labor day, and there probably will be some sort of an opening party later on. League business will henceforth be conducted in a more private and quieter atmosphere than any they have enjoyed so far. The place has a living room with a fireplace, two small rooms to be used for offices, and a kitchenette providing small lunch and tea facilities. The rooms have been done simply in modern fashion, and the color scheme is red, white, and yellow. Mrs. Shreve Badger attended to as much of the decorating as she could before she sailed in August with her mother, Mrs. John H. Winterbotham, and her sister, Rue, for Europe. The rest has been done by the various leaguers who have been in town. Of course, it won't be entirely complete for a little while yet.

White Elephant Rummage Sale Another Autumn Sign.

Sign of fall—another White Elephant Rummage tea, the annual one that Mrs. D. Mark Cummings has at her Lake Forest house, this to be on Thursday afternoon, Sept. 10, with bridge playing in conjunction thereto. The rhymed invitations on magnified semblances of playing cards advance persuasive arguments for attending, with gift in hand:

Those curtains in the attic trunk,
Which are an awful sight.
The slippers you still hope to wear
But know they are too tight.

Or, if you're in a rented house
The things you had to buy
To supplement the chinaware
Are no use by-and-by—

Mrs. Harold F. Van Steenderen [Mary Kimball] is to sing to the accompaniment of the organ that her father, Mr. Curtis N. Kimball of Highland Park, has presented to Olivet Institute, at the benefit concert program to be given at the institute next Friday evening. The proceeds of the concert will go to the emergency relief work being conducted by Olivet on the near north side.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

New York, Sept. 3.—[Special.]—Mr. and Mrs. J. Harry Alexander, who were guests of Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt at Saratoga Springs, have returned to their Long Island residence.

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Harriman Russell, at Port Washington, has returned to Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Roosevelt have gone to Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Field have left Saratoga Springs for their Long Island residence.

Mr. and Mrs. James R. Hunt Jr., who were married on June 13 and went abroad on their honeymoon, returned from Europe on Monday. They now are in the Adirondacks and will come soon to Glen Cove, where they will pass the early autumn with Mrs. Hunt's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Irving Pratt, at Welwyn. Mrs. Hunt was Miss Eleanor Pratt.

Lake Geneva Yacht Club Dance; Busbys Going Abroad.

The Lake Geneva Yacht club is to hold its annual dinner and ball at the Lake Geneva Country club on Saturday evening, Sept. 12. During the dinner the prizes won during the summer season of yachting are to be presented.

Mrs. Leonard A. Busby is coming on from Siasconset, Mass., next Thursday to spend a week here seeing her Chicago friends before she sails with her daughter, Janet, for Europe. Miss Janet is to study this winter with André Lhote in Paris, and her brother, Jack, is going to Hotchkiss prep. Mrs. Busby is to be at the Drake while she's in Chicago.

In brief—Mr. and Mrs. George W. Blossom of the Drake Towers have taken the George W. Blossom Jr. house in Lake Forest while the junior Blossom family goes dude-ranching for a few weeks at H-F-Bar ranch in Wyoming . . . Mrs. Harve G. Badgerow of Winnetka, just returned from summer vacationing, is plunged into busy preparations for sending her daughter, Susan, abroad to Mlle. Le Boucher's school, La Roseraie at Neuilly, outside Paris. Susan is to sail on Sept. 26. . . Mr. and Mrs. William J. Chalmers gave a luncheon for the Gustavus F. Swifts before they and their daughters, Miss Marie and Miss Geraldine, left Watch Hill a few days ago for Chicago. . . Mr. and Mrs. George A. Poole Jr. are home from a visit with Mrs. Poole's parents, the John W. Stuarts at Harbor Point. . . Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Orcutt of Glencoe and their children, Frances and Dwight, have returned from an eastern motor and boat trip.

FOES BUSY AS JIMMY WALKER PLAYS IN EUROPE

Trip Furnishes Seabury Ammunition.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 3.—[Special.]—Mayor James J. Walker's political house is rapidly being put in disorder while he is industriously searching for health and a solution of the unemployment situation in the night clubs of Europe. There were two bits of news in today's run of the mill that will call for a lot of explaining.

The first has to do with Russell T. Sherwood, personal accountant to the mayor, who has been vanishing and reappearing at intervals and now appears to have disappeared completely—at least from the jurisdiction of the legislative investigating committee—leaving word he would not be back until the mayor returned from Europe regardless of subpoenas.

His European Playmate.

The second incident concerns Mayor Walker's playmate in Europe, one David Maier, variously described as "secretary," "German linguist," "old friend" and "boon companion." Mr. Maier also has been described as an ex-convict.

This afternoon he was further introduced to Mayor Walker's home town as an alleged keeper of disorderly houses in the old tenderloin. Police records of the past, it was said at headquarters, may be consulted only on an order from the courts, but the transcript of Mr. Maier's trial for bribery in 1914 in connection with a vice case quotes Maier as admitting having been in the disorderly house business for "twelve or fourteen years." In the bribery case Maier was convicted and sentenced to Sing Sing prison.

Returning to Germany.

Mr. Maier has quit the company of Mr. Mayor" and now is returning to Germany. He is a figure of considerable interest to the legislative investigators here who want to question him about the activities of several of his friends in Tammany circles. Mr. Maier, however, does not plan to return to New York. Mr. Walker does.

Samuel Seabury, who is conducting his investigation into municipal affairs before the legislative committee, said this afternoon that the second disappearance of Mayor Walker's accountant, Mr. Sherwood, was "difficult to reconcile with statements of the mayor's friends that they have nothing to hide.

"It seems to me an extraordinary as well as a suspicious circumstance," said Mr. Seabury, "that the personal agent of the present mayor of the city, when told a subpoena had been issued for his appearance before the legislative committee, should flee the jurisdiction of the state."

File Charges Against Woman Commissioner

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 3.—(AP)—The Accident Prevention and Safety league, through its counsel, Benjamin Antin, New York, former Democratic state senator, today filed with Gov. Roosevelt charges of mismanagement against Miss Frances Perkins, industrial commissioner, and her assistants in the administration of the state insurance fund.

SOCIALIST LEADER AND MINISTER HELD ON PICKET CHARGES

Paterson, N. J., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—Norman Thomas, former Socialist candidate for mayor of New York; A. J. Muste, dean of Brookwood Labor college at Katonah, N. Y., a prominent New York Episcopal clergyman, and a well known Episcopal layman of Long Island were among forty-six persons arrested today as pickets in the silk strike here.

NORMAN THOMAS.

The clergyman was the Rev. Bradford Young of the Church of the Holy Trinity. Spear Knebel, social secretary of the Episcopal diocese of Long Island, was the layman who was arrested with the Rev. Mr. Young and the others.

Mr. Thomas' party, according to Paterson police, invited the arrest as a test of the ruling recently handed down by Judge Forster W. Freeman, who decreed that a mill where there was no strike could not be picketed.

They were arrested in front of the John Hand silk mill on Gould avenue where sixty-five strikers were corralled yesterday and charged with unlawful assembly.

Owner of Sunken Rotarian Wins New Court Delay

Attorney Miles J. Devine and Walter J. Powers, owners of the hulk Rotarian, which for the last ten months has been sunk in the river near the Clark street bridge, won another continuance from Municipal Judge Jay A. Schiller yesterday on the charge of obstructing river traffic. The judge continued the case to Sept. 10 when Attorney Devine told him that a crew of a dozen men has been busy lifting the sunken craft for the last nineteen days.

OPENING OF OIL WELLS IN TEXAS LEFT UP IN AIR

Lifting of Lid Announced, Then Retracted.

Kilgore, Tex., Sept. 3.—(AP)—Uncertain as to whether the giant east Texas oil field would be reopened Saturday, under terms of a state proration order, was voiced here tonight when Gen. Jacob F. Wolters revoked an order calling for the evacuation of the area, where a shutdown has been enforced by martial law.

Holds Conference.

Today after a conference between the governor and members of the Texas railroad commission [the regulatory committee named to enforce proration under terms of a new law] it was indicated the governor would approve the order permitting each well to produce 225 barrels of oil daily. Previously he had disapproved the plan, explaining it would be unfair to small producers.

Later Gov. Sterling warned newspaper men against taking some one else's word as to what he was going to do. "I am the only man that can lift martial law in east Texas," he said, explaining he had not told any one he would modify martial law.

Cotton Session Probable.

Austin, Tex., Sept. 3.—(AP)—J. E. McDonald, Texas commissioner of agriculture, said tonight he had assurances from eighteen members of the state senate, a majority, that they favored a special session of the legislature to enact a law to curb cotton production.

Earlier in the day Gov. Sterling told McDonald he would call such a session when seventeen senators had promised to support such a bill.

Appoint Gas Company Receiver.

Waurika, Okla., Sept. 3.—(AP)—A temporary receiver for the Lone Star Gas corporation was appointed tonight, a few hours after Gov. W. H. Murray brought suit seeking cancellation of the company's right to do business, a receivership, and $365,095 damages, allegedly due the state as fees and penalties.

District Judge Eugene Rice named John Hoffman, Oklahoma City, to the receivership post. Included in the action were the Lone Star Gas corporation, the Lone Star Gas company, Community Natural Gas company, Meridian Gas company, and the Guthrie Gas Service company. The concerns operated in twenty-six Oklahoma cities.

The petition charged the companies with unfair and destructive competition, abuse of rights and privileges, discrimination in gas rates, and filing of "false and fraudulent returns" on value of property.

CHARGE HE MADE WIFE TAKE FATAL DRINK OF POISON

Evansville, Ind., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—Coroner Edward Kraft has begun investigation of what may prove to be one of the city's strangest murder cases. Ira "Jack" Turren, a factory worker, was arrested today charged with forcing his wife, Maude, aged 29, to drink poison, which caused her death at the St. Mary's hospital early this morning.

Turren was accused by his wife before her death in the presence of neighbors of having forced her to drink the poison after her return home from a "date" with another man last night. Turren is known to have purchased the poison on Tuesday night. George Bohn, local druggist, told officers that he remembered the purchase.

Bertha Huskinson and Mattie Thayer, neighbors of the Turrens, corroborated the story that the victim before her death accused her husband of forcing the poison down her throat.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Babe Bush, who is spending his leisure these days riding on merry-go-rounds, yesterday attempted to have his Chicago White Sox stop the miserable Detroit Tigers with the aid of minor league pitchers. It couldn't be done, as witness the fact the Tigers slashed the Sox by a score of 9 to 3.

The Sox started out as if they were in a vicious mood, making four hits before the Tigers made any. But in the third Wild Bob Weiland curled up and thereafter the Sox offensive did likewise, unless you want to count a homer and a double by Reynolds after the fire was out, and a single and a double by Appling which served no purpose whatsoever.

Two pitchers loaned their inefficiency to a six run Tiger romp in the third inning. Weiland got things under way by passing Hayworth and Herring, after which Johnson singled to right, filling the bases. Koenig made Reynolds sprint to pull down his fly, Hayworth scoring, and Herring taking third. Stone bunted simply to Sullivan, who fumbled the ball, Herring scoring. Weiland then issued his third pass of the inning and his fifth of the game, Alexander being the recipient.

Enter Mr. Garland. Bang!

At this point the bases were full and Wild Robert went away to let Lon Garland, the Archie, Tex., boy, come in and try his hand. G. Walker's belle to Lou was a two base hit to right center, Johnson and Stone scoring and Alexander stopping at third.

Fonseca carried those creaking shins much faster than you'd think they could be carried to make a one hand catch of Rogell's drive to left center, but Alexander ran home after the catch. Richardson singled, driving home G. Walker with the sixth run of the inning. The Sox had made a run in the first inning so the count after the Tigers' third was Detroit 6, Chicago, 1.

Reynolds knocked his sixth homer of the year to start the Sox third and this concluded the Chicago scoring up until Reynolds drove Blue home in the ninth.

Sox Pitchers Give Nine Walks.

The whole game having been played in the third inning, there is little to write about what the Tigers did in the innings subsequent to the big

REDS TEASE CUBS FOR TEN INNINGS, THEN WIN, 3 TO 2

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 3.—Those last place Reds are becoming a sure enough nuisance. They made it four in a row over the Cubs today, carrying off a 3 to 2 ten inning decision by beating Pat Malone, who was anxious to perpetrate an impressive victory so as to scare the White Sox, whom he'll tackle in the big charity affair of next Wednesday.

Malone might have had his wish for his 13th win of the campaign if he'd been able to fool a lad with the funny name of Estel Crabtree. Twice the big speed baller was presented with a one run advantage. He lost it the first time because of a couple of successive hits. And he lost it the second time because young Mr. Crabtree exploded a homer in the seventh. It was only the eighth home run recorded in the spacious Rhineland premises this season. Then Malone merely staggered on his way until a pinch hit by Ed Roush ended the uncertainty in the tenth.

Douthit Starts Trouble.

Nothing of an ominous nature appeared in the tenth until after two Reds were out. Then Douthit singled to left and promptly stole second on Rollie Hemsley, who can't throw in the same class with Hartnett. The Cubs howled that Douthit had staged the burglary only by running out of line as Adair was reaching to tag him, but Beans Reardon, the umpiring milkman who rendered the decision, laughed off the complaint. Malone, was still thinking of Crabtree's homer, so walked him, and Roush then singled to center on the first pitched ball, Douthit scoring the winning tally.

Although a gentleman of no more skill than Owen Carroll, former Tiger, faced them, the Cubs confined their attack to seven hits. One of these was a profitable double by Billy Herman, who also was on base on two other occasions as the result of a pass and an error. Two others, a triple and single, were off the bat of Jim Adair, the other boy scout infielder. And the same Adair would have had another extra base hit if Roush hadn't momentarily forgotten his 39 years and reached a long drive in a fashion that would have done credit to a Cuyler. This was one of about four drives the Cubs lost through sheer fielding robbery.

Lines Up Boys in New Order.

In the interest of more hitting power Hornsby came up with something entirely new in the way of a batting order. Dan Taylor, who again has supplanted Hack Wilson, the throneless home run king, was boosted from

Sun Beau Champion of the Turf

BY FRENCH LANE.

On his fifth birthday some one must have read aloud to Sun Beau the fairy tale "King Midas of the Golden Touch," for the great race horse immediately began to emulate the good old king. He embarked on a gold rush that set astir all of turfdom.

From one end of the country to the other he traveled seeking his gold and glory. He lined up at the barrier 28 times in every sort of race and against many kinds of horses. Twelve times the thrill of victory was his.

He won a Bramble handicap at Aqueduct, a Great Western and a Gallant at Arlington. He finished first in a Peconic purse and a Ramapo handicap at Belmont and also in a Toronto Autumn Cup at Woodbine.

Wins His Second Gold Cup Race at Hawthorne.

Then he captured his second Gold Cup at Hawthorne. A few days later he won his second Washington handicap at Laurel. He wound up the whirlwind campaign by racing to victory in the $30,000 Southern Maryland handicap at Bowie.

While Sun Beau was doing all these things a 3 year old streak—an upstart known as Gallant Fox—was rushing through a series of $50,000 specials for colts of his own age which soon overthrew the old champion money earner, Zev. So Gallant Fox became America's highest money winning horse. Then Gallant Fox, even though a young fellow, went into retirement.

He had left Sun Beau some $90,000 behind and Sun Beau, as far as the ages of race horses go, was beginning to be somewhat of an old man of the turf.

But there was one avenue left through which Sun Beau could travel onward, one avenue by which he could quickly overthrow the fresh champion, Gallant Fox, and drop the crown jauntily over his own brow before old age could weaken his iron legs.

Sun Beau Goes After Mexico's Pot of Gold.

To carry out this plan of warfare Sun Beau would have to travel from New York to California, then down into Mexico and keep himself in shape to win a $100,000 race known as the Agua Caliente handicap to be run late in March. Sun Beau would be a 6 year old by that time. To hold his own in this strange far western country in the midst of the cactus and surrounded by barren hills, it would be necessary for him to remain in training many more months. He already had been drilling steadily for the better part of a year.

Sun Beau knew the hard knocks of life and even the more severe knocks of the race track by this time. And there was quite a contrast between a winter in Mexico and a winter in the valley of Virginia or even a winter on the banks of the Susquehanna in New York, where good oats and hay and plenty of rest were always on the bill of fare.

But there was that pot of gold of $100,000 in Mexico which if captured late in March would make Sun Beau the money king of the world as far as race horses go. Who wouldn't like to be the monarch of money?

Sun Beau Becomes Future Book Favorite.

So in the face of the gossips who whispered words of scandal in connection with most races run at this Mexico turf resort and who were forever discovering that something terrible had happened to the future book favorites for the $100,000 race, Sun Beau got his orders to report for duty at the Agua Caliente track in Mexico. He was to make himself ready for anything that might happen in the $100,000 Agua Caliente Handicap.

Sun Beau was never handed a more difficult assignment. Most of his buddies of the thoroughbred horse aristocracy were on vacation. It was something unheard of to ask him to win a race worth $100,000 in March, for he had always taken things easy in the winter, and also in the spring and summer time. His great races had all been run in the late summer or early fall. In spite of this, Sun Beau immediately became the shortest priced future book favorite since future book betting had been in vogue on an Agua Caliente Handicap.

Plenty of Work Brings Out Best That's in Him.

Sun Beau must have again recalled the story which had been read to him about "Old King Midas of the Golden Touch."

For he forgot the good time that might have come his way if he had been spending an idle winter at Sun Briar court. He forgot about his boy-

OUIMET SEEKS TROPHY TO PLACE WITH 1914 PRIZE

Francis Ouimet, for the sixth time in the last nine years, approaches the semi-final round of the national amateur golf tournament with hopes of repeating his victory of 17 years ago, when, as the "boy wonder golfer," he won the championship at the age of 21. Three times Ouimet has fought his way to the semi-finals only to be eliminated by the champion, Bobby Jones, when the title was almost within his grasp.

This year, with the barrier of Jones removed from his path toward the amateur crown, he is confident that he can make history repeat itself and again emerge the sole survivor after today's and tomorrow's concluding rounds at Beverly.

Stronger and Heavier.

Jones and the lack of stamina have been Ouimet's chief obstacles since he won the title way back in 1914, a year after he had captured the United States open championship in a playoff with Harry Vardon and Ted Ray. This year, however, he is in the best physical condition of his career. With 13 pounds more weight and still fresh after three comparatively easy victories in the early rounds, he expects to fight it out on even footing with Billy Howell, 19 year old Richmond, Va., boy, in the semi-finals today despite the 19 years' difference in their ages.

After failing in his first round match against young Charley Kocsis of Detroit, in the big show last year at Merion, Ouimet made up his mind then and there that he had to build up his game and store up more stamina by more golf or quit big time competition.

Starts Out Early.

Accordingly, he says, he hauled out his war clubs early this year and played more golf than he had for the last ten years. The results were surprising. Some of his greatest shots came back to him and he found that he didn't tire as quickly. As a warm-up for the national amateur, he shot eight rounds of 70 or better during August and then wound up his drill by shooting 69—70 to help Jesse Guilford beat Billy Burke and George Von Elm in a 36 hole exhibition.

He also broke the course record at Braeburn, scene of his first round defeat in 1928 by Phillips Finlay, with a great 67 just before coming up to the 1931 championship battle grounds.

Thirty-eight years old and 18 pounds heavier than a year ago, Ouimet yesterday looked like the perfect golfer. Maybe he'll tire again today but the boys who have been following him over his easy conquests at Beverly all guess no.

5,000 March Over Beverly Links in Wake of Amateurs

The quarter finals of the national amateur golf tournament drew a crowd of 5,000 to Beverly yesterday. The Westland-Yates match had the biggest gallery, nearly 3,000 following this pair. Tournament officials have made plans to handle more than 10,000 for the semi-finals today and the finals tomorrow.

Francis Ouimet, the Boston veteran, seems to get better as the tournament progresses. He shot his best golf of the tournament in his first round with Paul Jackson yesterday, carding a 74 at lunch time. On the short 12th his drive landed six inches from the pin, enabling him to hole out with a birdie deuce. He holed a 40 footer on the ninth in the afternoon for a birdie 3.

Lester Bolstad and Bill Howell played some wild golf during their morning round, the former using up 80 strokes and Howell coming in with 83. He had 44 on the last nine. The St. Paul youth took a 7 on the par 5 second when he was in the rough with his drive, dubbed his second and put his third in a trap at the right of the green. Howell equaled this when he required 7 strokes on the par 5 11th. He was trapped on both his first and second shots.

Jack Westland's putter failed him on several occasions in his morning round, the most glaring example being on the fifth where he missed a three footer to take a 6. Par on this hole is 4. They were even at the time and the miscalculation placed Jack one down to Yates.

The manner in which Maurice McCarthy disposed of Fay Coleman caused the experts to start collecting biographical data on the Brooklyn youngster. He gained first prominence in the national amateur last year when he defeated Watts Gunn, one up in 19 holes in the first round, and stopped Von Elm, one up in the second round. This all took place on one day. He lost his third round match to Jess Sweetser.

Bolstad became ill following his morning round with Howell and the match was delayed, the pair starting out after the other three matches instead of in front. Bolstad's condition was easily noticeable on the first nine of the afternoon round as he took a 44 to reach the turn two down. He was two up at the end of the first 13.

That "ole debbil eleventh hole" continued to prove a tartar to the boys, even though it was the sixth time they had attempted it during the tournament. Only four pars were registered on this 590 yard hole yesterday. Twelve 6s were carded on the other efforts. Fay Coleman got past the hole with two par 5's, while Les Bolstad and Maurice McCarthy each had one par 5.

The gallery grew a bit unruly as Westland and Yates reached the 18th green. Nearly 4,000 endeavored to get a glimpse of the boys and it required some fast work on the part of officials to keep the over zealous fans from interfering with the players.

Paul Jackson, the 21 year old youngster from Kansas City, started off in his match with Ouimet as if he meant business. They halved every hole up to the short sixth, where Jackson's drive was in a trap in front of the green and he took a four, while Ouimet was down in par 3.

Billy Howell, Richmond, Va., qualified with 153; defeated Johnny Goodman, Omaha, Neb., 2 and 1, in the first round; Owen Covey, Salt Lake City, 4 and 2, in the second round; Lester Bolstad, St. Paul, 3 and 2, in the third round.

Francis Ouimet, Boston, Mass., qualified with 152; defeated John Shields, Seattle, Wash., 4 and 3, in the first round; Frank Connelly, Mount Clemens, Mich., 5 and 4, in the second round; Paul Jackson, Kansas City, 7 and 6, in the third round.

Jack Westland, Chicago, qualified with 156; defeated Samuel M. Parks Jr., Pittsburgh, 4 and 2, in the first round; George T. Dunlap Jr., 3 and 2, in the second round; Arthur W. Yates, Rochester, N. Y., 1 up, in the third round.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Francis Ouimet of Boston, Mass., Jack Westland of Chicago, Billy Howell of Richmond, Va., and Maurice J. McCarthy Jr. of New York—the strangest quartet ever to enter the semi-finals of a national meet—are the sole survivors in the 35th annual United States amateur tournament at the Beverly Country club.

Ouimet won his quarter final match yesterday, 7 and 6, from 21 year old Paul Jackson of Kansas City, who is 17 years his junior. Today he meets Howell, who attained his 19th birthday last March and who defeated Lester Bolstad of St. Paul, former Big Ten and national public links champion, 3 and 2.

Westland Defeats Yates, 1 Up.

Westland, the first Chicago golfer to come this far in a national amateur since Chick Evans won in 1920, fought through 36 holes with Arthur [Ducky] Yates of Rochester, N. Y., who used to call signals in the Princeton backfield, before the Chicagoan won, 1 up.

McCarthy, who has been knocking on the semi-final door during the last few amateur tournaments, finally achieved his goal by eliminating Fay Coleman of Los Angeles, 6 and 5.

Thus far during the tournament no particular attention had been paid to Ouimet. The galleries figured him for a qualifier and possibly a victor in the first two rounds, but he surprised them with a solid Bostonian game of golf that has enabled him to defeat John Shields, Frank Connelly, and Jackson, each of them at least 15 years younger than himself. He probably realizes Howell's situation today, for he was only 21 years old himself when he turned back Ted Ray and Harry Vardon, a couple of his elders, to win the national open of 1914.

Howell's First Major Tourney.

Howell, who was just two years old when Ouimet became amateur champion in 1914, is playing in his first national tournament. He was an unknown quantity until his qualifying score of 153 was posted Tuesday night. The experts raised their eyebrows a bit at that, but when he was paired with Johnny Goodman in the first round they shook their heads. Billy promptly deceived them Wednesday morning by eliminating Goodman, seeded number 4 in the match play draw, and his victory over Bolstad yesterday was something of a surprise, for the former University of Minnesota star is rated an excellent match player.

FOUR SURVIVORS CARRY ON BATTLE FOR AMATEUR CROWN

A galleryite's view of the 14th green as Paul Jackson of Kansas City, Mo., was putting in the morning round of his match with Francis Ouimet. Jackson sank the putt for a four to win the hole against Ouimet's five, but Ouimet won the match with ease, 7 and 6. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

OLD MAN PAR ONLY OPPONENT HOWELL FEARS

Big Shots Aren't Perfect, Says Virginian.

The name? Billy Howell.

But the one of which he thinks the most came yesterday at Beverly with his 3 and 2 victory over Lester Bolstad. It's 1931 national amateur semi-finalist.

Billy is a southern boy. He's so southern that he lives on Confederate street in Richmond, Va., and will graduate with the class of 1932 at Washington and Lee university. His home club is Hermitage in Richmond.

Howell Started Young.

There he started his golf game, figuring it out for himself. He was 14 years old and has never taken a lesson. When he is off his game he collects every old ball in the club and seeks the solitude of the practice course to do a bit of private investigating of his erros.

Billy "reckons" every match that comes along is his toughest, but there are two that he finds most pleasant to look back on. Last year he put T. Philip Perkins out of the Old Dominion semi-finals in a match that went 21 holes. Last Wednesday he eliminated Johnny Goodman in the first round of the national amateur, 2 and 1.

He Likes Match Play.

He prefers match play to medal.

"Old man par is the hardest man to beat I know," he drawled. "Of course all these big shots I'm playing against are good but they don't play every hole perfectly."

Today he meets Francis Ouimet, one of the "big shots." Last night he sent a wire home to his father, as he has done after every round at Beverly. He will send another tonight and he wants mighty bad to have it read:

25 Sinclair Horses Sold for $81,300

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—The horses in training of Harry F. Sinclair, which have been campaigned under the name of Rancocas stable for more than a decade, were sold in the paddock here today. Before the races for a total of $81,300. Twenty-five head made up the consignment, and their disposal removes Mr. Sinclair's silks from the turf, although he still is the owner of one of the largest breeding farms in the country at Jobstown, N. J. The average per head was $3,252.

The sale, conducted by C. J. Fitzgerald, was well attended, although there was disappointment that certain of the horses did not bring higher prices. Mokatam, for example, was knocked down for $5,000 to John Sanford. This gallant stake winner is not sound, and since he is a four year old his chances of further big winnings on the turf are not great, but it was considered that Mokatam would bring a more substantial price as a breeding prospect. He is by Bud Lerner from Katrina and has won upwards of $70,000, including the last Suburban handicap, wherein he defeated Questionnaire.

Top price of the sale was $12,600, paid by Frank Seremba for Defier, a son of Bud Lerner from Delia Now Two. Mowris, by Luculiite from Adelia II., brought the third highest price of $7,700. Milo Shields was the buyer.

THALHEIMER AND HAYES TO PLAY IN EXHIBITION

Walter T. Hayes, holder of the state championship 16 times, and Louis Thalheimer, former intercollegiate champion, will meet in an exhibition tennis match tomorrow at the Indian Boundary Tennis club courts, Rockwell street and Lunt avenue.

In the preliminary matches Ernest A. Wiberg, captain of the club's team, will play against Richard Sheldon, first ranking player of the Northwestern university team. In the doubles event Thalheimer and Jack Harris, 1931 intercity doubles champions, will play Walter Hayes and Gilbert Sheldon, second ranking player at Northwestern.

trict championship a few weeks ago, is probably the steadiest match golfer in the district, and he proved it yesterday in his match with Yates, the most difficult man in the tournament to oppose. Ducky defeated his fellow medalist, Charley Seaver of Los Angeles, Wednesday, but his fine iron shots and startling recoveries from traps and rough didn't upset the slender blond from Sunset Ridge, even when Yates squared the match twice in the last four holes. If followers of Westland in this neighborhood were asked to elect a golfer to represent Chicago in the semi-finals he probably would poll a record vote.

McCarthy to Give Him Battle.

McCarthy, a sturdy young man of 24, will furnish Westland with more than enough competition in their match today, for his game has improved daily. He was four down to Russell Martin of Flossmoor in their first round match Wednesday, but he came back with a 34 to win, 1 up. In the second round he defeated R. E. Spicer Jr. of Memphis, 5 and 3.

Yesterday he shot the best round of the day, a par 71, to lead Coleman, 7 up, at the end of the morning journey. McCarthy attained fame last year in the national tournament when he played 47 holes to win his first two matches. He defeated Watts Gunn, 1 up, in 19 holes, in the morning, and in the afternoon upset George von Elm after battling 28 holes. He was eliminated by Jess Sweetser in the quarter finals.

WESTLAND-YATES MATCH

Yates and Westland started their morning round with par fours. Both were on in two, Westland from the rough. They halved the second in par five, each using two long woods and a pitch. At the third Westland went one up when Yates' tee shot found a bad lie in the rough and his second landed in a trap. Jack was just short of the green and chipped up for a par three.

On the dog leg fourth each was on with a drive and iron, but Westland three putted to even the match. Westland again took three putts on the fifth after both had driven well, caught the same trap to the left of the green and exploded out. At the short sixth Yates went two up with a perfectly played par three while Westland was in a trap to the left.

Westland Startles Gallery.

Westland picked up a hole on the seventh after each had reached the green with two woods and an iron, but Yates required three putts. They halved the eighth, where both missed 20 footers for birdies, and the ninth in par four. Both were out in 40, Yates being one up.

They halved the 10th in par threes when both hit the green from the tee. On the 11th Yates played down the rough to the left, but got a half in six when Westland missed a four footer on the green.

Westland made the gallery shout on the 12th. Both dropped irons on the green but Westland putted short. Yates laid him a perfect stymie. Westland then pitched over two feet into the cup on the fly for a half.

Westland went one up on the 13th when Yates half topped his second. Westland got his par four with a long drive, a good second and two putts. They halved the 14th in par fours but Westland won the next with a par four when Yates caught the trap to the right of the green. They halved the 16th in par four and Yates squared the match again on the short 17th when both drove the green and Westland took three putts. Westland ended the morning play one to the good with a par five on the last hole when Yates found the woods with his tee shot, played over the fairway to the rough on his second and finished with three putts.

Yates Rallies Repeatedly.

Westland increased his advantage on the first hole of the afternoon round, going two up with a four while Yates was two putting. The bulky ex-football player immediately came back on the next hole, however, while Jack missed a three foot putt and took a six. They halved the third and fourth and Ducky squared the match at the fifth, Westland's putter failing him again. He took three strokes to get down, while Yates made a fine recovery. After hooking his tee shot into the rough and driving the ball over the green with his iron, he chipped out and sank his putt for a four.

The sixth and seventh, with Yates making miraculous recoveries on the latter, were halved, but Westland regained his lead at the eighth, where Yates shoved his tee shot into the rough, sent his next into a trap and had a poor out. They halved the ninth in fours and Westland was one up at the turn again.

Rough Beats Yates.

The 10th, 11th, and 12th were divided and then the seesaw battle for the lead began. Jack went two up on the 13th, his second shot dropping six feet from the pin for a birdie three. The dogged Yates rallied again at the 14th, where Jack was in a trap and took three strokes to get on. Yates squared the match at the 15th when Westland sliced his drive to the rough at the back of the trees and was still in the rough after his second. Yates sank a ten foot putt for his par four. Westland went one up again by getting on the 16th green in two and down in two while Yates was struggling out with a five.

Yates evened matters again at the 17th when Westland found a trap at the right of the green, chipped out 15 feet past the cup and missed the putt. Yates was on in two and holed out in two. Yates was in the woods to the right on his drive to the home green, while Jack's tee shot was right down the middle of the fairway. He was on in three, about 25 feet from the pin.

Yates' second shot sailed across the fairway to the left rough and his third was the same, going over to the weeds on the right. He was 20 feet up the slope of the green from the cup and missed his attempt for a five while Westland got down in two to win the match, sinking a four footer at the finish.

McCARTHY-COLEMAN MATCH

McCarthy uncorked 35—36—71, par figures, to overwhelm Coleman, seven up, at the end of the first eighteen holes. The New York boy never gave Coleman a chance. After halving the first hole, he won the second with a birdie four and then went on to reach the turn four up. Coleman won only one hole, the 11th, which he shot in par five, while McCarthy missed a five foot putt to take a six.

Coleman trimmed McCarthy's advantage to five up when he won the second and third holes in the afternoon after they had halved the first. McCarthy was in a trap at both these holes, while Coleman was playing par golf. McCarthy placed his second shot on the par fourth just one foot from the pin, from where he holed out for a birdie three. Coleman took four.

They halved the next two and Coleman won the seventh when McCarthy found a trap on both his second and third shots. Both were down in four on the eighth. Coleman took the ninth with a birdie three when his second shot fell six feet from the pin. With a four hole advantage as he started the last nine, McCarthy won two out of the next four holes to finish the match, 6 and 5, on the 31st hole.

HOWELL-BOLSTAD MATCH

After finishing the first nine two up, Howell blew up badly on the way in and wound up two down to Bolstad at lunch time. The 18 year old Virginian required 44 strokes on the last nine, while Bolstad was finishing with a 38.

Howell started off in a good enough fashion, winning the first two holes by shooting par golf while Bolstad was in the woods on both holes. They both took four on the par three third. Bolstad sank a 12 footer for a birdie three on the fourth to cut Howell's two hole advantage. They halved the next three, but Howell won the eighth when Bolstad hooked his drive to the rough and then found a trap with his second, using up five strokes to hole out. They played the ninth in par four.

Howell went three up by winning the 10th, when Bolstad again hooked into the trees. This was the last hole which Howell was able to win on the first 18. On the long 11th he was trapped on both his first and second shots and took a seven. They halved the short 12th and then Bolstad won the next three holes in a row to go one up. They halved the 16th and 17th, but Bolstad won the 18th with a par five. Howell required an extra stroke when his second was in the rough.

Bolstad Taken Ill.

During the lunch hour Bolstad suffered an attack of indigestion which necessitated postponing the start of the match until after the other three had gotten under way. The St. Paul boy collapsed in the locker room and for a while it appeared as if he would be unable to continue.

They halved the first hole in par fours and Howell won the second with a par five when Bolstad's drive was in the rough and his brassie shot put him further back behind the trees. Both were down in three on the short third. Howell then proceeded to win the next four holes to place him three up. Balstad's tee shots failed to stay in the fairway on these holes, causing him no end of trouble.

He cut Howell's lead by one hole when he captured the eighth after Howell had sliced far into the wods. Bolstad missed a four foot putt on the ninth, but in doing so he layed Howell a dead stymie and they both took five.

Bolstad won the 10th in par three. Howell put his drive into the woods on the left and required a four. They halved the next three holes, but Howell came back strong to take the 14th and 15th to go three up. The match ended on the next hole, which they halved in four.

OUIMET-JACKSON MATCH

The Ouimet-Jackson match gave immediate promise of being a battle as interesting as the Kansas City youth's victory over Wright Wednesday, for they halved the first five holes.

Ouimet, however, got down to business on the sixth, when he drove 25 feet from the pin for a three while Jackson was finding a trap in front of the green and taking a four. Ouimet then proceeded to win the next three holes to go four up at the turn.

They halved the 10th and 11th, but Ouimet took a birdie at the water hole by dropping his tee shot five inches short of the pin. He was then five up. They divided the 13th in par fours and Jackson won his only hole of the morning at the 14th, where Ouimet two putted, missing an easy four footer for a half.

He took it back at the 15th, however, going five up again when Jackson took two putts to get down after chipping to within 15 feet from just off the green. Jackson holed a 35 foot putt at the 17th, but a half was the best he could get, and Ouimet went six up on the home green, when Jackson overdrove the pin by 50 feet from a trap into which he had fallen on his third shot.

Gallery Backs Jackson.

The gallery attracted to the Ouimet-Jackson match cheered Paul when he cut Ouimet's lead down to five up on the first hole of the afternoon match. Both their second shots were in the right trap. Ouimet's pitch landed about ten yards from the pin, while Jackson's went 15 feet past. The latter holed out for a par 4, while Ouimet's putt circled the rim of the cup and rolled out.

The former champion had no intention of relinquishing his advantage, however, taking a five on the second while Jackson two putted a six. Paul drew another big hand at the third, when he went five down again. His drive was in a trap, and his explosion shot was rather feeble, leaving the ball 50 feet from the pin. He then proceeded to hole it out for a par three while Ouimet was missing his six footer.

They halved the next three holes, but Ouimet went six up again at the seventh, where Paul required three putts. He lost the eighth also, when he pushed his pitch from the side of a trap, 12 feet past the pin, with Ouimet only four feet off the hole.

Ouimet elicited a rousing round of applause at the ninth and went eight up when he holed out a 50 foot pitch from the edge of the green for a birdie three. Jackson regained a hole at the short 10th, which Francis two putted after taking two to get on. A stymie produced a halved hole on the 11th green. Each took three to get on, with Ouimet putting from the edge of the green. His ball stymied Jackson's, and the Kansas City boy's efforts to hop it failed, so they called it a half in sixes. The match ended on the 12th, which both reached with tee shots and two putted.

24 CHAMPIONS OF BRIDGE WILL PLAY FOR TITLE

New York, Sept. 3.—[Special.]—Twenty-four of the leading bridge players of the United States will meet this week in the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. Hal Sims at Deal, N. J., for a three-day tournament to be known henceforth as the individual masters' contest. It will be a "cutthroat" competition, each player having every other participant as his partner and opponent during the contest.

Only players who have won a national championship in either on open or a men's national tournament of the American Bridge league or the American Whist league are eligible to participate. Only forty players in the nation are so qualified, of whom twenty-eight already have entered. The last four entrants have been listed as substitutes.

The tournament is the suggestion of Mrs. Sims, one of the foremost players in the country. Willard S. Karn has offered a gold trophy, to be held by the winner for a year. A smaller cup will be awarded to the second best player. One interesting feature of the contest, it is expected, will be two experts, each with a different playing system, sitting as partners.

The tournament will begin on Saturday and will continue until Monday. The entrants, who come from various cities, include:

TIGERS GROWL; 4 SOX ROOKIES DO FADEOUT, 9-3

third. It might throw some light on things, however, to say that four Sox pitchers issued nine passes, which is several too many for young men who are hoping to do their eating in the major leagues.

If it were just a matter of losing one ball game there wouldn't be any occasion to worry about what the four pitching young men did or didn't do yesterday. But there is a rumor that all four of these boys are going to be toted down to Texas to the Sox training camp next spring and this will be quite a trial to the sensative observers who will be earning a living looking at the Sox at that time.

So what do you say to the idea that we don't write any more today about Donie's four bushers and pass right on to an item or two apart from yesterday's disappointment?

Faber to Pitch Charity Game.

The Tigers, who now are in sixth place, two games ahead of the Sox, will join with the Chicagoans this afternoon in entertaining the ladies—the last ladies' day on the south side this year. And Manager Bush has announced that Ted Lyons, in past seasons a prime favorite with the gal fans, will make his first start since July 27. Ted reports that his arm, which has hurt him all season, has returned to normalcy.

Mr. Bush made another announcement. Red Faber is his present nominee to pitch in the big charity game next Wednesday afternoon. Vic Frasier, Donie's original choice, is sick in bed with a cold, and while he is expected to recover in time for service before the Cubs-Sox spectacle the Sox manager shifted to Faber and will give the old boy plenty of rest before the big show.

fifth place to the lead off position. Herman was promoted from seventh to second. Adair was dropped down to the spot vacated by Herman. The cleanup rôle was tendered to English, who has been able to dodge the slump which has embarrassed most of his mates for the past couple of weeks.

The new batting combination declared a dividend right in the first inning. D. Taylor opened the show with a single to left and to prove he was not kidding he stole second. Herman walked and, along with Taylor, was advanced on Cuyler's bunt. English sent a hard drive to right center and it bore all the earmarks of a hit until Douthit speared it with his gloved hand. Taylor scored and Herman went to third after the catch. The incident closed with Barton's grounder to Cuccinello.

Herman was overcome by the charity idea in the second and it caused Malone considerable concern for a few moments. Cuccinello opened with a single through short. Beck bounced to Herman, who scooped up the ball and reached out to tag Cuccinella for the first part of a double play. The ball dropped from his hand, so nobody was retired. Malone then disposed of Durocher on a popup, fanned Sukeforth and the threat was ended when Carroll filed to Taylor.

Herman Spears Liner.

Herman made a great leap to get his glove around a high line drive turned loose by Crabtree in the third and, in view of what followed, it was well for Malone that he did. Roush was next and the old fellow chopped a low liner into left center for two bases. He carried home the tying run on Hendrick's single to center.

From the time Adair slapped a triple to left and was left stranded in the second, the Cubs didn't make a threatening gesture of any kind until after two were out in the fifth. Then they scored one more run. Taylor spanked a single to center. Herman almost tore a hand off Beck with a scorching grounder down the third base line. Taylor scored on it and Herman went as far as second. Carroll showed respect for Cuyler by walking him, whereupon English fouled out to close the inning.

After being scored on in the third, Malone bore down with such vigor that the Reds didn't make much use of their bats. Nobody hit in the fourth; in the fifth Douthit beat out a bunt, and the sixth was quiet except for a couple of passes, one of which was intentional. The seventh started like another good inning for Malone. He fanned Douthit. Then Crabtree uncorked his tying homer, the ball sailing well over the right field bleacher netting, some 375 feet distant.

Pat Dodges Disaster in Ninth.

Malone was on the spot again in the ninth and for a spell his chances were down to about a zero state. That fellow Crabtree opened the inning with a single to right. Roush bunted in front of the plate. Hemsley, who had taken over the catching after a pinch runner had been used for Hartnett in the Cub ninth, fumbled the ball. Hendrick also bunted, but Malone picked up this one and shot it to English to force Crabtree at third. Hendrick was forced on Cuccinello's bounder to English. Lucas batted for Beck, but Malone passed him and Durocher then hoisted to Barton.

What! Again?

U. S. WILL STUDY ILLINOIS' DUCK SEASON PROTEST

Emmerson Hears Report of Committee.

Investigators from the department of agriculture will visit Illinois at once to determine if the duck hunting season should be changed to November or December, it was reported to Gov. Emmerson yesterday by the committee he had appointed to protest the October hunting season assigned by the government.

The committee of three, meeting at the Stevens hotel with Gov. Emmerson had just returned from Washington, where their protest was heard by Secretary of Agriculture Hyde. They maintain that ducks migrating through Illinois do not reach Illinois in large numbers until November or later.

See Further Unemployment.

Ralph P. Bradford, state director of the department of conservation, at head of the committee. The other members are W. R. James, president of the west park board, and O. H. Hassel.

Among the arguments advanced by the committee was that the 100 hunting clubs throughout the state, employing thousands of persons, will see little activity unless the season is changed from October to November, when there are enough birds to attract hunters.

State Loses Revenue.

It also was pointed out that the state will lose revenue from hunting licenses. Last year the state issued 344,000 permits, but this number will decrease unless the hunters are allowed to go afield when the game is plentiful, the committee said.

Illinois was allotted the month of October following President Hoover's proclamation, issued at the request of sportsmen and conservationists to protect the diminishing supply of waterfowl. The scarcity of ducks was attributed to the drought in their breeding grounds in Canada and the United States.

Talking it Over

BY ARCH WARD.

For want of something better to do, Jim McMillen, who was an All-American football player at Illinois when that still was considered a distinction, turned professional rassler a few years ago. Mr. McMillen is one of those mat workmen who is said to have "caught the public's fancy," and there is no telling how far he will go.

JIM M'MILLEN.

At the moment McMillen is preparing for a title match with Jim Londos, world champion of the Curley group, at Soldiers' field Monday night, under the auspices of the Chicago Federation of Labor. Whether he is far enough along in the technique of the game to throw a veteran like Londos we are not prepared to say, but he appears to have the necessary equipment.

Since leaving Illinois, where he ran interference for Red Grange, McMillen has acquired two beautifully cauliflowered ears and the muscles stand out in his back and biceps. He also has some of the fiercest grimaces in the wrestling repertoire.

Furthermore, he has picked up quite a few frogbacks.

As a business McMillen finds that wrestling pays much better than professional football or collegiate coaching. He spent two years on the mat without making any money, charging it off to experience. He kept the wolf away with his earnings from the Chicago Bears. Thereafter he began to be an attraction and his purses mounted proportionately. He estimates that his net profits for 1931 will be something in excess of $50,000. Considering the depression, that's not bad money for a young man of 28 only five years away from the campus.

"Some of the old time matches were terrible to behold. They usually brought together two fat men out of condition who were compelled to flop on the floor at frequent intervals to catch their breath. There wasn't enough action. Then, too, there were fake matches that eventually drove away the customers in large numbers.

"It's different now. In most places the sport is under the supervision of state commissions. The athletes are trained to go an hour or two at top speed. Sure, they clown a bit, because the fans want it. But if you notice closely you will observe that Londos and some of the other great showmen are never out of position when they pull off their antics. They play what we call safe. In other words, they never leave themselves open for a surprise attack. As long as the patrons continue to storm the gates the wrestlers will put on their flying tackles, airplane spins or what do you like?"

THE MASTRO CASE.

If you are among those who wonder why there aren't more attractive boxing matches you may be interested in the case of Earl Mastro, Chicago's contender for the featherweight championship. Mastro was out of competition for nine months following an operation. Then he reestablished himself in the front ranks of the 126 pounders by successive victories over Ward Sparks, Midget Mike O'Dowd, Vidal Gregorio and Kid Francis.

Mastro wants a match for the title with Champion Battalino. The latter will accept the bout provided:

1. That Mastro's manager post a $20,000 forfeit.

2. That Mastro agree to a return match within 30 days if he wins.

3. That the rematch be held in Hartford, Conn., home town of Battalino.

All of which means that Battalino will receive the big share of the purse in a Chicago title match whether he wins or loses. That is fair enough. But if he loses he demands a chance to regain his crown before Mastro has opportunity to make any money out of the title. A return match in Hartford would hardly net Mastro as much as Battalino would receive for defending his title in Chicago.

A GREAT IDEA.

"Permit me to suggest that as an added attraction at the Cubs-White Sox charity game Bob Fothergill race Hack Wilson, the winner to race jovial Edward Burns."

SNUBBING SOUTH SIDE.

J. H. Jensen, a steady patron of the Chicago Cardinals last season, is going to look for new entertainment this fall because he feels his favorite team has snubbed the south side. His letter:

"I read with surprise that this coming season all home games of the Chicago Cardinals will be played at Wrigley field, which leaves the south side out in the cold as far as professional football is concerned. The writer and four of his friends saw every home game of the Cardinals on the south side last season, but for reasons peculiar to true south siders we have made up our minds that if the Cardinals' games must be played on the north side, they will have to rely on the north side for trade. I wonder how many other fans feel the same way about the snubbing."

In the WAKE of the NEWS

POTPOURRI.

GREEK letter fraternities of the University of Chicago are sending urgent letters—more urgent than usual—to their alumni, asking that names of probable matriculants be forwarded at once for rushing purposes. There are two reasons. One is that "deferred rushing" goes into effect in the fall of 1932. The other is the opening of new university residence halls whose comforts may appeal to some students more than fraternity houses.

Under the "deferred rushing" plan, students may not be pledged or initiated until after a year of residence. Thus fraternities this fall must secure a two-year supply of pledges. Estimates are that 400 men will be numbered among the incoming freshman class of about 750. According to our informant, there are 29 fraternities. Eliminate those who do not wish to join a fraternity for financial or other reasons, then figure it out for yourself. What a scramble there will be for desirable freshmen.

With the field for the national amateur golf title whittled down to four, take a look and see how the so-called old guard have fallen by the wayside. We have asked those who should know about such things whether there was anything about Beverly course, or about the moot new ball, to cause such a result. They answer in the negative. So then it must be just the advent of new blood and the uncertainties of the qualifying round and subsequent rounds of match play, the first two at 18 holes. Incidentally there is no Bobby Jones to "stand out" over the field.

There has been a serious defalcation at a Chicago bank. Strangely enough it is not ascribed to "race track betting"—the usual excuse which has grown wearisome to sports followers. It always has been our contention that race tracks were the butt of many evils not originating there. We do not claim—and have so advised—that money can be made following the ponies. On the other hand, it can be lost much faster in other forms of speculation or dissipation.

Who severed our pains and held Life's

Yet, after all, children are we,

Only today have we broken away and

Claimed her battle, our fight,
Used her blood, then dragged her body

Denounced her need, and fooled our-

That the mask we wear will cover an

CALL OFF A. A. U. TRACK MEET FOR LACK OF ENTRIES

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 3.—(AP)—Insufficient number of entries to warrant the holding of the annual outdoor track and field meet of the Indiana-Kentucky A. A. U. here next Monday caused its cancellation today.

Paul Jordan, Indianapolis, president of the organization, said an indoor meet would replace the Labor day games, and will be held next February, probably in Indianapolis. A six mile cross-country run, scheduled as a part of Monday's proposed program, will be run from the Butler university field on Thanksgiving day.

In his letter to Sanford, Hopping wrote he was resigning in the best interests of the team.

FROST WAKENS PIKE, BUT PUTS BIRDS IN RETREAT

North Country Takes On Autumn Hue.

BY BOB BECKER.

Three Lakes, Wis., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—A very unwelcome visitor camped on the tent sites of the fishermen up here a few days ago because old Jack Frost sneaked in with an ice box in one hand and a paint brush in the other. This autumn visitation has left an imprint on the lake country which is going to make September a beautiful month for fishermen, campers and other vacationists.

Already you can look into the timber and see touches of flaming orange and red where Jack Frost spilled some of his paint. These warm tints which indicate that balmy Indian summer days are here, fairly glow against the dark green of the pines and spruces and give a hint of the rich colors that soon will be spread over the northland.

Wall-eyed Pike Bite.

When the cool weather struck the north country it certainly did wake up the wall-eyed pike. Here on Town Line lake the wall-eyes snapped out of their inactivity, moved from their deep water bars and got real neighborly by coming right up to the dock here on the northeast side of the lake.

There was no need to get into a boat and cast for the pike. One of the fishermen stood on the end of the dock at sundown while a strong wind was ruffling the surface of the water, cast for several minutes and landed seven good sized fish. While he was picking up this string another angler was taking five just a few yards away.

The wall-eyes came in with the wind and the cool weather and were ready to do business. From now on is the fishing time of the year, for warm days and cool nights make the fish active.

Birds Routed by Frost.

Although Jack Frost has left some gorgeous colors behind him, his brief visit took a lot of bird life from the country. There are many beautiful Indian summer days ahead this month, but the birds are not going to take any chances.

We were up at sunrise this morning to take a check on the bird residents and found it pretty quiet. Even our gay old friend the woodpecker that always could be counted on for a broadcast from his favorite cave trough sounding board was absent.

BACKGAMMON IS HOME FIRST TO WIN AMSTERDAM

Favorites Find Trouble in Saratoga Mud.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—The Sagamore stable's Backgammon, well ridden by the apprentice jockey Willie Nertney, who first became well known to turf followers last spring, was the winner of the Amsterdam claiming stakes here today. Nertney's vigorous finish got Backgammon home a nose before Black Mammy, which was the 10 to 1 outsider in a four horse race.

Quarter Deck Is Third.

Heavy rain during the night and early morning left the racing strip deep and muddy for the races. Morton L. Schwartz's Quarter Deck, the 8 to 5 favorite, finished four lengths back of Black Mammy and a length before the Wheatley stable's Impish, which also was well backed.

All four starters were lightly weighted, Quarter Deck carrying 106 pounds, Impish 104 and Backgammon and Black Mammy 103 each. There was support for three of the starters before the running, but little or no attention was paid to Black Mammy.

Bad Day for Favorites.

The day was a bad one for favorites, the first five going down in a row and only the Brandy Wine stable's Pencader, 4 to 5 in the night cap, breaking the sequence. Pencader won galloping by five lengths from Merry Fox with Bubble Up third.

Three odds-on choice went down to defeat. One, Pencader, won, and in the other two races the favorites, which had opened at odds-on, went up slightly, but were defeated nevertheless.

A MUDDERS' DAY AS CAMP PRINCE TAKES OLD ELM

BY FRENCH LANE.

Several good ones tried to take his measure in the Old Elm Country Club purse at Lincoln Fields yesterday. But they didn't, for when the mud splattering contest ended Camp Prince was sailing along in front by four lengths.

Martha Jones, the proud filly with the weak heart, finished second, a length ahead of Port Harlem, another mare whose heart is none too strong when it comes to winning races by a furious drive in the stretch.

Bobby Jones Rides Him.

Bobby Jones, one of the most accomplished riders to appear in Chicago this year, piloted Camp Prince to his victory. It didn't require much expert riding, for Camp Prince was always close to Martha Jones in the early stages and he moved on past her midway down the stretch as if Martha might have been standing still.

He went on to win pulling away from his rivals. He ran the seven furlongs in 1:28 4-5, time that was remarkable considering the difficult condition of the track. During the plunge on Calf Roper the folks at the track sort of forgot Camp Prince and in the betting he paid $8.84 to win.

Most of these sprinters were warming up for the $5,000 added Crete handicap, which is to feature Saturday's racing card. But it wasn't a true indication of what is going to happen in the Crete, as most of the leading candidates did not take part.

Cold Check Wins Geneva.

Some very fashionable 2 year olds met in the Geneva purse at six furlongs. And the winner by some four lengths was Cold Check, owned by Banker Parrish of Midway, Ky.

The son of Hightime found the heavy going just to his liking. He played with the favorite, Blackstrap, in the early stages and let Blackstrap make the pace. But at the head of the stretch Cold Check, which had 120 pounds up, started to run, and it took him only a few strides to race up on even terms with Blackstrap. Then in a few more strides he was in front and was going away from there until the finish.

Blackstrap was a well beaten horse by this time, but, clinging to the rail, he saved enough ground to be second, holding Cee Tee safe.

Guide Right Likes Mud, Too.

Cold Check was ridden by the veteran Jimmy Smith and in the mutuels paid $7.48. He ran his six furlongs in 1:16, but could have done much better had there been any reason to run any faster.

The Crystal Lake claiming purse at a mile brought a band of top flight platers into action and all of them were noted heavy track performers.

But there was one old campaigner in this engagement that mixes mud with his breakfast food. He fairly loves it. His name is Guide Right and he finished out the battle the winner by three lengths. Tiger Prince was second, but was no match for Guide Right in this kind of going. The Southern ran third.

Traveling by easy stages through the Carolinas, Louisiana, and Texas, he reached lower California and when unloaded at Agua Caliente, after sleeping most of the way, he danced and reared out of his express car—a mischievous gleam in his eye—as if he would you like to say, "Well, you can plainly see there are no prohibition laws down here."

Like all Americans, who believe in plenty of personal liberty, he possibly celebrated the free and easy liquor and gambling code for a few days, but it wasn't long before he became the hardest working race horse in Mexico.

Now, at the age of 6, it was evident that Sun Beau had lost his desire to loaf. He did everything anybody in authority in the Kilmer barn asked him to do. He ran fast and he ran far. He startled every admirer who had ever bet as much as $2 on him when he won a race at 6 furlongs in track scorching time. Then he won at other distances and in the meantime thousands of dollars were rolling into the future book to be bet on him to win the $100,000 race.

Easterners, folks from around the great lakes and along the Mississippi valley, from unheard of points in the far west, the far north, and from deep in the south were backing Sun Beau. The price against him to win the famous winter feature went down and down.

There is no way of telling how much Sun Beau would win that it was willing to lose from $250,000 to $500,000 at short odds if he should be beaten, settled back to receive the returns.

For Sun Beau in his training moves had indicated he was ready to run the race of his life.

Excitement ran high throughout America and Mexico. What an opportunity for the tongue wagging scandal mongers if Sun Beau should be beaten. What a turf scandal would result. How easy it would be to drag name after name through the mire.

Then along came the day of the $100,000 race.

Stage Is All Set for a Possible Scandal.

Coupled with their innuendos came a rumor that Sun Beau's trainer, W. A. Crawford, sometimes a horse doctor and sometimes a horse conditioner and sometimes merely a man in bad repute with the New York Jockey club, had not been beating the races since he came to Caliente. Neither had Coltiletti, Sun Beau's favorite jockey, who had come west to ride his old companion in the race which was to make him a world's money winning champion or possibly leave him in disgrace. Both the trainer and the jockey were aware that their share of Sun Beau's spoils would be the customary 10 per cent. They were also aware that the future book operators would lose not less than $250,000 should Sun Beau triumph.

The day of the $100,000 race drew near. A public, so satisfied that Sun Beau would win that it was willing to lose from $250,000 to $500,000 at short odds if he should be beaten, settled back to receive the returns.

For Sun Beau in his training moves had indicated he was ready to run the race of his life.

MORGAN DROPS POINT IN BIG SIX BATTING RACE

The four games played on yesterday's curtailed major league program failed to disturb the standing of the Big Six, only two of the leaders seeing action. Eddie Morgan of Cleveland, third in the standing, lost a point when he hit once in four trips, but still was ahead of Lou Gehrig, his closest American league rival. Jim Bottomley of St. Louis fell into a tie with Chuck Klein of the Phillies for third place in the National when he hit only once in four attempts.

TAX PENALTIES BRING DECLINE IN NEW BONDS

August Issues Are Lowest Since '26.

BY O. A. MATHER.

When times are flush and real estate is booming in price and rentals, nobody thinks or cares much about taxes. It takes the pinch of periods of depression to make Americans realize that extravagance in public expenditure, no matter if the cause be laudable, carries a penalty in continuing payments that becomes onerous.

That the American people is beginning to realize these facts is indicated by recent sharp curtailment in the voting of bond issues. State and municipal financing last month totaled $75,160,885, the smallest August total for any year since 1926, according to the Daily Bond Buyer. On the other hand, the total for the first eight months of this year, at $1,016,520,945, was the largest figure for the first eight months of any year since 1924.

Quietest in Ten Years.

August was the dullest month in ten years in both the stock and bond markets, according to the monthly review of Lawrence Stern & Co., investment bankers. Glit-edged bonds and well secured short-term paper alone were the stable elements in a declining bond market. Both bond and stock offerings were extremely meager and distribution practically at a standstill.

The total of new offerings for the month reached a ten-year low in bonds with $125,056,385. Stock offerings amounted to $17,378,622—a combined total of $142,465,007. These low totals, however, do not entirely reflect the volume of business transacted by security houses, as there is a very considerable volume of secondary distribution now being effected.

MORE CREDIT IS USED

More credit was used both for speculation and commercial purposes in the last week, according to weekly reports issued by the federal reserve board yesterday. Brokers' loans expanded $17,000,000 to a total of $1,-[illegible],000,000, which is still $1,744,000,000 below the total of $3,110,000,000 registered a year ago. The New York banks increased their own loans by $33,000,000, but interior banks and non-banking lenders withdrew $3,000,000 each.

The federal reserve system threw additional credit into the money market. The member banks increased their borrowings by $15,567,000 to a total of $257,285,000 and the reserve banks purchased an additional $17,-250,000 of bankers' acceptances. Total reserves declined $24,841,000 and the ratio of reserves to liabilities eased to 79.4 per cent, compared with 79.9 per cent a week ago.

Rediscount Rate Unchanged.

The New York Reserve bank made no change in its 1½ per cent rediscount rate. Member bank borrowings expanded $4,396,000 to $52,762,000. The reserve bank bought an additonal $1,148,000 of bankers' acceptances, but sold $3,007,000 of government securities. Reserves receded $13,815,000 and the reserve ratio rose to 81.7 per cent, compared with 81 per cent last week.

The Chicago reserve bank reported an increase of $6,717,000 in member bank borrowings, which now stand at $32,388,000. The bank bought $3,-612,000 of acceptances and $1,005,000 of government obligations. Reserves increased $6,849,000, but the reserve ratio sagged to 86.1 per cent, compared with 87.3 per cent last week.

MAIL ORDER SALES

Perhaps some additional reason for the failure of merger discussions between officials of Sears, Roebuck & Co. and Montgomery Ward & Co. appeared yesterday in the monthly report of the latter concern. Sales of Montgomery Ward last month totaled $16,497,426, compared with $20,966,-219 in August, 1930, a decline of $4,-468,793, or 21.75 per cent. This was next to the sharpest comparative recession to occur thus far this year, being exceeded only by the 26 per cent decline shown in May.

Sales for the first eight months of this year totaled $139,519,267, compared with $169,820,545, a decline of $30,301,278, or 17.84 per cent. It should be said, however, that a large part of this decline in dollar sales has resulted from lower commodity prices and, therefore, the actual volume of business is not so much smaller than a year ago.

Canadian Harvest Now Nearing Completion

The Canadian government telegraphic crop summary says Manitoba received substantial rains during the last week, which have delayed harvesting. The rain, however, was urgently needed to improve pasture and feed situation. Approximately 90 per cent of the wheat is cut. In Saskatchewan, approximately 70 per cent of the wheat is now cut and is well advanced in Alberta. In central and northern areas of Alberta, where crops are heavy, further rains before harvesting is completed may cause damage.

"In France most of the crops are harvested," says Broomhall. Reports of wheat in southern regions of Sweden are confirmed, and it is expected that import requirements will be 20 to 30 per cent larger than last year. Wheat supplies in Spain will be sufficient for this season's requirements.

$20,000,000 Chase Bank Loan to Cuba Is Renewed

A $20,000,000 loan by the Chase National bank of New York to Cuba has been renewed for sixty days, it is announced. It is secured by a $40,000,000 issue of public works 5½ per cent bonds due in 1945 and held by the Cuban treasury.

Branch Lines and Circuitous Routes Hinder Rail Profits

BY SCRUTATOR.

Two ways in harmony with THE TRIBUNE'S consolidation plan, published last Sunday, by which the roads can effect important economies in operation, have been suggested. These are the elimination of nonpaying branches and putting an end to the uneconomic practice of shipping freight over circuitous routes to ultimate destinations when direct routes are available.

The interstate commerce commission has the power to alleviate both evils. It can lop off parasite branches and it can compel shipments by simple direct routes. In the case of worthless branches it has already demonstrated what can be done. Here is an example:

The Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation company and the Oregon Short Line Railroad company, as lessee, operated a branch about twenty-five miles, running from Robinette, Ore., to Homestead. The line run through a deep gorge, and because of frequent cloudbursts was expensive to maintain. In the eight year period, 1922 to 1929, the net operating deficit totaled $356,227.

Mining Firm Opposition.

In the hearing on the abandonment of the line the principal opposition came from a copper mining company, that asserted loss of the branch would make its property practically worthless. The commission in its finding stated that the properties of the mining company had been sufficiently developed to indicate the possibility of profitable operation, but the eventual mineral development was a matter beyond the scope of accurate or certain forecast, and consequently the ultimate development of a substantial amount of ore tonnage was by no means assured.

"Although existing conditions cannot be regarded as affording a fair basis of judgment for the future," the report said, "it is not established on this record that the burden of accumulating operating losses ought to be laid indefinitely upon interstate commerce until the mining issue is determined."

Has Privilege of Buying Line.

The commission in its ruling gave the railroad the right to abandon operation of the branch practically immediately after the conditions imposed were accepted, with complete abandonment in three years. In the meantime the copper company was given the privilege of buying the line within three years from the date of the agreement at a price equivalent to its salvage value. Thus if the company found in the future that it would be profitable to use the line it could do so without having it in the meantime a burden on the main railroad.

It is pointed out that many branches of railroads are but parasites, operating at losses which seriously reduce the operating profits of the parent lines. These losses have to be paid by some one, and it is all of us, as ultimate consumers, who must dig up the cash to meet them. Decisions like the foregoing should stimulate the roads to go after similar abandonments.

Gives Example of Waste.

An example will suffice here to demonstrate the huge waste that must arise through the handling of freight over circuitous routes. Take the case of a certain company located in the Niagara district, near Buffalo. It purchased the product of a firm whose factory was located in Cleveland on a certain railroad. In moving to its destination the product was dispatched over the original line for a good part of the way to Detroit. Before reaching Detroit it was transferred to a second line, and at Detroit it was transferred to a third line—a Canadian one—and dispatched around Lake Erie to its goal. The obvious way would have been to have shipped directly east from Cleveland to Buffalo.

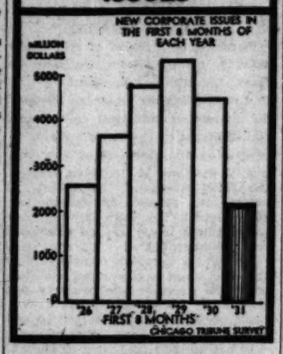
The purpose in shipping by the roundabout way was to enable the original railroad to get as much mileage as possible. The cost to the shipper was the same either by the direct or the roundabout way. But the additional actual cost in shipping over the long route in comparison with the short one may well be imagined. Any one knows the inconvenience to passengers in making several transfers in traveling to a destination. Then consider freight which must be moved physically in its various transfers.

Sees Rate Unfairness.

The unfairness of uniform rates for all routes between two points is easily demonstrated. If the rate arrived at is an average for the mileage on all routes then shippers using short routes must be paying excessive charges. And in the case of the long, circuitous hauls the roads must not be getting enough to pay operating costs.

The interstate commerce commission has told the railroads through its tariff circular that it will in the future require published routes for all freight movements. The regulatory body should go a step further and see that the railroads publish only simple, direct routes, utilizing as few lines as possible. In the long run this would even matters up, for each road would get that business which properly belongs to it.

THE MARKET THIS YEAR HAS BEEN OFFERED FEW NEW SECURITY ISSUES



GERMAN SECURITIES PRICES DROP 25 PCT. AS MARKET REOPENS

BERLIN, Sept. 3.—(AP)—The German securities market, which has been closed since July 11, reopened today and ran headlong into a maelstrom of selling orders which beat prices down approximately 25 per cent and brought a shrinkage of unestimated millions of marks in stock values.

So great was the avalanche of sales orders and so scanty the purchasers that the governing committee of the exchange stepped in and declared sales offers would be allotted on the basis of ten per cent of individual offerings. Weakness in Berlin was reflected on other exchanges throughout Germany. Commodities felt the pressure less than securities.

The flood of selling came, brokers said, for domestic accounts and the amount sold for foreign accounts was virtually negligible. Brokers pointed out that many persons were selling securities to realize cash despite the facilities opened by government agencies for granting collateral loans.

Such stock leaders among the industrials as A. E. G., I. G. Farben and Ilse showed losses ranging from 20 to 30 points compared with the July 11 closing.

Brokers estimated that several million marks in Farben stock were offered, necessitating the Farben bank stepping in and pegging the price, which dropped to 93 from 123. Ilse Mining company dropped from 142 to 115 and A. E. G. tumbled to 59 from 83¾ under the weight of 400,000 offerings. Bank stocks similarly were down, Reichsbank dropping to 102 from 125¼. Deutsche bank was off 29 at 72.

Meets with Success in Air Cooling Pullman Cars

Experiments with air conditioned cars having for their goal the making of train travel as comfortable, regardless of whether the outside temperature is 110 or zero, as the most modern air conditioned offices are reported by the Pullman company as meeting with sufficient success as to justify forecasts of their eventual widespread use.

These experiments have been in progress for several years and they have included tests with a number of systems, including mechanical refrigeration, ice as the cooling agent and a water spray device. Recently, study was started on a system using a steam jet.

Demonstrate Results.

In air cooled Pullman	83
Outside temperature	102
In air cooled Pullman	83
Outside temperature	111
In air cooled Pullman	84
Outside temperature	113
In air cooled Pullman	76
Outside temperature	100

The Pullman company explains that in air conditioning systems the atmospheric pressure within the car is slightly higher than outside in contrast with the old method of keeping air in motion through exhaust ventilators which resulted in the atmospheric pressure inside the car being slightly lower than out of doors. The fact that the atmospheric pressure within the car is higher than outside means that dust and dirt ordinarily sucked in through cracks and crannies are prevented from entering.

"The traveler in air conditioned cars experiences not only more comfortable temperatures, but clean fresh air which has been filtered of dust and dirt, so that it becomes invigorating rather than oppressive," says the Pullman company.

Unit on Each Car.

In taking up the subject of air conditioning the Pullman company had several problems to solve before progress could be made. One of the first ideas was the location of a conditioning plant in the baggage car operated by steam from the locomotive. But this would mean the addition of pipe lines carrying brine to all the cars, adding to the already considerable impedimenta of three hose connections, safety chains, pin lifters, etc.

Finally it was determined that the best practical method would be to install a cooling unit on each car. In the case of electrical refrigerating for cooling a difficulty arose because there was no axle generator large enough to furnish the required current. After much study the upshot was the development of a special sleeve which permits clamping a drive gear to the axle capable of operating a more powerful generator. Otherwise, special axles would have been required, adding to high inventory costs through maintenance of supplies of the special axles at various points.

Describe System.

Then the next step was to find a satisfactory electric refrigerating plant since none suitable at that time was on the market. This problem was met and the sleeping car Jacksonville was put in service with a full fledged electrical cooling system in operation for experiments in the south.

Here is a brief description of the system. Air from the outside is drawn in through an intake under the roof of the vestibule. This passes through a collector for removing dirt and then through a filter. Then a fan forces the clean air over cooling coils after which it passes into the car from ducts located in the roof. Brine tanks and a refrigerating machine are located under the floor of the car.

Runs Air Cooled Train.

Already the Baltimore and Ohio is running the Columbian, a train of air cooled cars, between New York and Washington, while the Santa Fé and the Missouri, Kansas and Texas are operating air cooled diners in the southwest. An experiment with an air-conditioned car in which the cooling is obtained from ice is now in progress in the middle west.

The next problem is to work out a way to pay for the air conditioning improvement since the process adds to the cost of train operation. The Pullman company and the railroads are endeavoring to solve this. In the meantime the Pullman company states that it is likely a number of trains having air conditioned cars will be in operation next summer.

INCOME SHRINKS.

The report yesterday of the Pullman company, carrier subsidiary of Pullman, Inc., for July showed gross earnings of $5,412,552, compared with $6,485,070 in the same month last year, while net earnings totaled $589,673 and $502,074, respectively. Gross earnings for the first seven months of 1931 amounted to $37,994,666 and net income $1,422,232, compared with $45,521,234 and $3,133,113 last year.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 3.—Speculative Wall street kept to itself today. Weakness in prices on the Berlin Stock exchange, the passing of Case Threshing Machine's dividend, Montgomery Ward's disappointing sales report for August, fresh troubles in South America and a general allgone feeling over the backwardness of the anticipated fall trade recovery all combined to make the average trader wonder if the game was worth while on its present basis.

The community advertised its blues in the most active selling movement the stock exchange has experienced in weeks. Sales exceeded 2,000,000 shares for the first time since the middle of July and price declines of from 1 to 5 points were widely registered. But for short covering operations bulking to sizable proportions, the break might have been really severe.

The covering—by bears unwilling to change their obligations against a possible long anticipated rebound—acted as a "cushion" in some directions and helped to keep the downward sweep within bounds. Indeed it became so pronounced for a while in the afternoon as to dam the tide and restore earlier losses in many sections of the list. During the last hours the support disappeared afiew, however, and gong time prices for the most part were around the lows of the day.

Rails Sold Freely.

Railroad shares were again freely sold, the unfavorable showing of these groups being emphasized by sharp declines in a number of inactive issues dumped on the market by nervous holders, such as Texas and Pacific common, which sold at 55, a drop of 32½ points, and Central of New Jersey, down 22 points on a single transaction. The relentless decline in the carrier stocks has been impressive enough if watched on the basis of daily fluctuations. But the real picture of the slump in that part of the list is rendered the more amazing on a long range basis.

It must be remembered that carrier stocks had already experienced a most emphatic decline before the turn into the current year. Yet a comparison of today's low levels reached by twenty leading issues with their 1931 highs reveals losses ranging to as much as 60 per cent of their open market value.

In the majority of instances these leading railroad stocks show a contraction of about 50 per cent in their

AUBURN, CORD SHIPMENTS SHOW BIG INCREASE

Shipments of Auburn and Cord cars for August totaled 1,803, as compared with 609 for August, 1930, and 2,507 in July of this year, R. H. Faulkner, president of the Auburn Automobile company, announces.

R. H. FAULKNER.

This brings the total number of cars shipped by Auburn for the first eight months of the calendar year to 32,045. The company's total shipments for the twelve months of 1930 were 13,693. September orders now on hand indicate that shipments this month will be considerably increased over August, Faulkner said.

Diamond T August Sales Again Reported in Gain

August sales of the Diamond T Motor Car company were 20 per cent ahead of the same month last year. This was announced yesterday by E. J. Bush, vice president in charge of sales.

NEW YORK CURB STOCKS DECLINE IN HEAVY TRADE

New York, Sept. 3.—(AP)—The curb market encountered further and heavier selling pressure today, although only a handful of shares sold off more than a point or so. The day's turnover of 320,000 shares was the largest since July 15.

National Shore Term Securities was again sold in large volume, dipping to 2⅞ and closing at 3¼, off 2¾ points. The stock crashed 17 points to a low prices of 3½ yesterday, then rallied to 6.

Oils were heavy in spots, despite further increases in gasoline prices in various parts of the country. Gulf lost 4½ points, and Humble declined 2. Cities Service sagged fractionally, but Indiana held steadily.

In the utilities, American Gas and Electric lost 4 points, but Electric Bond and Share lost less than a point. Middle West sagged a point, and United Light "A" declined fractionally. Commonwealth Edison dropped 10½ points to a new low for the year at 187, in a few transactions.

In the industrials, Aluminum company lost 5, then regained 3. Mead Johnson declined 4 to a new low. Deere lost one point. A few issues rallied. Parker Rust rebounded more than a point, and Segal Lock was fractionally higher.

Prepare for First Wheat Cargo from Hudson Bay

CHURCHILL, Man., Sept. 3.—(AP)—Canada's farthest north grain elevator went into action today here on the rocky shores of Hudson bay. Twenty-four cars of No. 1 northern wheat, destined to be transported overseas in a two-boat test of the route, reached here yesterday. Forty or fifty cars are en route from The Pas, 500 miles southwest, hauled by special locomotives brought north for the grain service on the Hudson Bay railway. It is expected all the test grain, some 600,000 bushels, will be in the Churchill elevator by Sept. 12, when the first of the two tramp steamers is expected.

6 Months' Net of Chicago Railways Totals $171,078

Net income of the Chicago Railways company for the six months ended July 31, 1931, after joint account expenses, corporate expenses and interest adjustments with Chicago Surface lines, and after all bond interest and income tax thereon, totaled $171,078, against $217,510 for the same period last year, receivers for the company reported today.

CONFERENCE ON SILVER CALLED IN PARIS SEPT. 17

Washington, D. C., Sept. 3.—(AP)—Prolonged agitation for an international conference to study the problem of depressed silver prices will culminate in a meeting of unofficial experts from interested nations at Paris Sept. 17.

The conference has been called by and will be held under the auspices of the international chamber of commerce in accordance with a resolution adopted at its meeting here last May.

A small group of experts from Great Britain, France, India, China, Japan, and the United States will take part, under plans announced today by the American section of the international chamber.

Any recommendations which the conference may make will be considered by the council of the international chamber which will meet in Paris Oct. 23. Silas Strawn, president of the American chamber, will attend the council meeting.

The depressed price of silver, less than half what it was a few months ago, has been frequently cited by economists as one of the chief causes of the world economic depression.

The senate committee which investigated the subject, and speakers before the international chamber, pointed out that with silver at such low prices the purchasing power of silver using countries, such as China, was more than cut in half.

McKeesport Tin Plate Votes Regular Dividend

New York, Sept. 3.—(AP)—McKeesport Tin Plate company today declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1 a share, payable Oct. 1 to stockholders of record Sept. 15, but took no action on the matter of continuing the extra payments which had been in force since the early part of last year.

McKeesport disbursed a total of $5.50 a share in 1930, paying three extras of 50 cents each in addition to the regular annual dividends totaling $4 a share. Thus far this year similar extras had been paid Jan. 2, April 1, and July 1.

R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company has declared the regular quarterly dividends of 75 cents each on the common and common "B" stocks, payable Oct. 1 to stockholders of record Sept. 18.

TRADERS TURN THUMBS DOWN ON STOCKS HERE

Entire Chicago List Sells at Lower Levels.

The trading fraternity on the Chicago stock exchange yesterday anticipated the Labor day holiday, which begins tomorrow, by making a "Roman holiday" out of the market. They turned thumbs down on practically every stock on the list, with the result that declines ran from fractions to more than 8 points. Moreover, the volume jumped to 110,000 shares, which showed a willingness to offer stocks to any one who would buy them.

U. S. Radio & Television again bore the brunt of attack and dropped 2¾ points further on a turnover exceeding 12,000 shares. And bear traders found the going so easy that they pounced on Commonwealth Edison and knocked it down 8¼ points on the unusual turnover of 2,700 shares. Public Service of Northern Illinois, another aristocrat, was taken for a ride to the extent of 5 points. Insull Utilities Investment lost a point.

Standard of Indiana-Bendix Deal.

Most of the other leaders stood up better and only fractional losses were incurred by Borg-Warner, Continental Chicago, Cord Corporation, Cities Services, Corporation Securities, Grigsby-Grunow, Middle West Utilities, Libby-McNeill, Central & Southwest Utilities, and Swift International. Great Lakes Aircraft and Q. R. S. De Vry managed to finish unchanged.

Two issues stood out because of strong support afforded them. Bendix Aviation eased a bare fraction on a turnover exceeding 17,000 shares. It was announced that Bendix and the Standard Oil Company of Indiana have joined to form the Lubrication Corporation to manufacture and market grease fittings for all makes of automotive and industrial machinery, grease dispensing equipment, automotive lubricants, and lubrication service. Appliances have been perfected in the Bendix laboratories and will be manufactured in the South Bend, Ind., plant. Standard of Indiana also has been developing special greases. The new corporation has an authorized capital of $200,000 and will be owned jointly by Bendix and Standard of Indiana.

Another Strong Spot.

The other outstanding strong spot was Associated Telephone Utilities, whose sponsors massed buying orders in near the close of the market and changed a decline into a net gain of a point. Some of the less active issues sustained losses running up to more than 3 points, in this class being A. M. Castle, American Public Service preferred, Art Metal, Kalamazoo Stove, Merchants & Manufacturers, McWilliams Dredging, Noblitt-Sparks, and U. S. Gypsum.

Directors of the American Furniture Mart Building corporation voted to omit the quarterly dividend of $1.75 due on Oct. 1 on the cumulative preferred stock. This action was taken, it was stated, in order to "insure a substantial cash surplus regardless of the duration of the current depression." The American Radio & Television Stores corporation is planning to acquire a mail order radio business.

KEITH-DUNHAM COMPANY BUYS FACTORY SITE

Explosive Firm to Build Acetylene Plant.

BY AL CHASE.

Purchase of a parcel of real estate, 408x160, by the Keith Dunham Co. from the Dolese & Shepherd Co., in Lyons township yesterday disclosed an interesting industrial development contemplated by the buyer. The property is on the east side of East avenue, in the town of Hodgkins, between the Joliet road and 67th street. It adjoins the present site of the one story plant of the Keith Dunham company, where liquid oxygen explosives are manufactured.

The Keith Dunham company plans the erection of a good sized one story acetylene plant on the property just purchased; the product to be used in oxo-acetylene welding. It will be east of the present factory. The company now has an industrial tract of approximately 2½ acres. The county records show that the Keith Dunham company paid $9,000 for the property just secured.

Invented During the War.

Liquid oxygen is a comparatively new explosive, having been invented in Germany during the war when that nation was lacking in nitrates. According to experts it is about the same as dynamite so far as power and safety are concerned.

The Dolese & Shepherd company is one of the largest crushed stone dealers in the world. It owns 435 acres in the vicinity of Hodgkins, in Lyons township, where its extensive quarries are located. The property it sold yesterday was not quarry land.

George A. Chapman has placed in trust, with the Continental-Illinois Bank & Trust Co., two of his properties. The 24x110 parcel at 60 East South Water street, improved with a four story building, and under lease for ninety-nine years to Murray Wolbach, is one. The other is the southeast corner of La Salle and Grand, also improved with a four story building, under lease to the La Salle and Grand Building corporation for a ninety-nine year term.

Commercial Leasing Active.

Commercial leasing in the vicinity of 79th and Ashland is more active than it has been for some time according to J. L. Geary, manager of the West Highland office of McKey & Poague. He reports that the Prudential Life Insurance company has taken 3,000 square feet in the Highland Theater building, at 7859 South Ashland avenue for a term of five years. The Consumers company has leased the double store at 1445-49 West 79th street for five years at an undisclosed rental.

Two $125,000 loans have been negotiated in the refinancing of south side properties by the Provident Mutual Life Insurance company. Both are for ten years at 5% per cent interest. One is to the Kendall Building corporation, on the three story forty-two flat building at 5034-46 Woodlawn avenue. The other is to the Canterbury Building corporation, on the forty-two apartments at 5020-32 Woodlawn avenue. Both were negotiated by the Chicago Bank of Commerce, representative of the risk concern, Ringer, Wilhartz & Hirsch were attorneys.

Estimated receipts at Chicago today: Cattle, 1,500; hogs, 15,000; sheep, 16,000.

A liberal movement of lightweight hogs is reported at all leading markets again and discounts for hogs weighing 200 lbs and lighter were sharp on yesterday's session. Losses of 10@25c were general and some of the poorest underweights were off more. About 30 per cent of the hog receipts yesterday consisted of stock weighing under 200 lbs.

The extreme top, paid for medium and weighty butchers, was off 10c at $8.75, while the general average price also showed a decline of 10c at $8.45. Some in the trade attribute the increased movement of the "new" crop of spring pigs to persistent reports of cholera in Iowa, the principal hog producing state. According to Dr. C. N. McIlroye, expert on the disease, who is in charge of the experiment station of the federal bureau of animal industry at Ames, Ia., the outbreak of hog cholera is rapidly assuming the proportions of an epidemic and is the most threatening since the serious outbreak of 1926.

More December Hogs Sell.

Medium weight hogs for delivery at Chicago next December were sold on the futures market at $5.25, while September contracts for lightweights for the first half of the month were sold at $6.80. Heavy grades were offered for delivery during the first half of the present month at $6.90 and for the last half at $6.75, while bids for the first half were made at $6.60.

On yesterday's market, for the first time since the middle of last May, heavy steers outsold all other weights of cattle. Light steers and yearlings have been bringing the top prices for the last three months and about two months ago were selling $1.00@2.00 above weighty beeves. The trend in the cattle market, as in hogs, has been in favor of weighty kinds during the last few days, but yesterday was the first time that heavy cattle actually brought a higher price than yearlings.

A string of 70 head from Carroll county, Ill., topped the list at $10.10. The best yearlings available went at $9.45. Cattle exceeding 1,200 lbs in weight met fair demand at firm prices, but lighter weights were weak to 25c lower. Butcher stock showed the week's 25c decline. Calves met better demand and scored a 25c advance.

Eastern Orders' Smaller.

Although a few of the best selections showed strength yesterday, demand for lambs was not so urgent, and weakness was noted in the market for medium kinds soon after the start. The sluggish condition of the market for fresh lambs at eastern distributing centers has curtailed shipping demand and, according to the local trade, outlet here is not broad enough to cope with increased supplies. Inferior grades are becoming a drug on the market. However, choice fat strong weight lambs are scarce and in demand.

RALLY FOLLOWS EARLY LOWS IN WHEAT MARKET

Values Exhibit Slight Gains at Close.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Wheat values continue to sink gradually lower, all deliveries selling at a new low for the season on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday.

The September delivery touched 44¾c on the break, the only comparison for which was the figure of 44c paid for the cash article in September, 1852.

At the inside, however, prices were only ⅛@¾c under the finish of the previous day and toward the last there was scattered commission house and local buying which more than wiped out the decline, final trades being ⅛@¼c higher, September closing at 45¾@45⅞c; December, 48⅛c, and May, 53⅛c.

The closing rally in wheat was in the face of the weakness in the stock market in New York and of a slow foreign demand for cash grain. In addition to the uneasiness occasioned by the European economic and financial situation there is fear of congress enacting further legislation this winter. As many in the trade see it, the efforts of the government, both here and abroad, is one of the main factors responsible for the lack of demand for either cash wheat or futures, as political expediency rather than anything else seems to be the dominating factor in the legislation.

Governments Restrict Trading.

The theory that government regulations of various kinds restrict operations in the grain markets is not a new idea. In a statement submitted to the stamp commission which earlier in the year conducted an investigation of whether regulations would be beneficial for the Canadian trade or not, D. L. Smith, manager of the Canadian wheat pool's European office, stated in part: "It has naturally reduced speculation to a minimum, there being no incentive for a foreign miller to speculate in outside wheats when he realizes his government might at any time put on further restrictions."

Those in close touch with conditions feel that Mr. Smith's statement explains to a great extent the continued slow foreign demand for North American wheat, especially for forward shipment, although financial conditions have considerable influence. Export sales in all positions yesterday were finally estimated at 200,000 to 300,000 bu. Winnipeg closed ¼@⅛c lower with Chicago at 52½c, while Liverpool was ⅝@⅞d lower with October, 53⅝c.

Further rains were reported in Europe during the day but they had little or no effect on the local wheat market, although there were damage claims from numerous countries abroad. Nat C. Murray was out with a summary of the world's situation in which he estimated that the total available supply was probably around 160,000,000 bu less than the previous season, while consumption would probably be larger.

Cash Corn in Demand.

The best demand for cash corn in a number of weeks developed yesterday with local handlers reporting 430,000 bu sold for shipment and charters were made for 250,000 bu to an eastern port. Warehouse receipts for 600,000 bu were reported canceled for shipment, resulting in a belief that local stocks would show a fair reduction in the visible supply statement to be issued next Tuesday.

Commission houses were persistent buyers of December corn yesterday and while the market had a small dip early the September developed congestion later on buying which the trade was inclined to attribute to a local professional and it advanced 1⅝c from the early low, and closed ⅝c higher at 43⅝ to 44c, while the deferred deliveries were ⅝@¾c higher, December closing at 39c, and May, 43⅝c. There was some spreading under way between wheat and corn during the day, and also between the various deliveries.

Drought Area Demand.

The northwest has started to draw cash corn away from Chicago and No. 2 yellow at Minneapolis was quoted at 1@1⅛c over the local market, the demand from the drought stricken area in the Dakotas being a factor.

Deliveries of 451,000 bu oats on September contracts led to scattered liquidation in the nearby delivery, but houses with northwestern connections bought the September and sold the May and the finish was ⅛c lower to ¼c higher with September showing the decline, finishing at 21⅜c, while December was 23¼c, and May, 25⅝c. Action of wheat was again the main influence in the rye market with the close unchanged to ⅛c lower. September finished at 33⅛c; December, 36⅛c, and May, 40⅝c. Minneapolis September was ⅝c over Chicago at the last.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—(AP)—Cotton goods were very quiet today, buyers awaiting a crop report due Tuesday. Burlaps were steady and in light demand. Rayon sales for August were the best reported for that month in some time. Dress goods of woolen stock were in better call, and dress manufacturers were busy. There were heavy imports of silk in August and continued good deliveries to mills. Silk fabrics were in demand for prompt delivery.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

The Chicago Board of Trade will be closed on Saturday and on Labor day, Monday. Minneapolis, Duluth, and Winnipeg grain exchanges will be open on Saturday and closed on Monday. Liverpool will be open on both days.

Grain men believe that most of the trading today will be in the way of evening up for the triple holiday, and that the pit element will not care to keep trades open until Tuesday, as Winnipeg, Minneapolis, and Duluth will be open on Saturday. There is more disposition to work on the buying side of the market, as about everything bearish is known and traders agree there is little profit on the short side, while the accidents all are in favor of the holder.

Steady absorption of December corn by traders and commission houses is attracting attention, while traders are disposed to let September corn alone. Sales of cash corn this week aggregate over 800,000 bu, with charters to ship out about 1,000,000 bu. Since Aug. 1 cash sales have been 2,500,000 bu, or about one-third of the estimated holdings by the bull interests. The country is selling corn on bulges. December corn around 39c is gaining friends, but for the time being there is said to be no aggressive buying.

"It is not improbable that sooner or later a good part of the old stocks of wheat in North America will find their way to the far east," said a Rotterdam letter to the Norris Grain company. This, of course, would do away with one of the weakest elements dominating the actual situation. Exportable quantities of wheat from east European countries are not very large. In the long run the inclement harvest weather in west and central Europe also is bound to have effect. It is already certain that large parts of the wheat in the United Kingdom have become unfit for human consumption.

Murray, the Clement Curtis crop statistician. The government report in August gave these states 1,352,000,000 bu as compared with 1,390,000,000 bu by the Murray report in August and 879,000,000 bu harvested last year. The average is 1,291,000,000 bu.

In the western states, extending to the Pacific coast, production estimate is only 40,000,000 bu, compared with 42,000,000 bu in August, as given by the government, and 50,000,000 bu by the Murray report a month ago, while the final was practically 6,000,000 bu, compared with an average of 42,000,000 bu. Total for the country is 2,756,867,000 bu, compared with 2,775,000,000 bu by the government in August.

FEED GRAIN CROPS

Total production of feed grains, corn, oats, barley, and sorghums, promises about 105,000,000 tons, against 92,000,000 tons a year ago, says the department of agriculture. There is ample feed in the country as a whole, although with some scarcity in parts of west and northwest. As regards main cash crops, wheat, cotton, tobacco and potatoes, the chief concern seems to be over probable size of the surplus for sale.

IOWA CORN CROP ONE-THIRD MADE

"The largest average rainfall of the season occurred Aug. 27 to 31," says the Iowa weekly crop report. "Corn continued to ripen prematurely and about one-third of acriage would not now be injured by a moderate frost, but a large part of this acreage has shriveled up and there are many carless stalks. In the north central district corn will average less than half of a normal crop."

"Corn is developing satisfactorily in the northwestern counties, but in the southern two-thirds of the state and in the north central counties dry weather has caused further deterioration of the crop," according to the Kansas weekly crop report. "Cutting has begun over most of the southern half of the state. The bulk of corn that survived the summer's heat and drought will be safe from frost by about Sept. 15 to 20. Sowing of wheat has begun in the extreme western counties."

H. C. Donovan says corn from Lincoln, Neb., to Kearney shows severe damage, with scarcely an ordinary sized ear in many fields. Much is already cut for shock and silo, which is less than half the usual feeding bulk per acre. Threshing of wheat is at a standstill.
